MR. EXHIBITOR

Paramount Pictures

That's what he's looking for—

THE wise exhibitor doesn't think about pictures just for today, tomorrow, and next week. He looks ahead to the coming months. To next year. He's got to be assured of a continuous supply of superfine box-office material over a long period of time if he expects to keep up with the procession in these days of strenuous competition.

That's why a prominent exhibitor, having read Paramount's announcement of 11 big specials (one a week) for the first three months of 1923-24, having seen "Hollywood," "Bluebeard's 8th Wife," "The Cheat" and several others of the 11 and assured himself that they are exactly as promised, pointed to the remaining 9 months of 1923-24 and said:

"That's what I'm interested in. What kind of Paramount Pictures are going to follow these 11 big winners?"

Paramount answered this veteran showman in all honesty and sincerity:

The next announcement of Paramount Pictures—temporarily withheld for exhibitors' protection—will offer 19 great money-making specials bigger and better in every way than the first 11. They will be, we truly believe, the finest group of pictures ever released by Paramount or any other company in the whole history of the industry. They are emphatically worth waiting for.

Jersey Meeting

Many Exchangemen on Hand—Cohen and Brandt Shake Hands—The Business Transacted

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Lake Hopatcong, N. J.—There were almost as many exchangemen on hand as exhibitors at the annual meeting of the M. P. T. O., of New Jersey, which closed its session here Thursday night. But the lack of numbers did not check enthusiasm. The meeting was well handled, and the closing night Marcus Loew brought a party of stars including Zena Keefe, Raymond Hitchcock and a dozen or so more, to enliven the event.

At the business session the following officers were elected: President, R. S. Woodhull, Dover; First Vice-president, W. C. Hunt, of Wildwood; Second Vice-president, Peter Adams, of Paterson; Treasurer, Louis Ballinger, of West Hoboken; Secretary, H. P. Nelson, of Elizabeth; National Committeeman, David Hennessy, Newark.

Fabians Import "The Chase"

The Fabians have purchased North and South American rights to "The Chase" a picture in which the various skii champions of Europe appear. The picture which was made at St. Moritz, Switzerland goes into the Capitol this week. Distribution has not been set.

Eastman To Build In France

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Paris—The Eastman Kodak Company will erect a factory at Sevran, near here which will require 5 years to build at an estimated cost of $1,500,000. The company, to be known as the French Kodak Corp. will manufacture film stock and photographic paper.

Pathe Wins

Appellate Division Decides Against M. P. Commission on Incidents in "Good Riddance," a Comedy

The Appellate Division has sustained Pathe and decided against the Motion Picture Commission in the case of "Good Riddance," a Hal Roach comedy to which the Commission took exception on the ground that certain episodes violated the censorship law.

Summer Closing

The real problem of the business. Is it wise? Should it be done? Is that the answer to the usual summer slump? Or can something be done to offset the usual condition?

It all depends where you sit as to how you see it. There are a lot of exhibitors who feel that the answer to the red hot summer weather is to close their doors. But there is another army of exhibitors who say that this isn't the answer. Some of the smarter men of this group insist that going to see pictures is, on the part of the public, a habit; that they come regularly when they can see good pictures, and once they drop off and lose the habit that it will take a lot to rebuild them into the habit. And these men say that the answer is that distributors and producers give them the right kind of pictures to show during the summer—the bigger and better ones, to make sure that the public will come in, as usual. Then they say—"try and get 'em." And they are right. It is practically impossible for average big pictures to be secured for summer months showing. They just cannot be had. This, of course, does not apply to New York, or even Chicago where special pre-views are occasionally tried out—as for instance this summer.

Here is a real problem. One that a decent understanding between a national exhibitor organization of the right kind and the Hays office might well discuss, and try to work out intelligently. It means, in the aggregate, hundreds of thousands of dollars. It is worth working on.

THE 40 WEEK OVERHEAD

One of the largest circuits in this country has solved, to an extent, the summer season problem. They figure the year as of 40 weeks instead of 52, and pro rate their expenditures on a 40 week basis rather than a 52 week basis. Then, if the weather becomes too hot and their houses go into "the red" in the summer they are closed. This basis of figuring has made it possible for the circuit indicated to work out their problem. In this the overhead does not include the advertising, because if any house remains open over 40 weeks the additional advertising must be taken care of. Certain other trifling expenditures are also not included on this 40 week overhead basis. But generally speaking, film rental, and other large charges are all included. And those operating this circuit say this has solved their problem to a marked degree.

BRAVE!

Mike Levee has stepped out of his character again. He has invited Czar Boris III of Bulgaria to become technical director of United Studios.

Sounds Zoolaky.

LOOKING UPWARD

Mike O'Toole talking. Smart fellow. The big boss of the Comerford circuit of Pennsylvania. Incidentally one of Sydney Cohen's advisors. Probably the chief advisor. But that's neither here nor there. O'Toole was talking about exhibitors not looking upward. Rather, keeping their heads down—when they see things going wrong. And made this cogent expression: "There isn't a house in America that is not paying, but that can be made

Change Releases

Allen Failure in Canada Causes Goldwyn and Hodkinson to Make Other Arrangements There

Following the appointment of an interim receiver for the Famous Players Film Service, Ltd., in Toronto, Goldwyn and Hodkinson have made other arrangements for the distribution of their product in the Dominion.

Goldwyn, it is understood, has placed its pictures in the Regal Films exchange system on a temporary basis. Hodkinson, for some days has had in effect an arrangement with the Canadian Educational Films, Ltd. whereby that organization will handle its physical distribution in Eastern Canada. Educational thus secures the pictures which Famous Players Film Service, Ltd.—an Allen enterprise—was originally scheduled to handle.

The fact that Goldwyn will sell through Regal, even if it is only temporary may have special significance. Goldwyn and N. L. Nathanson have been dickering on Canadian distribution for some time. The deal may be closed in a few weeks.

Constance Binney With Burr

Constance Binney has been signed by C. C. Burr to star in a series of four features. Associated Exhibitors, Inc., will distribute.

Graf Leaves for Coast

Max Graf left for the coast Friday to start work on "Half-A-Dollar-Boll." He denies that he has signed Lucy Fox who will return to the stage, but admits she may work in Graf Prod in the fall.

WATCHING LITTLE DETAILS

YOU exhibitors are showmen, all of you. You watch the little details that make or mar the success of your program. If you were running a "legitimate" house you'd keep a careful eye on the painting of scenery, the technical effects, and the choice of costumes. You would realize that these things are nearly as important as the production itself.

AS motion picture exhibitors, your production comes ready made. You can't supervise the details. But you can insist that you get a production properly presented photographically. You have a right to expect a first class print, one that shows all the producer has put into the picture. A poor print of a good picture is an injustice to the producer, to you, and to your patrons.

SOME of the foremost producers of the West have learned that the best results are obtained, when the laboratory developing the negative also makes the release prints; when all this is done under the direct supervision of the men who created the picture. These producers are profiting by the camera-to-screen service of STANDARD FILM LABORATORIES. The exhibitors showing their pictures are profiting by the superiority of STANDARD PRINTS. The name, STANDARD PRINTS, is the exhibitor's guarantee of satisfaction.

Reviews of the Newest Features

Mrs. Wallace Reid in "Human Wreckage"

Film Booking Offices

As a Whole..... A VERY VIVID PROTEST AGAINST DRUGS AND UNDOUBTEDLY A VALUABLE BOX OFFICE PICTURE ALTHOUGH TO SOME WILL PROVE SLIGHTLY MORBID FOR ENTERTAINMENT.

Star... Seems very sincere in her portrayal and secures full sympathy for her work.

Cast ..... James Kirkwood does splendidly in role that might easily have been overdone; Bessie Love offers excellent emotional bit; others include George Hackathorne, Claire McDowell and Robert McKim.

Type of Story... Drama intended as propaganda to present to the public the dangers of drug forming habits with Mrs. Reid's presence lending considerable force through her fight to save the late Wallace Reid, story deals with fight of wife to save her husband, a district attorney, from a drug and her eventual success.

Box Office Angle... On account of the widespread notoriety given the death of Wallace Reid and the ensuing fight against narcotics by the Pacific Coast authorities, it is more than likely that this expose will have an excellent drawing power; besides its association with the late popular screen star, the more or less sensational trend of "Human Wreckage" will also interest many.

Exploitation..... Exhibitors should boost the picture for its value as propaganda against narcotics. It would be much better to go after business from this standpoint than to play it up as a sensational affair to attract the morbidly curious. Of course there will be those of this type that will want to see it for the ghastly human wrecks that it shows, but your appeal should be based on its danger pointing angle, if you would carry out the picture's intent.

Mrs. Wallace Reid's appearance is essentially one of your biggest talking points. Let them know that Mrs. Reid has made the picture to show the evils of the thing that caused her husband's death, in the hope that its warning will be a means of saving others.

Direction by..... John Griffith Wray has provided very vivid picture, secured splendid sympathy and gets message over rather forcibly; double exposure of hyena, symbolical of drug evil, slightly overdone.

Author ..... C. Gardner Sullivan
Scenario..... C. Gardner Sullivan
Cameraman ..... Henry Sharp
Photography ..... Very good
Locale ..... Any city
Length ..... 7,000 feet

Emil Jannings in "Peter the Great"

Producer: Hamilton Theatrical Corp.
Distributor: Paramount

As a Whole..... ANOTHER STRIKING PHOTOPLAY FROM THE GERMAN STUDIOS; SUPERBLY ACTED AND AN ABSORBING HISTORICAL THEME.

Star..... Almost incomparable in his dramatic ability; always compelling and convincing in his portrayal and forceful without overacting.

Cast..... Includes several very capable foreign players whose performances are well worth seeing, especially Dagny Servaes, Bernhard Goetzke and Walter Janssen.

Type of Story..... Deals with the reign of Peter the Great through the period preceding his death through remorse for having killed his own son; a historical pageant exceptionally well performed, carefully directed and thoroughly worth while from an entertainment viewpoint.

Box Office Angle..... Decidedly best suited to an appreciative clientele that is capable of understanding the excellent acting and dramatic values; probably would fail to arouse lower grade of picture patrons.

Exploitation..... On "Peter the Great" you might interest any local Russian society or organization in staging a pageant to help exploit the picture. Whether or not you should incur the expense that putting this one over properly would incur, depends entirely upon its suitability to your particular clientele. If you think they would appreciate the really worth while achievement which Dimitri Buchowetzki, the director who was also responsible for "All For a Woman" and "Othello", has accomplished, it should be well worth your while getting them in.

Use Emil Jannings' name prominently and recall his appearance in the pictures mentioned above as well as in "Passion", "One Arabian Night" and "Deception".

Refer to the historical value of the theme and let them know that it deals with that great historic character of which the title tells. Have your ushers attired in Russian costumes and stage a prologue "Revue Russe" as the Rivoli did which included vocal numbers and a dance number with appropriate music and settings.

Direction by..... Dimitri Buchowetzki; very fine in every sense; injects splendid dramatic values and presentation is excellent; handles players capably; continuity occasionally choppy but the picture has been cut considerably which is probably the reason.

Author..... Sada Cowen
Scenario..... Sada Cowen
Cameraman..... Not credited
Photography..... Usually very good.
Locale..... Russia.
Length..... 6,042 feet.

"The Fog"

Producer: Max Graf
Distributor: Metro

As a Whole..... RATHER GOOD MATERIAL AND A FIRST RATE CAST BUT POOR CONTINUITY AND DIRECTION KEEP IT FROM BECOMING MORE THAN AVERAGE ENTERTAINMENT.

Players..... Cast contains some popular favorites and capable performers such as Cullen Landis, Ralph Lewis and Louise Dresser, all of whom do very good work; Mildred Harris pleasing but not pretty enough for the numerous closeups they give her; others Louise Fazenda, Marjorie Prevost, Ann May, Ethel Wales, David Butler, Frank Currier, and Edward Phillips.

Type of Story..... Drama of small town ethics greatly exaggerated and quite episodic; far too long and embracing over abundance of complications that stretch it to tedious length; small town poet-hero goes through a lifetime of hardships with the eventual happy ending with the girl he loves.

Box office Angle..... If this was cut, and thus sustain the interest in better fashion, there will be a possibility of satisfying patrons with it. They will hardly be pleased with the picture as it is. It cannot hold them for the nearly seven reels that it offers.

Exploitation..... Should the picture be cut and you think it will be favorably received you can use the names of the players prominently, especially Cullen Landis, Mildred Harris, Ralph Lewis and probably Louise Fazenda.

The story contains elements of appeal, that with proper editing, can be brought out to better advantage. There is a triple romance for you to talk about and the adventures of the small town hero whose life is one continual battle against his straight-laced, narrow-minded father. You can make promises for Cullen Landis' work as the hero.

Program readers, lobby display and liberal use of posters will be about the most extensive exploitation you can supply since there is little in the way of unusual stunts.

Play up the title in the form of a teaser campaign. Distribute throw-aways reading: "Weather forecast for: (use date of showing) Fog threatened."

Direction by..... Paul Powell; average; at times not in the best judgment; could have shortened sequences to advantage in many instances and made story less drawn-out.

Author..... William Dudley Pelley
Scenario..... H. H. Van Loan
Cameraman..... John Arnold
Photography..... Good
Locale..... A small town
Length ..... 6,737 feet

"The Spoilers"

As a Whole.. A SMASHING FINE CLIMAX—SHOULD BE CUT—A REAL "BOX-OFFICE."

Players.... A great list of names that make up a well balanced and capable cast; Milton Sills splendid; Anna Q. Nilsson excellent in her part; everyone thoroughly satisfying, those prominent are Barbara Bedford, Robert Edeson, Ford Sterling, Wallace MacDonald, Ned Beery and Robert McKim.

Type of Story... Rex Beach's popular Yukon novel; a virile story of life in the North during the gold rush days; contains immediate audience appeal and has excellent action sequences; body of crooked politicians jump pioneers' claim to mine but are foiled through plan of girl in love with one of the miners' owners.

Box Office Angle.... Picture cannot be made to offer good bet to exhibitors through reediting and cutting; is far too long and involved to hold them; a whale of a fight in the finish that is the real high light of the picture.

Exploitation... If Goldwyn will get busy on this one and fix it up the way it should be, "The Spoilers" will be well worth your consideration. Rex Beach's story is well enough known and probably one of his most popular novels, and Lambert Hillyer has visualized it splendidly, especially as far as bringing to life Beach's characters is concerned. There are flaws in his direction that cutting will really overcome.

The very vital point for you to talk about is the action and this. You have the blowing up of the mine with some mighty realistic shots of the explosion. One in which a lid can be seen hurtling straight into the air is surely the real thing and another showing the debris falling about the marauders is another fine shot.

You have two real big fights to talk about. The one between Cullen Landis and Wallace MacDonald, and the other between Beery and Sills that is a sure-enough knock-out.

A street exploitation stunt might consist of having as many men as you might require, dressed in the clothes of miners, go about distributing small bags supposedly containing gold dust with as many free admissions as you care to conceal in the bags.

Direction by... Lambert Hillyer provides first rate production, handles players very well and gets overaction sequences first rate; has cut far too much footage through excessive detail.

Author ..... Rex Beach
Scenario.. Fred Myton, Elliott Clawson, Hope Loring
Cameramen... John S. Stumar and Dwight Warren
Photography ..... Very good
Locale ..... Yukon district
Length ..... 8,028 feet

Our Opinion

MORAL OF THE PICTURE—Beware of Unconscious Force Within Which Sometimes Impels Human Beings to Strange Actions.
Footage—3,000 ft.
Distributor—W. W. Hodkinson

High Mark in Screencraft Attained by Thomas Dixon in Production of Thoughtful and Sensational Elements

One of the most remarkable screen productions that has been made is "The Mark of the Beast," written and directed by Thomas Dixon, author of "The Clansman," on which "The Birth of a Nation" was based. Mr. Dixon's effort in combined motion picture authorship and direction is clearly the result of much intelligent thought on the subject, and it is to be hoped that this is only the forerunner of more pictures of the same calibre from the same source. In writing and filming "The Soul of the Beast" the author's idea was to appeal to the intelligence through the emotions. This he has succeeded in doing in a way that means money for the exhibitor, for while he has made a production that is high brow in an art sense, at the same time it is sensational enough to please the most fastidious melodramatic taste. In it he delves into the mysteries of psycho analysis with the purpose of drawing attention to the mastery of human actions by an unseen force not clearly understood by those under its influence. The story is definitely outlined, and it is noticeable that no superficial scenes have been included in the telling of it. The manner in which the girl, Ann Page, mistakes for love the strange fascination which a man who reminds her of her father, holds for her, and awakens to her terrible mistake on the night of her marriage day, when she discovers that she has married both a beast and a thief, is forcefully presented. The side lights on the life of the criminal's mother, who, not knowing he is her son, stabs him to obtain money with which to aid her search for her long-lost child, are remarkably pictured. Helen Ware as the mother, Jane Hunter, gives a performance excelled only by that of Emily Fitzroy in "Driven." The method used in the making of "The Mark of the Beast" is much the same as that used in "Driven," although the production under question is a more certain box office asset than "Driven," and has therefore a more definite purpose than the former. This production contains a very marked degree of realism, and author-director Dixon is to be congratulated on his choice of players, which are, as will be seen, few in number, in putting across his interesting story, or study in life, as it may be termed. Gustave Von Seyffertitz is remarkably proficient in his portrayal of John Hunter, Madelyn Clare is an excellent and intelligent type for the role of the scientist, Dr. David Hale, and Warner Richmond reaches an astonishing degree of dramatic intelligence in his portrayal of Donald Duncan, the "beast" of the picture. This picture may be used as a special by billing it as something new and sensational in moving picture production. The musical setting for this feature is especially effective.

STORY OF THE PLAY

Ann Page, betrothed to Dr. David Hale, a scientist, who has been making a study of the subconscious mind, is strangely attracted to Donald Duncan, a man who has been found wounded outside the door of her apartment, and who, unknown to her, is a thief and guided by the instincts of a beast. Unable to overcome her supposed love for Donald, she marries and is taken by him to a lonely cabin in the Catskills kept by John and Jane Hunter. David, discovering her whereabouts, follows to protect her. That night she discovers not only that he is a thief and has with him a bag of money and jewels, but also that he is a beast. While Donald sleeps he is stabbed, and dies shortly afterward. It is learned that Jane Hunter, not knowing that he is her long-lost son, has killed him for the money with which she has hoped to go in search of her boy. Ann, awakened to conditions into which her subconscious mind has led her, is repentant and realizes that she has always loved David.

PROGRAM COPY—"The Mark of the Beast"—With an All-Star Cast
If Ann Page had not followed blindly the unconscious power that led the way, she would have avoided pitfalls and consequent sorrows. If you are hungry for something new in moving picture stories, don't miss "The Mark of the Beast," written and directed by the author of "The Birth of a Nation."

10 Out of 665!

Out of 665 reviews listed in the Fifth General Index of "Screen Opinions," just 10 pictures were awarded the "AA" rating.

In other words, "The Mark of the Beast" finds itself, by absolutely impartial critical opinion, in the same class with "Tol'able David," "Orphans of the Storm," "Disraeli," "When Knighthood Was in Flower" and half a dozen other tried, tested and established box office money-makers.

You cannot go wrong with "AA" productions! They are the best money-getters you can book—and here is one that makes its appearance as a summer release, just when your box-office needs a stimulant!

Producer: Cosmopolitan
Distributor: Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan
As a Whole.....ANOTHER MOD-ERN GIRL STORY THAT MAY SATISFY ANITA STEWART'S ADMIRERS AND THE YOUNGER MEMBERS OF AN AUDIENCE THOUGH LIKELY TO IMPRESS GROWN-UPS AS RATHER SILLY BUSINESS.

Star.....Pleasing, but vehicle does not serve as a very auspicious return after her absence from the screen; part doesn't seem to reach her.

Cast.....Robert Frazer good as the over-sure lover; cast is satisfactory on the whole and includes William Norris, Carl Gerrard, Betty Francisco, Mayme Kelso and others.

Type of Story.....Romance; rather slight in situations and at times too slow moving; rich girl, engaged to poor fellow, is on the verge of breaking the engagement when she meets his pipe-smoking father but at the last minute realizes how snobbish she is, reforms, and the marriage takes place.

Box Office Angle.....Business likely to vary, depending upon the people you cater to; not big enough to draw particularly strong business under any circumstances.

Exploitation.....Your presentation and musical accompaniment should help considerably to put this one over. The picture can be made quite a bit more attractive by a tuncful and bright musical program.

Of course if you recall Anita Stewart as a drawing card with your patrons, you can make an extra fuss about her appearance after a short absence.

The title can be exploited in a teaser campaign in which you can distribute throw-aways reading: "Are you a piker?" and follow these later with others reading: "Do you know 'The Love Piker'?"

This is another picture in conjunction with which a fashion show should serve to exploit it nicely. You might see the picture yourself, however, to judge exactly how much you would want to spend on a stunt of this kind. Unless you know pretty well that the picture will take, it might be too expensive to go in for anything as extensive in the way of exploitation.

Display plenty of stills in the lobby and for the benefit of your women admirers you might make special mention of the attractive gowns worn by Miss Stewart. Since she appears in a beautiful bridal costume, and it being the season of brides, you might arrange a tie-up with some store to display a bridal outfit with mention of the bridal party to be seen in "The Love Piker" at your theater.

Direction by....E. Mason Hopper; has provided production that is very pretty to look at and generally makes the most of the story although he might have speeded it up especially toward the close.

Author ..... Frank R. Adams
Scenario ..... Frances Marion
Cameraman ..... George Barnes
Photography ..... Excellent
Locale.....The rich heroine's home
Length ..... Over 6,000 feet

"Wandering Daughters"

Producer: Sam Rorke
Distributor: First National
As a Whole.....VERY LIKELY TO PROVE INTERESTING TO THE AVERAGE AUDIENCE OR THE USUAL FAN CROWD FOR WHOM IT HAS ELEMENTS OF APPEAL.

Players.....A capable and suited cast; Marguerite de la Motte puts plenty of spirit into the role of the jazz crazed girl with William V. Mong interesting as her much concerned father; Pat O'Malley good hero type with Allan Forest the typical artist-tempter; others Mabel Van Buren, Marjorie Daw, Noah Beery, and Alice Howell, the latter not very funny at any time in spite of the humor she is supposed to get over.

Type of Story.....Comedy-romance; deals with the modern craze for jazz and wild parties; old fashioned father keeps up daughter's pace until she tires of jazz and is willing to marry the fellow who really loves her.

Box Office Angle.....Will undoubtedly offer first rate diversion for the majority; should be a suitable summer entertainment and is not over long which will allow you to use a variety of accompanying short reels.

Exploitation.....You should be able to exploit this one very nicely with tie-up arrangements with dress stores, victrola shops and the like. Secure permission to place a show card in the window of a shop displaying the latest in womens' gowns saying: "What the modern girl craves—clothes." The same idea can be worked out in the music shop which shows various musical instruments favored by the popular jazz bands.

A fashion show at your theatre with local girls contesting for prizes for the prettiest girl, the best dressed, etc., should stir up considerable interest in "Wandering Daughters".

You might also promise prizes for the holders of lucky numbers on the admission tickets with the awards consisting of a free marcel wave at some local beauty shop, a pair of stockings at a hose shop, etc. This should stir up business both for your theater and the shops.

There is an elaborately staged country club partly in the picture in which there is a pool and a bathing suit display. This can be exploited and promises made for the entertainment afforded through the heroine's search for jazz.

Direction by....James Young; has been fairly conservative except for jazz party that has been rather lavishly staged; handled story very well for the most part and supplied well suited cast.

Author ..... Dana Burnet
Scenario ..... Not credited
Cameraman ..... Georges Benoit
Photography ..... Very good
Locale....A modern girl's home and a country club.
Length ..... 5,619 feet

"The Mysterious Witness"

Film Booking Office
As a Whole....HAS FAIR AUDIENCE APPEAL ALTHOUGH IT IS A PRETTY CONVENTIONAL ORDER OF MELODRAMA.

Players...Robert Gordon and Elinor Fair featured; Gordon has a good deal to do and contributes a couple of corking good fights. The remainder of the cast composed of regulation western types and Nan-nie Wright, a sweet old lady, as Gordon's mother.

Type of Story...Western melodrama; situations all quite familiar with villain plotting against hero at every turn, but with the usual victorious outcome for hero; tells about boy who clears his name and turns guilt upon accusers.

Box Office Angle.....All right on a program with good short reels or with the average second or third run house audience: they probably won't mind the familiar story.

Exploitation..This is about the average western so you know pretty well just to what extent it is worth your while boosting it. If you know your crowd likes this type of entertainment, "The Mysterious Witness" will undoubtedly satisfy. Better use plenty of stills in the lobby to let them know it isn't a mystery story as the title might suggest.

Since the actual mysterious witness is hero's horse you might have a man dressed as a cowboy ride about on horseback with a sign reading: "This horse saved his master's life when he was accused of a murder he did not commit. Come to the blank theater and see 'The Mysterious Witness.'"

A trailer of the fight between Robert Gordon and Jack Connolly, hero and villain respectively, will give them an idea of the action they can expect and a shot of the rescue when Gordon saves Elinor Fair from falling to her death over the cliff, should let them know the feature contains a bit of suspense.

For the men folks talk about the action, especially the first rate fight that is staged, and for the women play up the romance between Gordon and Elinor Fair.

Direction by....Seymour Zeliff; adequate for the story; holds the interest satisfactorily enough and hasn't used extreme footage

Author .... Eugene Manlove Rhodes
Scenario ..... Not credited
Cameraman ..... Not credited
Photography ..... Good
Locale ..... A western ranch
Length ..... 4,850 feet

Hoot Gibson in
"Shootin' for Love"

Universal
As a Whole...A PLEASING WESTERN IN A LIGHT VEIN WITH ROMANTIC ANGLE. HAS GOOD ACTION AND LIKEABLE STAR.

Star.....Will surely please his admirers in this; gives good portrayal of shell-shocked ex-soldier, and displays pleasing personality to advantage.

Cast...Laura LaPlante sweet as the girl, satisfactory cast includes Alfred Allen, William Welsh and others.

Type of Story....A fast-moving and pleasing western drama with picturesque backgrounds. Deals with love affair between son and daughter of neighbors who have quarreled.

Box Office Angle...Will please those who favor westerns, contains action for men and boys and plenty of love interest for the women folk.

Exploitation....The fact that hero is a victim of shell-shock sustained during the war may be a point that will interest some. At any rate Gibson gives a very realistic portrayal of the victim, and yet is not offensive at any time. There is just one point that is somewhat too brutal and it comes during the fight with the villain who, taking advantage of the boy's helpless condition and punches him without mercy.

The title is an attractive one and that, together with the name of the star will, in all probability, be sufficient to let them know what sort of an entertainment to expect.

Laura La Plante makes an attractive opposite for Gibson and the rest of the cast is adequate. Let your folks know that the hero is a victim of shell-shock who is perfectly normal when quiet, but who goes to pieces at the sound of a gun. Tell them that he proves he is not a coward, and is cured by another shock.

Throwaways with the slogan, "When you go Gunning for Entertainment See Hoot Gibson in 'Shootin' for Love," would be attractive. Another means of interesting them would be a trailer of Hoot galloping to the girl's rescue, or of the explosion of the flood-gate.

You might be able to interest the local chapter of the American Legion and invite the boys to see the picture. That could be used for a newspaper story.

Direction by....Edward Sedgwick; has created real interest in the hero and his troubles, without letting the story become depressing.

Authors...Raymond L. Schrock and Edward Sedgwick
Scenario.....Albert G. Kenyon and Raymond L. Schrock

Cameraman ..... Virgil E. Miller
Photography ..... Generally good

Short Subjects

"Where's My Wandering Boy This Evening?"—Mack Sennett—Pathe—Typical Turpin

Type of production... 2 reel comedy

This is the first of a series of six or eight two-reel comedies that Ben Turpin is making for Pathe. Presented by Mack Sennett, it is directed by J. A. Waldron with a supporting cast that includes Priscilla Bonner, Madeleine Hurlock, Dot Farley and James Finlayson. The cross-eyed comedian's followers will be well pleased with this one, and in view of its coming so close on the heels of his recent feature, "The Shreik," it should have plenty of drawing power. The titles are clever, and while much of the action is slapstick, and even a bit sloppy, such as the bit in which the vamp who is wearing a dinner-gown with no back to speak of, gets a plateful of hot beans where her gown should be, it will nevertheless bring forth many laughs. Production values however, are not particularly high.

"The Homeward Trail"—Universal—Mediocre Western Plot

Type of production... 2 reel western drama

Pete Morrison is the star of this Universal western and does as well as he can with the material offered. The plot is a variation of the time-worn theme of the widowed mother who is being dispossessed by the villain who wishes to get possession of the land, and who finding that the widow's son is due with his ten years' savings has him shot. A stranger, Pete, finds the wounded man and is given the money with instructions to give it to Mrs. Davis. After various mix-ups in which Pete has to impersonate the son, etc., things smooth themselves out. The action is quick and there is some good riding but the titles are quite trite.

"Steel Shod Evidence"—Range Rider—Pathe—Good, Snappy Western

Type of production... 2 reel western drama

Leo Maloney and Josephine Hill again score with this two-reel western of the Range Rider series. It deals with the actions of a couple of crooks who plot to keep a certain horse out of a coming cowpuncher's race. A very clever pup helps the action which is kept moving swiftly all the way through the picture. For those who like this sort of thing, "Steel Shod Evidence" contains full measure of first-class entertainment.

"The Uncovered Wagon"—Hal Roach—Pathe—Amusing Burlesque

Type of production... 1 reel comedy

In this Hal Roach 1 reeler, which purports to be a burlesque on the much talked of Cruze picture, Paul Parrott is the featured player. There is of course much rough-and-tumble stuff, but several bits are extremely funny. The prairie-schooners are flivvers with canopies attached and the attacking Indians ride on bicycles of all descriptions and vintages. One bit in particular is sure to get a laugh. The cavalcade fords a river—with the accent on the "fords" which are entirely submerged as they cross but come up on the other bank. This sequence is very well done. It's a good one-reeler and the title alone will bring a smile.

"Bum Slickers"—Universal—Amusing Tramp Comedy

Type of production... I reel comedy

In this, as the title would suggest, Neely Edwards and Bert Roach do their stuff as the two "gentlemen of the road" to pretty good advantage. The two members of the Army of Unoccupation are mixed up in a stock-swindle, come out way ahead of the game and finally are forced to give the money to a man who is drinking poison because he is broke. There are one or two good gags and the team is very likeable.

Pathe Review No. 27—Interesting Short Reel

Type of production... 1 reel magazine

The opening subject of this Pathe Review presents some fine snow scenes which will be very welcome at this season; next comes a glimpse into a theater in China where a native drama is in progress. The entire performance takes eight hours, you are told. A clever silhouette entitled "The Classic Centaur," deals with the manner in which that imaginative being might have passed his days. The Popular Science subject deals with the manner in which sap is circulated through flowers and affords some interesting microscopic views. The Pathe-color travel picture shows the oasis of Nefta in Tunis.

"Snooky's Treasure Island"—Hammons—Educational—Kids Will Love it

Type of production... 2 reel animal comedy

Snooky, the Humanzee, has been most appropriately named. He is a marvelous monk. This time they have him dressed as a Chink and working for an ex-pirate, also a Chink, who runs a laundry in his spare time. Snooky is the fast friend of the ship's cook, a lad who is bitterly treated by the Skipper. It is, however, the wonderful facial expressions of Snooky and his "humaneness" that holds the attention rather than the little story. Full credit should go to M. S. Peebles, who directed, under the supervision of John Rounan. There is slightly too much footage, but kid's won't mind that, and will thoroughly enjoy this one. A lion and his family have also been used to excellent advantage.

to pay. It all depends whether you look up for inspiration, or keep your head down in the dirt."

And this is based on actual experience. Many of the houses taken over by Comerford were "in the red" or barely profitable when they were put in the chain. Then O'Toole was sent around to bolster up. "It's surprising," said O'Toole, "how little you have to do—how few changes you have to make, to turn a losing house into a paying venture. Just a matter of looking up and doing things different."

"LAB" DEVELOPMENT

Important man in the business talking. "Do you know," he said, said he, "that the most important development that has occurred in the industry in the past ten years is where no one thinks about?" And when the head shaking was over he went on: "In the laboratories. That's the spot. And no one ever thinks about it. Direction has improved a bit; the sets are finer and bigger—I don't know whether the acting has improved much—of course the stories are better. But it's in the little old 'lab's'—the factory end of the business, that the real development has taken place. Laboratory work today is so much finer, so much better, so far advanced, over what existed five or ten years ago, that there is no comparison. Fine prints are bringing in more business at the box office than any other given cause. The distributor who isn't on to his job, and keeps his prints fresh and right, deservedly should be out of business."

Something to think about, gentlemen.

KEEP OPEN TIME

Once again the warning. For the 'steenth time. But still worth harping about. Any exhibitor who fails to keep a lot of time open this coming season deserves all that's coming to him. And this, despite that some of the larger companies—and for that matter the smaller ones as well—are trying harder than ever before to book in blocks.

It may be that the coming season will prove disappointing—some of the many big pictures may be just pictures—and that will be a pity. But regardless of how good they are, stick to the idea—keep some time open. As much as you can, and more if you dare. Because the bigger and better the pictures are the more you will need them. Let the other fellow block book. And you will be smiling. When he has his "tzoras."

LOOK AT 'EM

How many pictures shown by Mister Average Exhibitor are seen by him before he plays them, or even books them? How many? It is to laugh. "How few" should be the question. It's a remarkable situation. This is probably the only business in the world where a man buys, sight unseen, that which he has to sell again. This, despite that the hazard of not seeing what they buy is greater in this than in any other business.

When the exhibitors of this country learn that to operate profitably they cannot stand pat and offer what the bigger and other fellow "cleaned up" with, and instead put on something their own clientele favors, not only will exhibition values come down, but there will be less "flops." Very often it isn't the fault of the picture that a "flop" develops. It's the fault of the exhibitor. Remember every picture, even the best, isn't good everywhere. There are some towns where Chaplin has "flopped."

"THE SPOILERS"

Years ago it was a great story. And a great picture. Today, it's still a great story but a far greater picture. The old picture made a lot of money. For everybody. So will the new one. It's a real box office. Don't worry about that. And the direction of Hillyer is fine while the work of Milton Sills and Anne Nillson, together with a lot of others, makes it stand out. And the fight between Sills and Noah Beery! What a fight! After seeing that this is certain—no leading man stuff for yours truly. Not on your life. Nix.

THE COMMON LAW

Jersey Meeting

The officials become automatically the national legislative committee to aid the national officers, just as was done in Connecticut. One of the features of Woodhull's report dwelt on the difficulty of collecting dues.

At the banquet Thursday night some excellent addresses were delivered. Among the speakers were Arthur S. Friend, Distinctive Prod. Marcus Loew, Sydney S. Cohen, who dwelt on the value of national organization, Mike O'Toole of the Comerford organization who made a strong and earnest plea that exhibitors aid in becoming a moral force in their committees and to see that the laws on the statute books were observed. Loew commented on the large number of exchange men present. Peter J. Brady also spoke as did Bob Welsh of the M. P. World, and Miss Louella Parsons of the Morning Telegraph.

During the course of the banquet Billy Brandt, Lou Blumenthal, and Bernard Edelhertz of the New York state organization appeared. Brandt strode over to speak to Woodhull and Sydney Cohen shook hands with him, apparently very friendly.

One of the features of the event was a golf tournament held Thursday afternoon. The rain checked the affair which was won by D. J. Chatkin, Educational Films. Only 12 holes were played.

London—In the latest issue of The Cinema appears a description of a new Swiss projector. In part it reads.

"The projector utilizes the old plan of a water cooler, but possesses, it is claimed, several new advantages. The chief feature is the condenser, which is filled with water and forms the two concave mirrors concentrating the lights upon it, a single condenser. The two ends of the condenser are convex glass of unequal diameter. When the light rays reach the film after passing through about 12 inches of water they have a temperature of 90 degrees, thereby eliminating all dangers of fire.

MOORE'S THEATERS CORPORATION

TOM MOORE, PRESIDENT

GENERAL OFFICES RIALTO THEATRE BUILDING

FRANKLIN 3730

WASHINGTON, D.C.

June 25, 1923.

Mr. William Randolph Hearst, President,
Cosmopolitan Productions,
127th Street at Second Avenue,
New York City, N. Y.

Dear Mr. Hearst:

It gives me great pleasure to recommend your production "ENEMIES OF WOMEN." This picture was accepted by our public as one of the greatest that has ever come to Washington.

In analyzing the basis for tremendous drawing power and box-office receipts (which we have enjoyed during the past two weeks), we find this picture has such a variety of action, so well done, that it could not help but appeal to all. Our patrons were loud in their praise on leaving the theatre daily for the "bigness" of story, perfection of acting and direction, beauty of scenes, and the lavish scale upon which this film play was produced. We observed that, whereas the story had a good bit of spice, same was handled with "kid gloves," which is what the people apparently want in most every photoplay at the present time. The duel scene was positively the greatest I have ever seen in a picture, and this was only one of the multitude of big scenes, any one of which is what an exhibitor may feel satisfied to have in a production with confidence that it will satisfy his public.

Finally, if "ENEMIES OF WOMEN" is a sample of your coming year's output, this industry will be greatly benefited, for it is such productions that "ring the bell" of high records in box-office receipts, while satisfying the old patrons and adding new ones. Please accept my congratulations for the achievement and the privilege of exhibiting "ENEMIES OF WOMEN" at our Rialto Theatre.

With many thanks and very best wishes for your continued success, I am Very truly yours,

TM:WG

New Series

Going Through First National Reported May Star or Feature Corinne Griffith

Published announcement of forthcoming releases of First National include "Lilies of the Field."

In this connection it is understood that among the early releases planned in which Corinne Griffith would be starred was "Lilies of the Field," and while officials of the First National refuse to discuss the matter and while the same attitude was taken by Charles R. Rogers who has been handling Miss Griffith's business matters it is reported that when First National releases "Lilies of the Field" Corinne Griffith will be found in the production.

Relative to this matter some reports go so far as to say that probably Miss Griffith's forthcoming series will be released through First National rather than another distributing company which was expected to handle her productions.

Suggest Confab

A conference of all distributors to discuss the many problems facing members of that branch of the business is suggested by Al Lichtman following a reading of "The Golden Bubble" in which Alexander Aronson expounded his ideas on distribution. Lichtman's remarks on the Aronson article are interesting. He says:

"To be perfectly candid, I am not familiar with such production methods as described in Mr. Aronson's article. No doubt, Mr. Aronson based his statement on actual knowledge. However, such methods, in my opinion, do not exist in well regulated studios, and I can happily state that our studios are not operated in that careless fashion. As a matter of fact, for the eleven pictures produced by us during the past year, each averaging about 6500 feet, there never was more than 11,000 feet of negative shot on any one subject, proving that if a studio is properly conducted, productions well planned and carefully worked out, and the

Will Give Exhibitor a Better Chance Next Season Says Williams

Just back from the Coast where he saw a number of large pictures which will be released next season, J. D. Williams declared on Saturday that the big pictures for the coming year will give many exhibitors a chance to more than break even next season.

"The average exhibitor has 26 bad weeks out of 52," said he, "but with the type of picture scheduled for next year he will have a greater opportunity to make money. Exhibitors rarely lose money on big pictures—they go into the red with the little ones.

"I saw Fairbanks' new one and it's bigger than 'Robin Hood.' I saw Norma's 'Ashes of Vengeance' and it is a fine, magnificent picture. And many others. But the picture that will make them sit up and take notice is Charley Chaplin's 'Immortal Women,' starring Edna Purviance. It isn't one of those big, million dollar productions, with big sets and all that—but it's human,

Good Will

Words of wisdom are written under this heading in a weekly magazine published by the Astor theater, St. Paul, one of the Finkelstein and Ruben chain of theaters. The article is decidedly worth while, and says:

Seneca wrote: "He that does good to another, does good to himself."

"A motion picture theater without the good will of its patrons is not built upon a foundation of security. A motion picture theater needs the good will of its patrons as much as it needs its screen if it is to establish itself as a definite, useful, and successful institution in a community.

"Abraham Lincoln said: 'Public sentiment is everything. With public sentiment nothing can fail, without it nothing can succeed. Consequently, he who moulds public sentiment goes deeper than he who enacts statutes or pronounces decisions.'

"The motion picture theater is a resourceful institution, and its manager has at his command a great medium through which good will and public sentiment may be created, nurtured, and sustained.

"To those who are interested in the progress of the motion picture, the many fine examples of activities tending toward the creating of good will which are observed from day to day are indeed gratifying and encouraging. From flood stricken areas we read of benefit performances to aid the homeless; in the recent case of a St. Paul church being destroyed by fire we learn with pleasure of the theater manager donating his theater for church services; charitable organizations, benevolent societies, welfare leagues, newsboys' clubs, Y. W. C. A.'s and other active units are constantly in touch with the motion picture manager, co-operating with him in benefit performances from which funds are realized for these worthy organizations. That these funds are used in community service is an assured and undeniable fact.

"None of us are perfect—there is nothing in the world but has its faults. Before we criticize, is it not as well to study the pro's and con's of any question?"

In the Courts

Supreme Court Justice Tierney has directed judgment for $508 for the Safety Fire Extinguisher Co. against the Freeport Theater, of Freeport, L. I., for fire appliances on the ground that there is no meritorious defense to the suit.

The suit of Orrin Johnson against Goldwyn to recover under a contract by which he was engaged to take a leading part in a film, has been settled by the parties and discontinued by an order of Supreme Court Justice Wasservogel.

The second default judgment to be filed against Glenn Hunter in the City Court within a few days has been filed by Lewis Buxton for $1,828 as the balance on a claim for $2,485 for automobile transportation furnished to Hunter between New York and other points from June to December, 1922. The other judgment was filed by Abraham Libman on a note.

An answer has been filed in the Supreme Court by Associated Producers in a suit of Nathan & Semerad, over the film, "A Pasteboard Crown," the complaint in which has not been filed. The answer admits that the defendant took over the distribution of the film which has an exhibition value fixed at $200,000. The contract provided that the cost would not exceed $37,000, and that until the plaintiffs had been reimbursed that sum the defendants would only get 35%, later the parties to the contract would get 50% each.

The suit of Alexander Gordin against Fox Film and Virginia Tracy to recover for services in connection with the film, "Queen of Sheba," was settled when it came before Supreme Court Justice Cohalan by the payment by Fox of $600 cash and an agreement to publish an announcement as to Gordin's services in connection with the film, "making public announcement of the valuable services rendered by Mr. Gordin in the preparation of the Biblical, historical, and legendary data, and the preparation of a story and synopsis based on same." Fox agreed that Gordin was entitled to this "screen and credit and recognition which he has not heretofore received."

Victor Sutherland has returned to New York for the finishing scenes of "The Love Bandit."

Bernard T. Woodle of the Hayes organization who has been handling the matter is back from a trip to Washington where he conferred with the Mexican charge d'affaires. The situation has not changed, the attitude of the Mexican Government being that of marking time.

It will be recalled that production of "The Bad Man" was temporarily held up because the Mexican representatives objected to it, after the New York consul had seen "The Girl of the Golden West," which Edwin Carewe made. First National states, however, that the picture has been started on the coast.

time schedule properly arranged, there is no need of shooting 60,000 feet of negative in order to get five or six thousand feet of suitable film.

"However, even before reading Mr. Aronson's article, I have heard that such wasteful methods do exist in this industry, but I am certain that producers operating along these haphazard lines are in the great minority and eventually they will eliminate themselves through their lack of efficiency. I believe that waste in production only exists in organizations headed by men who do not know their business.

While on the subject, we might mention that a great many people are still of the belief—all that is required to make motion pictures is to possess the raw film, a camera, a group of actors with a man wearing puttees directing them, and a good megaphone voice. But when you analyze motion pictures from the artistic as well as the commercial angle, one comes to the conclusion that there are few real creators of motion pictures who can be relied upon from year to year to produce consistent, intelligent and entertaining pictures. When one looks further, one finds that these producers of good pictures have made a real study of motion pictures. In a great part of their work, they are innovators and originators. When you look still further and you analyze the productions that are not fit to show to the public, you will find they were made by a great number of incompetent imitators who have been a parasitic strain upon this industry for many years and who have merely gained an outlet for their pictures because of the unsound economic factors still governing the distributing methods in vogue.

"Distribution: As to Mr. Aronson's view of distribution, I am in thorough accord and in full sympathy. The terrific cost of distribution and the lack of standardization as to prices, is the one big blot upon this industry which must be effaced, if this industry is to continue to build. As to Mr. Aronson's plan, there is no doubt as to its feasibility, but its success depends entirely upon the willingness of the producers and distributors in this country to co-operate.

"I would like to put Mr. Aronson's suggestion to a practical test by inviting all the distributors in this country to a joint conference for the purpose of discussing freely the great many problems confronting us, or of common interest to all.

I would like to broach the proposition with the idea that whether we like it or not, everybody in the motion picture business is dependent directly or indirectly upon one another for success. There is no organization nor individual that can navigate alone in this industry. For one thing, it takes the good-will of the whole world to support a motion picture organization. No organization can consider itself too big to stoop to co-operate with its fellow distributors, who are confronted with the identical problems to a proportionate degree.

"Therefore, if the distributors in this country are not too egotistical to consider themselves above all of their competitors, let us get together. Perhaps there is a way of meeting on some common ground, to eliminate the waste in distribution and above all create some standard form of values—fair to the big as well as the little. It has always been my theory that this industry can only continue to build and maintain the continued support of the masses by creating a standardization of values as between renter and exhibitor, thereby promoting the greatest possible outlet for all motion pictures throughout the world.

"The present methods employed are not conducive to the above, and it is my firm belief that all factors big and little can benefit by the joint conference suggested herein for the purposes outlined.

"Mr. Aronson deserves the congratulations of the industry for having the courage to speak his mind on this vital subject."

How Can It Be Done?

A. Rowland in Sympathy With Aronson's Ideas But Queries Method of Doing It

Richard A. Rowland, general manager of Associated First National states he agrees more or less with Alexander S. Aronson's ideas on distribution but asks how can it be done? "I don't believe," says Rowland, "people in this industry will ever get together until they are all up against the wall ready to be shot, and then they will first start in getting negative costs lowered. Then finally some crazy fellow will get the idea that distribution should all be done at the same booking office, then maybe we will all be sane and sensible and will do business in a sane manner. I don't know of any other method of describing the situation other than in the vernacular."

Overhead

Chain Operator Thinks 40 Week Basis Slows Up an Exhibitor—Also Unfair to Producer

Commenting on the chain operator who figures his year on a 40 week overhead basis rather than 52 weeks, a clever operator of an important chain says:

"I cannot convince myself that this is good business, because it seems to me it influences a fellow to let up in the Summer rather than drive harder—and we have found that if we work hard in the Summer, we have no losing weeks.

"In addition to that, it is rather unfair to a producer or star, when you start to check up the amount of profit he has made for you, when as a matter of fact you are charging up somebody else's film rental, whose film you are going to run in the Summer, against his product that happened to be run in a more fortunate month."

Exhibitors Optimistic

Says Grainger, Back From Trip Over Country—Says Next Season Will Be Biggest

That 1923-24 will be the most prosperous year in the history of the picture industry, was the prediction of Jimmy Grainger, sales manager for Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan, upon his return from a 30 days tour of the trade zones of the country. Grainger states that every important exhibitor in the country has not only expressed optimism in personal conversation, but also in the number of contracts already signed for Fall showing.

"North, East, South and West are out to pick the best and back the best," said Grainger. "Made keen by the knowledge that the producers in general are out to do bigger things in the way of production, exhibitors in turn are determined to present these pictures on a scale that is not only beautiful and impressive but also showmanly. Next season will see exploitation as it really should be. Barnumism of the twentieth century will come to light.

"I look forward to a really prosperous year all around. The big theaters are going after the big productions, and through long years they have become experienced judges. In this day of screening first, it's the picture with the goods that counts. I have heard some talk about paper promises, but it seems to me that there's nothing to that sort of thing if the distributor is willing at all times to show the product that he is going to sell."

Laemmle Off To Europe

Abe Warner is enthusiastic over the outlook for the coming season so far as their product is concerned.

Unusual Methods

Reported Employed in Michigan But Denied by Richey, General Manager of M. P. T. O.

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Detroit—Members of the F. I. L. M. Club of Michigan, independent exchange operators and others interested in distribution claim that in various cities exhibitors, members of the M. P. T. O. of Michigan, are operating in a manner which makes it difficult to obtain what they claim are "decent values" for pictures. This includes all productions from the ordinary five-reeler to the super-specials.

They contend that the M. P. T. O. of Michigan has completed a system by which all members forward to the Secretary's office a complete list of all prices which they pay for film service. Those prices it is said are tabulated and before a member consummates the purchase of this picture, he communicates with the Detroit office and then determines from the information received whether or not he should pay the price asked.

In some sections, notably Bay City and Saginaw, exhibitors are charged with dividing up film service regardless of the desires of the distributor who shall pay which line of service and what they shall pay. In this connection it is said that a certain distributor forwarded to an exhibitor in Bay City, who for the purpose of distinction shall be called Jones, a print of a new special. When the salesman arrived in Bay City he discovered that the print was not in Jones's theater but in "Smith's." Surprised at this he later learned from Jones that the film service of his company had been allotted to Smith and that he Jones, said he wasn't interested. When the salesman tried to explain that after all the print belonged to his company and they might have something to say about who was going to use it, Jones said he wasn't interested. It later developed that the only way that Jones could break in on the print was to have Smith put in writing that he didn't want this particular service, in which event Jones would be in a position to deal for it.

It is said that tactics of this type have become so annoying that mem-

"In a chat with Mr. Wilkinson, Secretary of the F. I. L. M. Club, the other day, he stated that the F. I. L. M. ### Capitol

The Capitol orchestra opens the bill this week with the "Second Hungarian Rhapsody" followed by "Speed Demons," a short reel; "Spirit of '76," a tableau, and the regular weekly magazine. S. L. Rothafel next presents Madame Elsa Strallia, in concert. Jacob Fabian's "The Chase" is the feature. Other numbers include "The Cuckoo's Secret" a Bray picture "Divertissements," "Ivan the Great," a scenic; and "The Skater's Waltz," by the Capitol dancers. The organ closes the performance.

Rivoli

"Impression Viennoise" is the opening number, "Merry-Go-Round," the feature is next. "Dance Divertissement," by Betty May, danseuse and a Max Fleischer cartoon, "The Battle," are the only other numbers on the bill because of the length of the feature.

MERRY GO ROUND

UNIVERSAL SUPER-JEWEL

MERRY GO ROUND is one of the best pictures that has ever adorned the screen at that imposing playhouse (Rivoli). It deserves very high rating in every respect. If it is typical of the new Universal pictures, we most emphatically want to see more of them. We looked hard at MERRY GO ROUND, but we could find no flaw in its atmospheric detail or in the logic of its story. The costumes, the types and the backgrounds are wonderfully true.

—Robert E. Sherwood in N. Y. HERALD.

Let it be said in the beginning that MERRY GO ROUND is an exceptionally fine production. Down to the last, least player every part is done with scrupulous care; every effort has been put forth apparently to preserve an atmosphere of reasonable realism. The complete effect is impressive and convincing.

—Joseph Mulvaney in N. Y. AMERICAN.

It is big; it is enormous and it is quite impressively constructed. We are willing to place MERRY GO ROUND on our list of worthwhile things because it will more than satisfy the great majority of film patrons. Go and see it. We consider it first rate screen entertainment.

—Quinn Martin in
N. Y. WORLD.

MERRY GO ROUND is a scintillating, fascinating picture. Running through the film is a charming love story and although the production is 10,000 feet long, the action is so swift and the interest so well sustained that it hardly seems half that length. The sets are wonderfully realistic.

—N. Y. TIMES.

GO ROUND

presented by CARL LAEMMLE

It will pay you to make a visit to the Rivoli before MERRY GO ROUND moves away. The story is a good one, well told and well photographed. In bringing her (Mary Philbin) to the place she now occupies among the stars of the silent drama, Mr. Carl Laemmle again proves his ability as a producer. We hope soon to see her in another picture.

—N. Y. EVE. TELEGRAM

All in all this is the best thing of its kind that Universal has ever done. It is a picture vastly worth while. By her work in this picture, she (Mary Philbin) deserves stardom. Norman Kerry lends just the right note to the role of the handsome lover.

N. Y. SUN AND GLOBE.

It may be truly said that the Universal company seems to have spared no expense in reproducing some gorgeous backgrounds of the capital city of Austria. In fact, speaking from a pictorial viewpoint, this offering is really great. George Hackathorne gives a beautiful portrayal; Norman Kerry gives a fine performance; Mary Philbin is appealing and ever so pretty. An interesting picture, well presented and acted.

—Dorothy Day in
N. Y. MORNING TELEGRAPH.

This is Mary Philbin's first picture and she really is a remarkably clever little actress as well as a very pretty girl. Dale Fuller, needless to say, is excellent. So are Cesare Gravina and George Siegmann. The idea of the story—that life is a merry go round, that we are little figures being twirled by a great giant—is a fascinating one.

Invents New Projector

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

London—The Cinema, commenting on a new non-intermittent projector which the inventor, A. E. Fenn, of London, asserts will revolutionize film projection, says:

"Attempts have been made at various times to produce a projector which would obviate the necessity of giving the film an intermittent motion, and to replace same by a uniform film motion past the gate aperture, but so far without any real amount of success. This effect, however, has now, we are told, been produced by means of a small mirror, approximately 1½ ins. in diameter, which is given a rotation of 96 revolutions per second. The amount of the film motion is the same as that of the intermittent type, i. e., the picture takes one-sixteenth of a second to pass the gate aperture. The light beam from the arc is thrown through the film on to the revolving mirror, which reflects it through suitable lenses to a revolving shutter of special design, the object of which is to allow light to pass to the screen only when the mirror occupies certain positions relative to the picture position at the gate aperture. In this way any movement of the film is compensated for by the mirror, which occupies an advance position exceeding its last position by an amount—expressed in degrees of a circle—which is half that through which the mirror has moved in the interim."

Are you planning production in New York?

Do you need a fully equipped studio and competent staff?

The staff and studio was used to produce the "Bright Shawl" and has just finished the "Fighting Blade" with Richard Barthelmess. "Potash & Perlmutter" comedy for Samuel Goldwyn has also just been completed there.

This organization is now able to accommodate production starting in the near future while between pictures.

This is not an ordinary rental proposition but an opportunity to use a highly trained technical staff and save on production costs.

Newspaper Opinions

"Merry Go Round"—Universal Rivoli

AMERICAN—* * * is an exceptionally fine production. * * * The picture possesses that essential third dimension so often lacking in photoplays. There is in it length and width and in addition there is depth, genuine depth of plot and characterization and not mere thickness. * * * Down to the least player, every part is done with scrupulous care, every effort has been put forth apparently, to preserve an atmosphere of reasonable realism. The complete effect is impressive and convincing, too.

The story contains bone and sinew. * * *

EVE WORLD—* * * it's that sort of a picture that the title really doesn't matter. * * * a Universal jewel, and really sparkles up to its gemmy reputation at times, but through a jeweler's magnifying glass a few flaws stand out. The greatest of these is its great length. * * * in one sense, one of the biggest pictures of the year. It's in ten reels, which, in our estimation, it at least five too many. * * * will please those who seek bill rather than 22-karat in their pictures. * * *

HERALD—* * * one of the best pictures that has ever adorned the screen at that imposing playhouse. With the possible exception of "When Knighthood Was In Flower" and "Peter The Great," it is the finest production that we have seen there this year.

"Merry-Go-Round" deserves very high rating in every respect.

MAIL—Here is a picture we feel will stand with any of the German spectacular productions. Its story is simple. Its appeal universal. Its treatment is most artistic and refreshingly devoid of trite, overdone screen tricks. The acting is superb. A great amount of money has been spent on the "Merry-Go-Round." * * * Few persons after seeing this picture will ever guess that the east never set foot on foreign soil to make it. Crowds are directed in masterly fashion, reflecting the influence of the Germans. The actors work as if they were living characters.

SUN—All in all, this ten reel special is the best thing of its kind that Universal has ever done, the atmosphere being so well supplied that the spectator would swear he was at a Viennese Coney Island, surrounded by nothing but Teutonic faces and beer. * * * It is a picture vastly worth while, despite its far-fetched attempts to make life seem like a merry go round and a symbolism that is as mechanical as that contrivance.

TELEGRAM—* * * The story is a good one, well told and well photographed. It will pay you to make a visit to the Rivoli before "Merry-Go-Round" moves away.

TELEGRAPH—* * * spared no expense in reproducing some gorgeous backgrounds of the capital city of Austria. * * * speaking from a pictorial viewpoint, this offering is really great. * * * In speaking of the story, it is not possible to be so enthusiastic. It moves slowly and in no way keeps up the pace of the action in general. * * *

TIMES—* * * a scintillating, fascinating picture, skillfully directed by Rupert Julian. * * * Running through the film is a charming love story, and, although the production is 10,000 feet long, the action is so swift and the interest so well sustained, that it hardly seems half that length. * * * is so entertaining that the sets and scenes are almost taken for granted as the story runs along. * * *

WORLD—It is big. It is enormous. And it is quite impressively constructed, its principal fault being that one which is common to the majority of these cinema plays that go in for bulk. It is overacted for the most part by most of its principal players. * * * We consider it first rate screen entertainment. * * *

"Wandering Daughters"—First Nat'l Strand

AMERICAN—* * * There is a lot of action—only it is all labeled. * * *

DAILY NEWS—* * * symbolic pictures with their gorgeous foreign backgrounds! "Merry-Go-Round" is another one of them, and it's somewhat "Ella Wheeler Wilcox" in that the carousel turns round and round and round, keeping time with the world, uncaring for the fate of individuals. * * *

EVE WORLD.—It's a corking good picture story, devoid of the usual mawkish film sentimentality. * * *

* * * Take it all in all, "Wandering Daughters" is a good, sensible film, and we hope you enjoy it—we did. * * *

SUN—* * * "Wandering Daughters" * * * deals with the problem of the parents who have an extravagant daughter and a small income. * * * another film to take up the subject of the modern girl. * * * It is an ordinary motion picture made as a box office attraction.

TELEGRAM—* * * Director James Young, however, has profited by experience, and has enriched the screen with a pleasing, entertaining and not too critical story dealing with runaway girls.

TIMES—* * * The subtitles are of the variety calculated to make one fret and fidget, and it is with intense relief when the other features on the program awaken one from a lethargic state.

* * * There is nothing inspiring about this photoplay, but the players have done as well as they could in their respective roles.

TRIBUNE—* * * It starts off with a promise of fulsome thrills and showers of fascination and repulsion and it ends up by being as sweetly nondescript as "Hearts and Flowers." * * * if one's hopes had not been raised so high, probably "Merry Go Round" would have been passed over as a fair program picture, as pictures go.

WORLD—An unfortunate episode. * * * It is another of those celluloid satires on the younger generation. * * *

25 Open Weeks in Famous Houses Beginning With Fall Season

Offers Wide Open Door For Independent Producers With Worth-While Productions—Same Condition Applies Not Only to Broadway But to Country as Well—Independent Producers Comment

Beginning with the Fall season Famous Players will open its doors to independent productions in its two important Broadway houses, the Rialto and Rivoli, for at least 25 weeks time. The Criterion will also be open but because of the indefinite run of "The Covered Wagon" or some other large production made by Famous any possible open time of this house is excepted from the schedule.

While officials of Famous Players will not discuss the situation, denial was not made to the suggestion that in view of the decreased production activity of Famous Players this open time would naturally develop. From time to time Famous has run some of its special productions for two weeks, switching from the Rialto to the Rivoli or vice-versa, and admitting that this might happen beginning with the coming season with its announced policy of approximately 52 pictures for the coming year there will be at least 25 weeks open time if not more, for outside product in these important houses.

For the past several years Famous Players production policy has indicated a trend towards "fewer and better pictures." The climax of this movement was reached with the recent announcement that for the coming season but approximately 52 pictures would be made by that organization.

It is probable or possible that some limited amount of independent production will be released through Fa-

Production will be started immediately, titles, stories and casts to be announced later. Burton King has already started with the first of his series.

Metro on Broadway

In connection with the open time development of the Rialto and Rivoli, it was said yesterday that this might lead to Metro securing considerable of that time for showings. It was pointed out that the Capitol will have considerable product from Goldwyn and the Strand will be heavily blocked with First National, and that Metro would automatically find a place in the open time of Famous houses.

Kansas Exhibitor Unit Protests When Reports State That Ban on Film Will Be Lifted

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Kansas City, Kans.—"The Birth of a Nation" is again the cause of a sensational fight, which has already found its way into the newspapers. C. W. Slater, of Oklahoma City, who claims control of the Oklahoma and Kansas rights to the film; the state M. P. T. O. and the state censor board are participants, with Governor Davis, of Kansas, on the side lines.

For some years the picture has been barred by the different state executives, each new Governor taking the same attitude. This battle started when one of the local newspapers stated that the censors were about to permit the film to be shown in the state. This enraged R. G. Liggett, head of the exhibitor unit, who went to Topeka to protest to Governor Davis, declaring that if the ban was ever lifted exhibitors in his organization would "boycott" the production. Liggett further stated that cutting the film would not alter the situation. Fear of racial differences is the reason for the ban.

Broadway Open Time

Famous Players, but not a great deal, so it is said, and even if Famous shows its entire line-up in its Broadway houses there will still be a vast amount of open time, and it would not surprise many if this open time extended materially beyond 25 weeks. It all depends upon the type of product coming from the Famous studios.

Open Time In Out-Of Town Houses

The development of this open time along Broadway will naturally extend to those houses owned, controlled or operated by Famous Players throughout the country. At the moment Famous operates approximately 200 or more houses, a number of which are first runs. The decreased production schedule naturally opens the door in these houses as well. In fact, some of the houses in which Famous has an interest have already indicated this open time condition by arranging to contract or having contracted already for "independent" product.

Some Comment

Naturally this important move proves of real interest to producers and distributors who heretofore have been blocked off of Broadway because of the need of Famous Players to house its own productions. Commenting on the open time situation, Abe Warner of Warner Bros., said:

"Never has there been an opportunity such as the coming season offers for the open market. The producer of good pictures need not fear that he will be unable to book the big first run theaters.

"For instance, on Broadway the Famous Players theaters—the Rialto and Rivoli—have never booked an open market picture, and for the coming season they will have an opening for a minimum of twenty-five open market pictures. The condition existing on Broadway is a striking example of the conditions throughout the country, with very few exceptions. The advance requests from these various parts of the country have been far greater than any previous year, and the producer of good product should have no fear that his pictures will not find their way in the biggest and best theaters throughout the country in the important key centers. It is consequently up to the producer of open market pictures to make a standard of product to enable him to take advantage of the existing condition which is most unusual."

Jack Bachmann of Preferred Pictures (Al Lichtman) said:

"In setting aside a definite number of weeks in the Rialto and Rivoli Theaters for other than Paramount Pictures. Mr. Zukor is doing a wonderful thing for the motion picture industry.

"This certainly constitutes an answer to any rumor that the large producers are in any way discriminating against other producers.

"Mr. Zukor's step makes these two large Broadway houses a goal toward which every producer of a good motion picture may strive, with an excellent chance of success if his product is worthy."

Putting It Over

Here is how a brother exhibitor put his show over. Send along your ideas. Let the other fellow know how you cleaned up.

A Teaser Campaign For This

Pittsburgh—When "The Last Moment" played Rowland and Clark's State. C. B. Frost and Goldwynner Bill Robson arranged a teaser campaign, in addition to the usual newspaper space, billboards, house organ, heralds, window cards, etc.

Several days before the showing the campaign was started in the papers. The first day there was a drawing of a clock face. On this were the words; "Hold Your Breath. The Last Moment is Coming." The clock face was used in succeeding issues, but with a different caption.

Appeals to the Higher Class

Irwin Wheeler, who operates a number of houses in Rye, N. Y. and Mamaroneck, uses an original idea to put over some of the "higher class" pictures. Because of his clientele, Wheeler, as he explains it, simply appeals to the self-respect of his patrons. His advertising reads something like this: "Would you like to see a picture which the producers and critics say is too good for you?" His method may be further explained by the following. When "Nanook of the North" was booked for a showing at the house, the exhibitor told his people that the film was purely an educational film and that it appeals to intelligence.

with the Telegram-News as an exploitation stunt for Lloyd's "Safety Last."

A Harold Lloyd "double" was sent out by the paper to public places during the day with the latest copy of the Telegram in his pocket. In line with the campaign a picture of the double was printed every day with a reward offered for the first person identifying him under conditions stipulated. The identifier must have a copy of the same issue carried by the double at the time he was recognized and must salute him with the words: "Safety Last," you are the Telegram's Harold Lloyd."

The campaign brought business for both theater and paper without any great cost to either because the double was never identified.

A Co-Operative Advertising Stunt

Minneapolis—An effective tie-up with merchants and a newspaper was made by Morris Abrams, Metro exploitation man, for the showing of "Success" at the Blue Mouse.

Abrams arranged with the advertising manager of the Tribune to solicit merchants for a special page of advertisements, laying special emphasis on the word success, to appear next to the theater ad. Across the top of the page the word "Success" ran in two inch letters. This stunt invited readers to write 100 words about any advertiser on the page, telling how the advertiser achieved success. Fifty tickets to the theater were awarded to those writing the best composition.

Many readers participated in the contest, which brought considerable attention to the film during the run.

Score Cards Used in Hamilton, O.

Hamilton, O.—John Schwalm, manager of the Rialto, made use of baseball score streamers in exploiting the showing of "The Christian."

100 of these streamers, 1½ x 5 ft., were placed on the windows of downtown stores with results of the Cincinnati games. The heading read: "Hall Caine's 'The Christian' will score a hit with you in every scene. At the Rialto now."

Schwalm also used 2,000 lawn cards, 2,000 heralds, 1,000 hangers, 1,000 stickers, 100 window cards and obtained a book store window display with the Todd Co. The theater gave a free ticket to the matinee showing of "The Christian" to every purchaser of a copy of the book. An oil painting and two large cards were used in a window carrying a display of the book.

Britain Not to Place High Tariff on American Pictures—Believes U. S. Killing British Production (Special to THE FILM DAILY)

London—Viscount Wolmer, parliamentary secretary of the Board of Trade, stated in the House of Commons that while the British picture industry "is being killed" by American importation no embargo would be placed on American films. Viscount Wolmer stated that he is discussing the situation with British producers to see what can be done. He said that he did not think a high tariff would accomplish the desired result. Sir Arthur Holbrook stated that 90% of the pictures shown in England are American made, while, he said, the American embargo on British films is so effective that the proportion of British films shown in America are only one eighth of 1%.

Loew and the Peekskill Case

In an effort to right many wrong impressions that may have been formed in the court litigation involving a theater in Peekskill, Marcus Loew, president of Loew's Inc., yesterday denied emphatically that he or Loew's Inc., had anything to do with the case as has been reported in the papers and made the following statement:

"Upon my return from Syracuse, I noticed some clippings referring to the Peekskill case, stating it had been taken up on appeal.

"I was not particularly interested on that account but shocked to see that the name of Loew's, Inc., was again mentioned in the case, despite the fact that affidavits were drawn by our attorney and signed by me, stating that neither Loew's, Inc., or I ever had any interest in that theater.

"In view of the fact that the plaintiffs' attorney told a mutual friend that he knew I had nothing whatever to do with the case, I feel it my duty to enter a denial at this time."

Laemmle Tells Exhibitors, Urging Use of Screen to Build Prestige in Their Home Towns

How an exhibitor can use his screen and local advertising to increase his prestige and that of his house, is told by Carl Laemmle, in a letter to an exhibitor. Laemmle suggests that the exhibitor discuss local affairs and conditions on his screen, thus making himself an important figure in his community.

Laemmle's letter follows:

"Are you getting all the good results you should get from your newspaper advertisements?"

If not, maybe you have let them grow stale. Maybe you have been doing nothing but filling your daily newspaper space with words or uninteresting announcements.

Why not try a different plan, at least for the summer, to see if you can't build up such an interest in your ads that people will turn almost automatically to see what you have to say.

For instance:

Run little editorials boosting your town or your county or whatever community you are most interested in. Make suggestions on how to improve your home town. Become just as much of an authority on this sub-

A Picture

Every once in a while—too seldom, unfortunately, there comes along, unheralded, without a lot of fuss, without a special showing, without a so-called "Broadway premiere" a real picture.

One of them arrived this week—played at the Rivoli—and set the town on end. Even 4th of July night, admittedly one of the "toughest" nights in the show business, the house played to S. R. O.—and the sign said so. Any picture that can do that is a real picture; a real box office. Oh, yes; the picture? "The Merry Go Round"—Universal.

Higher Prices

For Admissions—West Coast Has Set About to Do This—The Outlook

Dave Bershon, of the division of films and Harry G. Arthur, general manager of West Coast Theaters, will leave for home tomorrow after completing several important transactions.

In discussing conditions on the Coast and the outlook for the coming season Bershon said he felt very enthusiastic over the promise. This, especially from the production end of the business. "I think the big companies, in fact practically all the important companies have an excellent program outlined for the coming year. There should be more good pictures than ever before. And this should result in better business. Good pictures always bring in more business."

Arthur was also enthusiastic over the outlook and this led to the question of what the West Coast planned in view of increased operating cost, as well as higher rentals, due to increased cost of production. When told that Marcus Loew was on record as favoring higher admissions both Bershon and Arthur admitted that this was the natural course to pursue. "Indeed," said Arthur, "West Coast saw this coming months ago and planned accordingly. We have been increasing our admission prices steadily. Of course on the Coast, especially in Southern California we have a better chance to raise prices than perhaps some other sections. Out there everyone is interested all the time in the actual business of making pictures."

ject as the editor himself. The only thing that makes an editor more powerful than you is the fact that he has some way of spreading his thought among the public. You have a way, too. You can not only spread your own ideas through the medium of your regular paid advertising space, but also on your screen.

Make use of both. Build up a reputation for yourself as a leader and as a thinker. Do everything you can to arouse everybody's civic pride and keep it aroused. Now and then, if you are gifted with a sense of humor, express yourself in a semi-humorous way.

Make your ads human.

Make them express your personality. Inject something into them that will simply compel people to look for everything you say. Get them into the habit of looking up your ad the minute they pick up the paper.

Believe me, you will accomplish much good by this method.

First, you will make yourself a power for good to your community.

Second, you will stimulate interest in your advertising and therefore in your theater.

So will you please arrange another

Griffith To Make Historical Film

D. W. Griffith will shortly begin filming the historical drama he has had in mind for a number of years. The Griffith staff is busily doing research work, with Griffith undecided as to which of several characters in early American history will be used as the principal figure in his story, which he intends making one of the biggest productions of his career.

Griffith has practically decided to abandon all attempts at finishing the Jolson black-face film with another artist substituted for Jolson. He had hoped to secure Lloyd Hamilton to take Jolson's place, having expressed the opinion to friends that Hamilton was the only actor who could play the part as he wished it interpreted, but it was found that Hamilton's contract with Educational would not give him the time to work on the Griffith picture.

Governmental Picture Control

Some of the ablest men in the business; several occupying places of the utmost importance, are giving this question a lot of thought: Is there, back of the investigation of the Famous Players-Lasky by the Federal Trade Commission, the thought of the Government taking over control of the industry?

You cannot throw the idea away by saying "bunk" and "bosh." You cannot ignore the tremendous importance of the idea, even though you may not agree that it is likely, or even contemplated.

NO ONE REALIZES THE VALUE AND IMPORTANCE OF THE SCREEN TO A GREATER EXTENT THAN CERTAIN WELL POSTED GENTLEMEN WHO RUN THE POLITICAL MACHINES OF THIS COUNTRY. AND THEY ALSO REALIZE THIS: THAT THE PARTY IN POWER AT THE TIME THE MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY IS CONTROLLED BY THE GOVERNMENT WILL RETAIN POLITICAL POWER FOR AN INDEFINITELY LONG PERIOD, BECAUSE THROUGH THIS CONTROL THE SCREENS COULD BE USED TO MAKE THAT POLITICAL PARTY AN OLIGARCHY, RETAINING POWER ENDLESSLY.

But regardless of the political phase of the situation the actual menace to the business—to their business—your business—is what concerns these men who are doing the tall thinking. And so they are watching the Trade Commission work carefully, going over the daily evidence and trying to find the spots which may be used as the attacking points by those who may have in mind the idea of Governmental control of pictures.

All who have watched the miscellaneous ideas that develop in various state censor organizations realize the possible difficulties which might develop through Governmental control of the industry. To the politicians, en masse, the idea of a Board or Commission to control pictures has always been luscious. It means a lot of jobs; a lot of "pap." And to the politician with a lot of "boys" to look after, and a lot of desirable jobs always to be filled, the thought is appealing. There have been some—so far they have been termed "reformers" and "fanatics" who, back of the smoke screen of the demand for control because of the type of pictures presented, have this vision. A bill was filed in the Senate a year or so ago. Fortunately it never saw daylight. A so-called "reformer" filed it. He was actuated to do so, so he said, because of the type of pictures being shown. It is true that a "reformer" might become a Senator. But it is also true that you don't get into the United States Senate unless you have some sort of a political schooling, and political knowledge. It cannot be done. And so, back of this "reformer" might easily have been the thought that to day is feared as actuating, among

Willing To Co-Operate

To Bring About a Saving in Distribution

By M. H. Hoffman, Tiffany Prod., Inc.

It seems that the general spirit of accord which has greeted the article, "THE GOLDEN BUBBLE" by Alexander Aronson, General Manager of Sales of Truart Film Corporation, indicates that the distributors, "old time" and independent, are not only in sympathy with a revolutionary distribution plan, such as suggested by Mr. Aronson, but will welcome the opportunity to put it into effect if someone will recommend how it is to be done.

The Real Spirit

Of good understanding. The right spirit. Breathing co-operation and good will. A priceless thing in any business; doubly valuable in this. At the bon voyage dinner tendered by Samuel Goldwyn to Robert Lieber. Prior to Lieber's departure for Europe, today. At the Ritz Thursday night.

Said Billy Brandt of the MPTO of New York: "If some of my Bolsheviks wanted to put an end to the picture business, this would be the spot to start."

For practical purposes he was right. For at the table were Zukor, Lieber, Marcus Loew, Rowland, Goldwyn, Jules Mastbaum, Al Woods, and a host of others. All important, all factors in this industry. And from Zukor on there was voiced a spirit of co-operation, of good feeling, of brotherly interest, of sincerity, that made for a new era.

There cannot be too many of such affairs. Because when you get men with a common interest around a table they soon dissipate their varying difficulties and annoyances. There should be more of such affairs. Where all branches of the business meet; swap ideas; develop better kinship, reach a better understanding. And from expressions voiced there will be. That will be fine.

And because of this step forward; because of this splendid move Samuel Goldwyn deserves not only praise, but the thanks of the industry.

Phil Selznick has gone and done it. And quit the picture business for insurance. Way out in Ohio. And sends forth a mourning band around an envelope. With a catchline in the corner: "Prepare to Meet Thy Maker—P. S.: with a clear conscience."

Penitent. Perhaps recalling some of his earlier film days.

THAT FOX INSERT

Has sure set the sales end of the business on its ears. The same idea that developed the Fox super specials, the spectacular productions—bigger than the other fellow's—evidently inspired this. Because nothing like 72 pages of advertising—all in color—have ever been issued by any company before.

It's inspiring; leads to the thought: what will come next? But this is sure—if there weren't 72 pages it would still attract attention. Because it is built with a showman's eye for showmen's eyes. It is built to attract attention. And the yellow and red of its color scheme; the many vari-colored plates, are attractive to a degree. Some of the high-brows may opine, with a lifting of their sagacious eye brows that this color scheme will not "do" for the operators of the big million dollar palaces. But after all that is a matter of opinion. And one man's guess is only another man's gamble. This is sure: if there is an exhibitor, big or little, who lets this get by without reading it, we'd like to know who he is. And where he lives. Because he don't belong in this business.

S'NUFF

There isn't any room left. I've taken so much space with that darned political angle stuff that we're sunk. But it's important. And you'd better read it all.

DANNY.

rection shape up most satisfactorily. The story is an adaptation of the musical comedy of the same name, with much clever business added.

Box Office Angle—This should hit big with any type of audience. It is brimful of clean comedy, thrills and action. Will equal "The Hottentot" as a draw, with many crackerjack exploitation angles available.

Jack London's "The Call of the Wild"

Hal Roach—Pathe Exchange, Inc. A very satisfactory adaptation of Jack London's novel. The entire story revolves around an Alaskan sled-dog, and provides fine entertainment. Audiences will like the dog, but the snow stuff is particularly good.

The small cast works well, photography (mostly exteriors) and direction, get over.

Box Office Angle—This should prove a satisfactory audience picture anywhere. Jack London's name will help, but emphasize the excellent work of the dog, and promise some unusual snow stuff. It will prove an ideal attraction in warm weather.

Jackie Coogan in "Circus Days" Principal Pictures

"Circus Days" is an adaptation of "Toby Tyler." In producing this one, they only had a thin thread of a story to start with, but have built up a wealth of comedy material to put it across. Jackie runs away from home and joins the circus. And that's the story—his adventures as the peanut purveyor and later as the star performer.

Box Office Angle—Everyone will like this. It savors of the old sawdust ring and the big top. And that's your cue for exploitation. Get them in, and let Jackie do the rest. It's an ideal attraction for all the kids and the rest of us who remember we were once kids.

GREENE

Montmartre Interested

A letter from Felix Orman tells of how the habitués of the Montmartre section of Paris were extremely interested in helping make some of the scenes for "The Beloved Vagabond" which, as noted, will have Carlyle Blackwell in the leading role.

Authors' Advisory Board Organizes

Practical means to bring the author and producer of motion pictures closer together were formulated Tuesday afternoon at an organization meeting of the Authors' Advisory Board, appointed by the First National Congress on Motion Picture Arts, held at the Waldorf. The meeting was held at the home of Alice Duer Miller. Committees were appointed and an executive committee consisting of George Barr Baker, Eric Schuler, C. S. Thompson and Charles E. McCarthy was named to carry on the work of the Board during the Summer.

I believe Mr. Lichtman, in his comment on Mr. Aronson's article, has come as near to answering that question as present conditions permit. He has suggested putting the matter to practical test by inviting all the distributors in the country to a joint conference for the purpose of discussing the matter from every angle. The affiliations of Tiffany Prod., Inc., for example, express willingness to join such conference.

I noted with a great deal of interest Mr. Lichtman's remarks, the statements to the effect that on the project of his organization they found it necessary to shoot only an average of 11,000 feet of negative to obtain a 100 foot feature. If such performances could be consistently obtained by every producer in the business then there would be no question of the fact that very little, if any, saving could be effected in the production of motion pictures. Nevertheless, I can not but recall an article which recently appeared in The Exhibitors Herald to the effect that one of the bigger producing units, which from all past performances knows something of the art of making motion pictures, used 180,000 feet of negative to make a 8,500 foot production. The subject was a well known story and there was the advantage that it had been dramatized once previously.

However, regardless of the fact that a saving can undoubtedly be effected in the production of pictures, I feel that the shortest way to this is that might be termed the longest way 'round. The production of pictures is, or is supposed to be, an art; the distribution is a business. The avoidance of waste, cutting of overhead costs and money-saving is a business proposition, so obviously, the race to save money, the channel in which the good example for the rest of the industry may be set, is first of all, in the business end; that from the order of things, is distribution. If they are wasteful, unorganized, unsystematic and unbusinesslike in the department of the industry which is supposed to be controlled and operated by business men, how can they expect anything better or even as good in that into which the artistic element enters.

The safe, sane and logical place to cut costs and the duplication of unnecessary expense is in distribution. I feel that Mr. Aronson's plan, in operation, will do this. I feel further that the plan is entirely practicable and feasible, and add to Mr. Lichtman's recommendation, my own to the effect that the distributors of the country, as business men, with the best interest of their industry at heart, with the desire to get it upon a business-like, economic basis, confer jointly and discuss ways and means of arriving upon that basis of operating it. It only requires a willingness to cooperate or the proof that such a plan, with proper cooperation and confidence is not practicable.

In the numerous comments made on Mr. Aronson's plan no one has been able to offer even a suggestion of proof that it can not be worked out. I, for one, am ready and willing to cooperate in an endeavor to bring it to a trial.

In the ordinary line of business the usual procedure is to cut cost of production first because that, in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, is the big problem because the basic selling problems in most lines of commercial endeavor are standardized.

But the motion picture is not an ordinary line of business; it is absolutely unique and requires revolutionary methods for its conduct.

Peekskill Case

with producers and distributors to be broken.

In the opinion of the Appellate Division, written by Justice Smith, the Court in the strongest kind of language grants the injunction and in concluding the opinion says:

"An injunction should be issued restraining all parties from inducing the violation of any contracts made between the plaintiff and any film producers. The injunction should further provide that the individual defendants and Loews, Inc., should be restrained from inducing in any manner, directly or indirectly, film producers not to supply their films to the plaintiff corporation, except as and when they may need them for their own exhibition, and an injunction should be granted restraining the other corporation defendants from refusing to sell to the plaintiff corporations any films for the purpose of boycotting the plaintiff and preventing the plaintiff from doing any business or for the purpose of assisting actors in accomplishing said purposes, and from conspiring with the co-defendants or actors to deprive plaintiff of the films necessary to plaintiff's business."

The opinion states that the papers show that the proprietors of the Peekskill theater were warned by certain of the defendants before the building was built that they would have trouble getting films. The papers alleged that after the building was completed and the plaintiff had made contracts for films, the contracts were broken through the acts of the defendants Bernstein, Schenck and Mitchell, who are officers of Loew's Inc. The opinion further says:

"From the papers the conclusion is inevitable that it was the determined effort of these men to prevent the plaintiff from securing pictures and to ruin it's business. The individual defendants were, vice-president, general manager and booking agent of Loew's Inc., and were interested in the Colonial theater, a rival theater in said city, and plaintiff has been heavily damaged by it's failure to procure films for exhibition through the interference of these several defendants.

"The motive of the defendants is clearly shown, both by their acts, and by their statements that they would ruin the plaintiff's business and not allow the plaintiff to procure films for exhibition. The action of the individuals, in their deliberate conspiracy to prevent the plaintiff from obtaining these films for the purpose of ruining the plaintiff, not only renders these defendants liable to criminal prosecution, but makes them liable personally for all damages which the plaintiff has suffered; and the plaintiff is not confined to it's action at law for damages; but the strong arm of equity can stop this unlawful interference by injunction; and to this equitable power plaintiff has appealed."

The opinion states further that Loew's is properly included in the injunction, because it's principal officers "have used the corporation for the purpose of accomplishing their unlawful purposes, and these officers have made the corporation a party to the conspiracy."

The Court says as to the other corporation defendants that while they probably could not be enjoined from breaking a contract if that alone were involved, "nevertheless if this contract were broken as a part of the conspiracy for the purpose of effectuating the boycott of the plaintiff's theater, they are equally guilty with the individuals who have used them and made them a party to their scheme."

Concluding the opinion, Justice Smith says:

"It is claimed that there is no malice here shown, but only a desire to protect the defendants' interest by all their acts of which complaint is made; but the law condemns all acts trespassing upon the legal rights of others as malicious, as a matter of law and will grant reparation in damages, or an injunction where those damages are not capable of specific measurement. This interference must be stopped, and the courts will have no difficulty either by injunction, or if necessary, by the administration of the criminal law to prevent these unlawful acts. The courts have little patience with those who trifle with clear legal rights of another."

Nathan Burkan acted as attorney for the Peekskill theater and William Travers Jerome represented the defendants.

At the Burken offices it was stated that the case will go on the regular calendar and doubtless be reached during the Fall.

Business, industrial and financial leaders throughout America agree that we are facing the greatest period of prosperity during the next year that we have ever enjoyed.

As an Exhibitor of many years experience I am convinced that the Motion Picture Theatre during the coming year will participate to the fullest extent in this prosperity.

As a Producer, and basing my course on these convincing signs of unprecedented prosperity, I have prepared, at great cost in money, time, labor and brain power, a series of productions that will meet every requirement to make FOX PICTURES lead in entertainment value and box office strength.

The Influence and Power of Pictures Among the People

her things, the possibility of a Board or Commission to control pictures.

The very thought which might easily defeat such a scheme, the very idea which might easily develop it. And that is the tremendous importance of the motion picture in the life of the average citizen. It is true that to many people motion pictures mean little. But it is also undeniable that to millions motion pictures, as Will Hays has often said, is the chief means of entertainment, and to millions more, the sole entertainment.

And therefore, should the situation arise where such a Commission be suggested, there is, of course, a natural place to oppose such a movement—on the screens of the theaters of this country. Which, incidentally, is another reason why there should be a perfect understanding and working arrangement between the producers organization and the organized exhibitors; although it is not difficult to conceive that to make such a fight even Sydney Hays might agree to work with Hays and his organization.

One might continue this analysis and comment at length. But one might easily be charged with unnecessary sentiment or zeal in behalf of one's industry. And so that this may not happen I should like you all to read the following. Read it carefully; digest it. It was written by Thomas H. Dickinson. He is not a "picture" man. It was written for the New York Times and appeared in last Sunday's magazine section under the caption "Movies Changing Life of the Nation—occupy 18,000 theaters—estimated films reach 50,000,000 persons a week—rural life most affected—people read less and imbibe more of the screen's type of philosophy."

Mr. Dickinson opens his discussion with the quoted statement of Thomas A. Edison:

"Whoever controls the motion-picture industry controls the most powerful medium of influence over the people."

And goes on to say:

"Is Mr. Edison right? Has an invention so profoundly affected the life of a nation in so brief a period? What power lies with this vast organization? And how is that power being used?"

"The answers are difficult to find. Yet it cannot be contradicted that the motion pictures reach a vast audience daily; and that a huge and intricate mechanism has been constructed to hold and to extend the grip on that audience.

"It has generally been assumed that the presence in the social body of this machinery of continual interchange, of ever renewed appeal to the emotions and the intellect, would have some influence on the mental habits, outlooks, customs of the people, might indeed be employed as a force for influencing, guiding and instructing public opinion. That this assumption is a proper one is undoubtedly true. And yet up to the present the data upon which conclusions of this order can be based are of the vaguest type. Research has hardly discovered this great and potent field of social psychology, much less plumbed it. It is only by broad generalizations that we can give any estimate of the powers thus released into the hands of men who are as surprised to find themselves wielding this power as the public is to find it existing.

"Yet there is available a group of basic facts from which to generalize. Mr. Edison's assertion embodies a direct challenge to the influence exerted by the press. How do the facts, so far as available, support this challenge?"

"There are in round numbers in the United States about 18,000 theaters given over to motion pictures. As a mass agency of popular appeal this number is to be compared to about 2,500 daily papers and 4,000 public libraries. The number of newspapers of all types, daily, tri-weekly, semi-weekly and weekly, is still something more than a thousand less than the number of motion picture theaters. Total publications of all types run to only 3,000 more than the number of motion picture theaters.

Circulation Versus Attendance

"When it comes to circulation; that is to daily contact with large numbers of people, the daily newspaper has the advantage, leading with more than 40,000,000 circulation for the country as a whole. The daily attendance at motion picture theaters is largely a matter of conjecture.

"Theaters listed by the Motion Picture Directory Company of New York for the country as a whole fall into four classes in order of seating capacity, the first running from 1 to 249 seats; the second from 250 to 499; the third from 500 to 799; the fourth, 800 and up. Of all the motion picture theaters in the country about 35 per cent, or something less than 7,000, fall into the second class, seating between 250 and 499. About 30 per cent are made up of theaters seating less than 250. It follows then that the majority of theaters seat less than 500. The remainder, about 5,600, are theaters seating from 500 up to several thousand.

"Averaging up the seating of these four classes and multiplying by the number of theaters, it would appear that there are from eight to ten million seats.

"Daily attendance at the motion picture theater, of course, is not limited to the seating capacity. Most theaters give more than one performance a day and some give as many as five or more. The average figure usually accepted for the daily performances in the motion picture theaters is three, giving available seatings of about 25,000,000 a day. Naturally by no means all of these seats are occupied at every performance. Estimates of attendance the country over run from a minimum of 50,000,000 a week to a maximum of 15,000,000 a day. The first figure is probably too low; the second probably too high.

Favor Quick Turn-over

"While it is impossible to say just what is the average frequency of attendance per person per week even here, we have some straws which show which way the wind blows. Motion picture theater directors have found it desirable to do all possible to promote a quick turn-over. Even in large cities it has been found more profitable to provide a frequent change of bill than to depend upon the extended drawing power of a top-notch feature. Fashions differ between those theaters which serve a congested neighborhood, and the large theaters which serve a city or wide suburban or rural areas. In the former daily changes are the rule; in the latter the rule is two changes a week.

"Averaging the country, as a whole, it is estimated, by the Babson Statistical Organization and other authorities, that 70 per cent of the theaters of the country change their programs three times a week or oftener. From surveys made by civic associations among children in cities and towns it seems that 40 per cent go about once a week; another 40 per cent go twice a week or often. Only 3 per cent do not go to the movies at all. The motion picture theater draws from a wide field, and its audience tends to repeat more or less regularly.

"With respect to the distribution of motion picture theaters among the geographical divisions of the United States compared with that of other social opinion agencies, we have some interesting data. Comparing the distribution of motion picture theaters in centres of population and in rural districts, it is found that the picture theater is quite as much an agency of the sparsely settled areas as of the urban centres. This is demonstrated in two ways, by the comparison of the numbers of motion picture theaters in large cities with the country outside these centres, and by a tabulation, State by State, of the number of thousands of people reached by each theater. This inquiry shows that so far from the city being the favorite haunt of the picture, there are relatively more theaters per unit of population outside the centres than in them.

"One hundred and ninety cities contain a population of about 35,000,000, or about one-third of the population of the country. These cities have less than one-quarter of the motion picture theaters, but the smaller average of theaters in the urban districts is compensated by the higher seating capacities of the city theaters. Whereas the average seating capacity of theaters for the country as a whole is about 500, the average seating capacity of city theaters is about 750.

The Theater Groups

"The distribution of theaters per unit of population is even better brought out by a map showing the number of thousands of people served by the average theater in the several States.

"The first group represents an area in which there is a theater for each 2,500-5,000 of the population.

"The second group a theater for each 5000-8,000 of the population.

"The third group a theater for each 8,000-15,000 of the population. On the basis of these groupings we find the first group with a theater for every three or four thousand of the population covering the entirety of the agricultural and mining country west of the Mississippi with the exception of Missouri, Arkansas, Louisiana, Texas and New Mexico, which falls into the second group. It includes as well the sparsely settled New England States of Vermont, New Hampshire and Maine.

"In the second group, in addition to the States mentioned above west of the Mississippi, are the States of the central highly populated area and the urbanized East Central States and Florida. In the third group, which is poorly provided with theaters, are the Southeastern States, Virginia, Tennessee, North Carolina, South Carolina, Mississippi, Alabama and Georgia.

"Comparing motion picture distribution with that of the other social opinion agencies we find that there is a motion picture theater for every 7,000 of the population, to a daily newspaper for every 40,000 and a public library for every 26,000. There is a library for every 700 square miles, a motion picture theater for every 160 square miles.

II.

"Of all inventions, the alphabet and the printing press alone, excepted, those that have shortened distance have done the most for humanity," wrote Macaulay. When he wrote he referred particularly to the application of steam to land and sea travel. He did not refer to, by the nature of the case he could not foresee that system of the shortening of distances which operates not by transferring the individual to far places and peoples, but by bringing those places and peoples to the individual. This, the motion picture theater has done, and the system of distribution is such that hundreds of thousands of people are literally witnessing the same scenes, participating in the same dramatic action at the same time.

"In estimating the mental influence of the moving picture theater, it is well to remember that when one goes to the movie today he does not sit down only with his neighbors. He mingles with peoples from all parts of the earth.

"The farmer boy and his sweetheart go to the motion picture theater dressed in a fashion not much different from their city cousins. From the screen they derive at first hand, a seeming knowledge of the country as a whole. The Great White Way is their thoroughfare of nightly amusement. The Place de la Concord is the square that lies just at the head of Main Street.

Changing People's Habits

"The motion-picture theater has co-operated with rural free delivery and the Ford car in destroying the rural fastnesses of the country. With the exception of the Southeastern States there remains no American hinterland. The motion-picture theater has become the club, the place of social resort of the small town of the rural districts; it is bringing the back districts into the world. Even in the thinly settled States of Montana and Nevada there is a motion-picture theater for every 4,000 inhabitants. Hum assembly hitherto was a matter of urban districts. The motion picture theater has entered into the smallest units of the State. More than that, it has brought the wide world into the narrow community.

"The motion picture theater is changing the habits of the employment of leisure of the people. Whence comes the two hours a week that the average citizen spends in the movie theater? Some of it comes from time formerly given to labor. Much of it comes from time formerly given to reading. Most of it comes from sport. The sport of the country has become vicarious, has become sport en masse. Where we formerly enjoyed ourselves in small groupings, we now go to large, silent, twilight assemblies, lending our imaginations over to others to stimulate and direct. The term 'recreation' is now no longer apposite. We now amuse ourselves.

"Of the materials offered by the motion picture theater perhaps 20 per cent is directly educational in the sense in which the newspaper and the general magazine is educational. An established feature of the motion picture program today is the news reel and the screen magazine. Only less common is the short scenic and scientific film. But it would be a narrow interpretation that would limit the educational forces of the screen to the educational features, so-called.

"I used to hold by the instructed brain—the heart leads the way," wrote Browning.

"These screen features appeal to a very few elementary emotions. They glorify the same things, the simple virtues, the great outdoors, strong, successful men, beautiful, pure women, expert coloring; they despise the same things, 'superior' people; welchers, crooks, foreigners. Sin always gets its retribution; paths always lead in lovers' meetings.

"What have we here but the influences over our business deals, and therefore the governing principles of our voting? It would not be difficult to catalogue the American popular philosophy out of the critical standards of the movies. As we live by the vote. It is not for nothing that in the first run theaters of the country a million people may be gazing at the same scenes at the same time. What they see is partly a reflection of what they are. What they are is no less influenced by what they see.

"The vogue of the motion picture implies widespread social and psychological changes. In direct appeal, in the economizing of the symbols of expression, in multiplying records, the motion picture offers manifest advantages over other instruments of general communication. As the toilsome processes of thought become sub-conscious it may become unnecessary always to spell out each concept with verbal symbols. When this occurs it will be the opportunity of the motion picture. There is no reason to believe that there may not soon be assembly places given over entirely to news and educational features. Most schools and institutes and forums will have their projection rooms. Before the motion picture can come to its full stature differentiation will have to be introduced into the business. It is unreasonable that all theaters in the country should be cut to the same vulgar pattern, that this rich and flexible medium should be used alone for stories and thrills, that the producer who would make historical and scientific records of great importance should find his product despised in favor of stories dealing with the frayed rags of passion.

"The rule today in the motion picture theater seems to be that nothing shall get the light at all unless it appeals to the million. Pictures would charm and instruct the hundred thousand but die in darkness unseen. Such a policy fails to employ some of the richest potentialities of the screen.

III.

"Speaking in Parliament in 1807, the politician Windham confessed that 'he never saw a man of low condition with a newspaper in his hand, and who read any of it, without comparing him to a man who was swallowing poison under the hope of improving his health.' If Windham feared the poison of the press, what would he have thought of the many flavored juices

Reviews of the Newest Features

William Desmond in "McGuire of the Mounted"

Universal

As a Whole.....CONVENTIONAL MOUNTED POLICE STORY BUT LACKS THE ACTION EXPECTED; RATHER WEAK OFFERING THAT HASN'T VERY MANY POSSIBILITIES.

Star.....William Desmond capable and pleasing but made to do some very improbable things; his performance could hardly rise above the shortcomings of the story.

Cast.....The usual line-up of villains; they do all the damage possible for four and a half reels but hero outwits them in the end; those who appear are Louise Lorraine, Willard Louis, Vera James, P. J. Lockney, Wm. A. Lowery, Peggy Browne, Frank Johnson and Jack Walters.

Type of Story.....Northwoods meller. It's the old, old hokum of the smugglers and the Mounted Police with the dance hall girl exposing the gang and saving the officer; nothing new and no action to compensate.

Box Office Angle.....Slight unless you know that they like Northwest Mounted stories enough to not care particularly whether the story is old or new; won't do if they are at all critical.

Exploitation.....You can't spend much on this one because the business will hardly warrant it.

Stick to poster advertising, lobby display, stills and whatever exploitation of this order that you can give it.

There isn't much in the way of stunt exploitation that you can do. Have a man in the uniform of a mounted officer distribute throw-aways, as per Universal's press sheet suggestion, reading: "I am looking for the girl I love, I could not marry her but now I can; if you see 'McGuire of the Mounted' you will know why."

Direction by.....Richard Stanton; couldn't do much with material although the development at times could have been made to appear less improbable.

Authors.....Raymond L. Schrock and George Hively.

Scenario.....George Hively

Cameraman.....Ben F. Kline

Photography.....Good

Locale.....Northwoods

Length.....5,020 feet

Jacob Fabian presents "The Chase"

As a Whole.....FINE COOLING ATMOSPHERE AND A GOOD NOVELTY NUMBER; VERY APPROPRIATE FOR USE WITH ATTRACTIVE SHORT REEL PROGRAM.

Cast.....Skii champions of the Alps with last year's winner providing many spectacular stunts that furnish an interesting entertainment; no names that will mean anything.

Type of Story.....There is no plot; the picture consists of a game of hare and hound with the pursuers and pursued sliding and leaping all over the Alps; delightful snow covered country makes it thoroughly appropriate for summer trade.

Box Office Angle.....Offers good variation from the regular routine of photoplay entertainment; best played up as a novelty and you can work it in nicely with other novelty numbers which will permit you to play up the bill as offering a novelty program.

Exploitation.....Probably the most effective means of interesting them in "The Chase" will be to concentrate on its atmosphere with promises for a genuine hot weather entertainment. Use plenty of stills that will let them know what the snow covered Alps is what they will see.

A lobby display could be attractively designed to indicate the atmosphere of the picture and very likely entice them in to cool off. Use cotton and silver dust to represent snow and artificial icicles. If you happen to have a cooling process in your theater, you can make the usual promises for it being 100% cooler inside, etc.

Next get them interested in the real thrills that the picture contains. They may have seen skii jumping as contained in the news weeklies showing pictures of contests but they haven't seen skiing to the extent that it is seen in "The Chase."

You can make promises for the thrills and if you want to give them an idea of what to expect you might show a trailer including some of the more exciting leaps.

Throw-aways can read: "Have you ever played hare and hound?" Maybe, but never on skii's. See 'The Chase' for new thrills and cool off on views of the snow covered Alps."

Direction by.....Not credited; mostly a matter of securing the jumps and picturing the champions to advantage.

Author.....Not credited

Scenario.....Not credited

Cameraman.....Not credited; has secured many fine shots.

Photography.....Very good

Locale.....The Alps

Length.....4,150 feet

"The Self-made Wife"

Universal

As a Whole.....A RATHER NEW ANGLE ON SUDDEN RICHES THEME THAT FURNISHES FAIRLY INTERESTING MATERIAL AND AN AVERAGE ENTERTAINMENT.

Players.....Ethel Grey Terry especially well suited and does good work in role of wife who doesn't take the trouble to adapt herself to newly acquired wealth; Craufurd Kent satisfactory as the husband who keeps ahead of her; others Phillips Smalley, Dorothy Cummings, Virginia Ainsworth.

Type of Story.....Deals with married life and offers some fairly new ideas; woman fails to supply herself with the luxuries that her husband's new found wealth permits but their trouble ends happily when she adjusts herself to the new life.

Box Office Angle.....Good average picture that will probably please a majority; they are always more or less interested in a story that deals with married life and its problems; the story in this one has some new twists and they are not likely to figure it out for themselves; the development holds the interest very well.

Exploitation.....That the story by Elizabeth Alexander appeared in the Saturday Evening Post gives you something right off to boost it. Let them know that it is a Post story and those who may have read it will want to see it in picture form.

Your local womens' shops should be glad to cooperate with you on this one. In their display windows where they are showing the latest in gowns, etc. a sign could read: "These are the accessories of 'A Self-Made Wife.'" Or, "Fine feathers make fine birds." See it proven again in "A Self-Made Wife" at the blank theater.

A suggested stunt is that of having a fashionably gowned woman go through the streets, carrying a parasol with the following imprinted on it: "I am a 'Self-Made Wife.' Come to the blank theater on (showing date) and see why."

Stills of Ethel Grey Terry as she appears after she adapts herself to fashion will interest them. Miss Terry makes a stunning appearance in a silver cloth gown. The women will be interested from this standpoint. You might direct your advertising to them particularly as the story is one that will appeal to them.

Direction by.....Jack Dillon; makes a good showing for the story and has sustained the interest nicely; there are no give-aways in the development that hint of events to follow.

Author.....Elizabeth Alexander

Scenario.....Albert Kenyon

Cameraman.....William Fildew

Photography.....Good

Locale.....Texas oil fields and New York City.

Length.....4,960 feet

Carl Laemmle presents "Merry-Go-Round"

Universal-Super-Jewel

As a Whole.....DECIDEDLY ONE OF THE YEAR'S BEST PICTURES; A GEM OF AN ENTERTAINMENT THAT WILL SURELY BE GIVEN A HEARTY RECEPTION EVERYWHERE.

Players.....An excellent and capable cast all the way; Mary Philbin beautiful and certain to bring the tears for her emotional bits even though they are occasionally overdone; Norman Kerry carries off hero honors satisfactorily and unusually fine character parts are handled by such clever portrayers as George Seigmann, Dale Fuller, George Hackathorne and Cesare Gravina; several minor roles equally well played by Dorothy Wallace, Sidney Bracey, Maude George and others.

Type of Story.....Melodrama in the main but much time devoted to pure romance of the most impelling sort, the love of a gypsy organ-grinder girl for a Count whose real identity she doesn't learn until she meets him face to face in his uniform and in the company of his wife; it is beautifully told and with more really subtle touches and genuine entertaining elements than many pictures put together.

Box Office Angle.....Should be immense; "all the world loves a lover" and they'll weep with the heroine of this and enjoy it; probably will be one of the year's biggest bets Exploitation.....Whatever else you do, get them in. Here is Universal's biggest bet so far for next season.

From the title here you have your best exploitation stunt. Get a traveling merry-go-round, the sort that is operated on a wagon and have it parade the streets well in advance of the showing. Offer free rides for the kiddies and, of course, have it well decorated with announcements of the showing dates.

In front of your theater offer a punch and judy show which should attract considerable attention. You need not wait until the showing date for this but stage the show well in advance.

Dress your lobby to represent the entrance to an amusement park and have the entrance outlined in electric lights.

Direction by.....Rupert Julian; spent a good deal of Universal's cash on this one but the results prove it was well spent; picture is probably too long now for the average house but it can be cut without injury

Julian has done a splendid job, his touches of pathos bring lumps in the throat and tears.

Author.....Not credited

Scenario.....Not credited

Cameraman.....Charles Kaufman and Wm. Daniels.

Photography.....Splendid

Locale.....Vienna; an amusement resort.

Length.....9,178 feet

Putting It Over

Here is how a brother exhibitor put his show over. Send along your ideas. Let the other fellow know how you cleaned up.

Keith House Uses Ballyhoo

As an exploitation stunt for "Garson's Finish," B. F. Keith's Eighty-first Street, used a street ballyhoo with three race horses, blanketed and posed as if they were being led to a race track. On the blankets of the horses were signs "Meet me in the great racing photodrama, 'Garson's Finish,' at B. F. Keith's Eighty-First Street Theater this week." The horses paraded up Riverside Drive and later came to Times Square and along Broadway.

Traveling Salesmen Solicited

Connersville, Ind.—H. T. Snowden, and J. J. Schilling of the Auditorium, made a special drive on traveling salesmen and merchants of that town for the showing of "The Strangers' Banquet." A card was placed in every room of the three hotels of the city. The card read: "After a hard day of selling, relax your mind by seeing 'The Strangers' Banquet,' at the Auditorium Theater." Three thousand paper napkins were also distributed in various cafes and restaurants, while the newspaper campaign extending over a period of six days, starting with six inches and ending with forty inches.

Something Unusual, But Good

Centralia, Ill.—E. H. Brient, of the Lincoln, put over a "go-getter" stunt for "The Go-Getter" when that film played the theater.

A newspaper co-operated, outlining the plot of the picture, dwelling on the "go-getting" abilities of the hero. At the end of the article, the editor challenged any couple to come to the theater and be married on the stage, promising to set them up in house-keeping through various tie-ups with the different merchants of the town. The stunt worked, and the couple had their pictures taken with their backs to the camera before the ceremony, which made everybody wonder who they were, and brought the crowds to the theater. The merchants were generous, and even the Justice of the Peace performed the ceremony gratis.

Free Coffee For "Grumpy"

Duluth.—"Grumpy" was put over at the Lyceum by Manager J. B. Brinton and Jack Hellman, Paramount exploiter when a wholesale coffee company tied up with the theater and furnished coffee enough to fill 5,000 bags furnished by the theater reading: "This is the decent cup of coffee that Theodore Roberts couldn't get in 'Grumpy.'" The coffee was distributed by girls. A Greek candy-maker was induced to make a "Grumpy Bar," which he advertised in a window display. A jewelry store gave the theater a window, taking the diamond angle, and a millinery shop chimed in with a hat, playing up May McAvoy.

Short Subjects

"The Cuckoo's Secret"—Bray Nature picture

Type of production . . . 1 reel nature picture
For naturalists, or in fact anyone interested in birds, "The Cuckoo's Secret" should offer interesting material. For others it will supply diversion of a novel order. The average person doesn't know much about bird life outside of the fact that birds really exist. "The Cuckoo's Secret" divulges the secrets of the cuckoo with some unusual views of the little bird's home life, his habits and his family. The remarkable feature of the offering is the fact that it was possible to secure such intimate views of the timid little things. This is a very suitable short subject.

Type of production . . . 2 reel adventure picture
This is an interesting short subject that offers story of Arctic life with glimpses of Alaska's great moose and giant grizzly. The opening shots contain pleasing views of the moose, some of the scenes being very good and others not quite as effective since the animals are lost to view in the thickness of the shrubbery. Others present the arctic bear in his native lair. The latter half of the number presents very attractive scenic views of the North country that are pictorially appealing. The offering will go nicely on most any program.

Type of production . . . 1 reel comedy
A one reeler that derives its title from a little negro boy of the same name, who seems to be new to the screen, but will get quite a few laughs. He is an incorrigible "chicken fancier" and always has a hen or two somewhere about him. This one is also good for those who enjoy slapstick. Fred Hibbard has directed and Francis Corby is to be given credit for the photography.

Type of production . . . 1 reel comedy
The exceedingly good photography is an outstanding feature of this Stan Laurel comedy, but the action itself is of the familiar slap-stick variety with the gags centering upon the hardships of a traveling salesman's life. There are several bits that may bring laughs, however. Laurel peddles a liquid that can be used for almost anything from stove polish to hootch, but without any luck whatsoever. It is an average, knock-about comedy that should prove moderately pleasing.

"The Grey Rider"—Bruce Wilderness Tale—Educational—A "Different" Scenic

Type of production . . . 1 reel scenic
This is the second of the new series of Bruce Wilderness Tales and has, as they all have, a distinctly different touch both in the story and its handling. This time it is the story of a sheep herder and his love for a bit of country in the Rockies called Hidden Valley. The story of his death and the return of his ghost is told by one of his friends to a bare-footed lad one morning when the pair are fishing without much success. The exquisite shots of hills and clouds together with the haunting little story of a man's love for the country make this Tale one that will remain in the spectator's memory.

"Won't You Worry"—Universal—Comedy

Type of production . . . 1 reel comedy
This is the first one-reeler in which Bert Roach is starred. If you have been showing the tramp comedies with Neely Edwards and Bert Roach, you can probably draw with this one because Roach's work in the tramp comedies will easily be remembered. Director William Watson has seen fit to eliminate Roach's hobo make-up to an extent in this one, and it may be that they won't like him quite so well without it. However, his work is as good as ever and he is ably supported by Laura LaPlante, as a young, worrisome wife whose husband hires a man to do her worrying for her.—Roach being the victim.

"The Battle"—Max Fleisher—An Exceedingly Clever Cartoon Reel

Type of production . . . 1 reel cartoon comedy
"The Battle," a Max Fleisher "Out of the Inkwell" comedy, is a thoroughly amusing and cleverly handled short reel. The treatment accorded the little cartoon cut-outs is always novel in this brand of comedies, but this time it is particularly well-done. Two artists working side by side are both using the same inkwell. One draws the little clown and the other a harlequin. The artists get into a scrap over the inkwell and the little drawings follow their sponsors with the result that an actual war follows, with troops and cannons on the part of the cartoons who leap off their respective sheets of paper and use the entire room as a battleground, while the artists are having an actual fist-fight. The finish shows the winning troops chasing the vanquished artist and his harlequins out of the place.

of the film? With all its power the press is still under the suasion of a local responsibility. The essence of news is the proximate. But the film has no local responsibility. As intimate and personal in its appeal as the newspaper, it is produced by an organization more centralized, more inaccessible to ordinary social controls, than anything the world of art or opinion has ever seen before.

"The emotion that sways the secret heart of the watcher in Iowa and the Bronx was concocted by recipe in a canning factory in California. Wielder of the strongest, most subtle power over the individual will, over the springs of pleasure and pain from which flow judgment and action, the motion picture is still a product of organization, an organization inbred, exclusive and mechanical. There is always the chance that organization will be its prison house, even its grave, separating it from contact with the people from whom its life is derived.

"There is this difference between the centralization of the organs of art and opinion and the centralization of control even of the necessities of life, such as oil and coal. The more the material commodities are centralized the more accessible they are to the big stick of the people's will. But when you control the organs of art and opinion you control the agencies that feed or starve the will, vulgarize or refine the taste, stimulate or enervate the judgment. Like everything new in the world, the motion picture theater is a problem and an opportunity. It represents elements of power which may be tremendous in promise for American institutions, which may be no less large in portent. "Recent months have shown evidences of disquiet both within and outside the circles of the motion picture theater. On the one hand there has been the demand of censorship. There is nothing new in the fear with which the vast growth of the motion picture industry is being viewed in many quarters today. Other social agencies have sprung up in a night, almost unheralded; these, too, have fallen first into the hands of men of vigorous imagination and ruthless temper, and by the magnitude and suddenness of their development have aroused frenzies of fear and crusades of repression. The theater in the time of Shakespeare, the novel in the eighteenth century, the newspaper a century later, were also extravagantly hailed and extravagantly anathematized.

"More significant than the demand for censorship are the rumblings of discontent which arise from important groups in the theater itself. When the cooks in the kitchen begin to quarrel, let the diner watch for his meal. The disturbances now going on in the motion picture industry are partly technical and commercial. But they are symptomatic of wider dissatisfactions. The motion picture house is not in order. There has been created a great new agency which is not yet adapted to its functions in the State. The State itself is coming to lean more on the agencies so suddenly, so surprisingly, provided in an unexpected quarter. The motion picture theater, which is already one of the factors of popular government, must respond to the people's will. In the words of Peel, 'Public opinion is growing too large for the channels it has been accustomed to run through.'

Gentlemen, here is something to think about.

AL LICHTMAN - President
1650 BROADWAY NEW YORK CITY

WE are writing these lines on the veranda of Harry Latz's Alamac Hotel at Lake Hopatcong, N. J., where New Jersey exhibitors are convening. It would do independent producers much good to hear the many kind things that are being said about their productions of the current season.

Al Lichtman would be the happiest man in the world if he heard the kind things they are saying here about his pictures. Everybody seems to have mopped up on Al's pictures.

Pictures like "Rich Men's Wives" and "Poor Men's Wives" and "Thorns and Orange Blossoms" and "Shadows" seem to have made a friend of every exhibitor in the territory for Al Lichtman and his associates.

The writer was present at a discussion among nine exhibitors who were wrangling with the status of independent pictures. And up spoke Henry P. Nelson, of the Capitol Theatre, Elizabeth, N. J.:

"Say, if independent distributors gave us pictures like those Al Lichtman's firm made last year I wouldn't buy a single outside picture. The Al Lichtman pictures were 100 per cent. pictures and that is the big reason why next season I am going to use his product 100 per cent."

And H. P. is a thorough showman—a hard boiled, "show-me" type of showman who is interested in pictures from the money-making angle. It is a tribute to any firm to have an exhibitor speak of his product as Mr. Nelson spoke of the Preferred Pictures.

And the New Jersey boys are just a few who have been sold 100 per cent. on Al Lichtman. We have found them everywhere. Al Lichtman's Preferred Pictures represent an established product—consistent money-makers, and we look forward to 1923-24 as one that will see that firm and Al Lichtman right up with the institutions of our industry.

Vol. XXV No. 7 Monday, July 9, 1923 Price 5 Cents

The Solution

Percentage, Says Bruce Johnson—Negative Costs 50 Per Cent Higher Than 1922

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

London—In an interview in The Film Renter, E. Bruce Johnson, in charge of First National's foreign department, is quoted:

"The solution of the exhibitors' problem of high rentals, and the renters' problem of high negative cost, lies in percentage.

"Negative costs in the United States for 1923 will average fifty per cent. higher than that of 1922, despite producers' endeavors to reduce that cost.

"That 'all-star cast' type of picture is the coming type, as contrasted with the individual 'star' feature.

"The tendency of even big pictures will be not to exceed six reels.

"The United Kingdom, Australia, Scandinavia, South America, and France are receptive to American film product in the order named."

Pathe's 10-Reel Serial

Pathe will release "Her Dangerous Path," made by Hal Roach and featuring Edna Murphy, Aug. 12. This is the first 10 episode serial ever made by Pathe.

Balaban & Katz Stock Issue

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Chicago—The four houses operated under individual corporations will be combined, probably under the name of Balaban and Katz, Inc., and a stock issue, for public participation, developed by an investment house. It is understood that of the 250,000 shares of common, 50,000 will be sold to the public.

Plan Failed

Julius Singer Tells of Efforts to Combine Independent Exchange Operators

The following has been received from Julius Singer:

Have read with considerable interest the various opinions voiced in Film Daily since publishing the seven reel feature entitled "The Golden Bubble" by Mr. Aronson. You may recall that last fall I conceived the idea of putting all independent Exchanges in New York City under one roof; all Tradepapers gave plenty of space to this plan, endorsing same and pointing out the great benefits that would be derived by distributor as well as exhibitor.

Los Angeles—Reginald Denny will be starred in four Universal special productions during the coming year. His pictures will be known as the Reginald Denny Productions.

Carlos Signs Richard Talmadge

Richard Talmadge has signed with Carlos Prod. for a series to be franchised to the "independent" market by Truart.

Fox Broadway Premieres in Sept.

The Fox specials, "If Winter Comes" and "Monna Vanna" will open for indefinite runs at the Times Square and Central respectively, Sept. 1.

Paramount Schedule for July

"Children of Jazz," a Jerome Storm production; "A Gentleman of Leisure," Jack Holt; "The Law of the Lawless," Dorothy Dalton; "Home-ward Bound," Thomas Meighan.

Contracts and Contrasts

"That the M.P.T.O.A. would reject the 'Uniform' Contract drawn up by Will Hays on behalf of the distributors—and welcomed with so great a show of rather disingenuous enthusiasm by the American Trade press—was a foregone conclusion," says an editorial in Kinemetograph Weekly, London. "To believe otherwise would have been to believe the American exhibitor destitute alike of common sense and an elementary regard for his own legitimate interests.

"Now that we have in full the reasons which have led theater owners on the other side to the definite rejection of this precious 'equitable' form, it is impossible to avoid drawing once again a comparison between British and American conditions which we stated briefly when the 'Uniform' contract was first mooted.

"British exhibitors, in the fundamental matters now at issue in America, already possess the freedom for which the American exhibitor is getting ready to fight. The campaign for a new British contract still more favorable to the exhibitor is an attempt to secure privileges for which the American exhibitor has never asked and probably has not the faintest hopes of ever securing.

"In a sense one would be justified in saying that the position of the American exhibitor is parallel to that of the British renter. It is the distributor who calls the tune in the States; it is the exhibitor in this country, and while it is from the exhibitor in America that the call for concession comes, our own contract controversy is, under the surface, the outcome of the renter's feeling that he is the party who should benefit by any further revision of the form.

"To state as much is not to infer that the renters are necessarily in the right. Even the British exhibitor has one or two grievances in the prevailing methods of the Trade. But it is useful to emphasize, occasionally, the big advantages he possesses by comparison with the Americans.

"The reasonable complacency with which the C.E.A. member regards the 'Fair' form ought to dispose him to such concessions to the renters as may make a uniform British contract, of one sort or another, a possibility once again.

"However big these concessions are, he will still be in a position, relative to the other section of the Trade, which the American would regard as idyllic.

Europe Wants Comedy

Says Rousseau, Pathe Foreign Manager—Big Demand for Serials and Big Specials

Foreign exhibitors are waking up to the fact that their programs must be improved and that the short subject is the one solution of their problem, declares Arthur Rousseau, foreign manager for Pathe, just back from a three months trip to Europe.

Discussing exhibitor problems on the other side, Rousseau says:

"Conditions are about the same as they are here."—Big pictures go over big and small pictures do not. There are long runs also given to the better productions, as in this country. Foreign showmen are just beginning to see that there is something wrong with their programs and are looking toward the short subject for the first time as a program builder.

Jolson's Desertion

May Lead to Legal Difficulties Even tho Griffith May Not Sue

M. L. Malevinsky, of O'Brien, Malevinsky & Driscoll announced on Saturday that he would bring suit against Al Jolson in behalf of Anthony Paul Kelly upon Jolson's return from abroad.

This is the first action threatened against the comedian because of his desertion from the Griffith studios shortly after "Black Magic" was started. While Griffith personally has sustained the greatest loss, there is no indication that he intends bringing action against Jolson. It is said that no contract had been drawn between D. W. and the comedian.

Some members of the cast who were guaranteed eight weeks work are said to have confided to Griffith that they had no intention of holding him to the contract in view of Jolson's desertion. Others, however, are talking of seeing what the Actors Equity can do to recover from Jolson.

"There seems to be a big demand for comedy and comedy drama. Europe still feels the effect of the war and they want to be amused and made to laugh. Photoplays with funny situations and a happy ending get the biggest box-office returns. Harold Lloyd is going very big abroad and 'Safety Last' is a sensation.

"An interesting insight concerning serials is the fact that the American chapter play of the better type is making a big come-back and winning supremacy over the French serial, which was always a great favorite abroad.

"Concerning foreign production it is interesting to note that the majority of the producers in Europe are making big pictures on a gigantic scale for the American market.

WHAT a picture is Universal's "Merry-Go-Round!" They've carried a slogan in conjunction with this fine achievement which read You'll Be Surprised. Well we are surprised. There has been no bombast, no fanfare of trumpets in the exploitation of this intensely human story of Vienna. But no director is going to fail in grasping the advertising possibilities now that it is here. Whatever he says (and he is going to make capital of this effort) should be shouted from the housetops.

We predict great success for "Merry-Go-Round." It is lavish, human, dramatic and rich in its story-telling quality. We especially liked the manner in which the central figures are ever in the foreground regardless of the surging tide of life in the background. Indeed we never lose track of the story—the pathetic little romance of the organ-grinder who found her Prince Charming and made him real when he was inclined to play. The idea here is novel in that picking a figure from a carnival has never been employed before. She might be called a first cousin of the circus performer. Which, of course, makes her fascinating and appealing. For stories of the big top never fail to touch the heart-strings.

Rupert Julian, the director, plays upon these same heart strings with the same effectiveness of a great orchestra leader. He lifts his baton (a simile for a megaphone, if you would have it) and the players respond with fine co-operation and feeling. The concertmaster (it's a concertmistress here) is Mary Philbin who, prior to this picture, had never indicated that she was destined for the high places. It must be that we were blind to her ineffable charm and hidden talent. It has taken a great role to bring out her expressive gifts. Surely Mary Philbin has arrived, Lillian Gish, emotional as she is, could not have done any better. This newcomer (after all she is a newcomer) extracts the deepest sympathy and the most compelling admiration in her wistful and pathetic study of the organ-grinder. Her child-like expression—her youthful naivete—her suggestion of deep humility covering wounded pride—these are but a few of her shadings. And nearly keeping pace with her are players, thoroughly in character, such as George Hackathorne, Norman Kerry, Cesare Gravina and George Seigmann.

"Merry-Go-Round" palpitates with real heartbeats. It sings a colorful swan song. It moves with real, dramatic strokes through scenes which never clash. How deep are the humanities and how finely expressed. Universal has reason to feel immensely proud. Incidentally this company has several prizes which it will take from its magic box before another year has been chalked upon the calendar. With "Merry-Go-Round" and "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" it is setting a dizzy pace. And some dare to say that the screen is going to the bow-wows.

Fifteen or more exchanges participated in the various meetings and I proved to their absolute satisfaction the tremendous amount in dollars and cents that could be saved, at the same time enabling us under the plan which I submitted, to approach closely something that has been the dream of the entire Film Industry—namely "Standardization."

I worked faithfully to put this plan into operation, pointing out the evils of the unnecessary "overhead" the individual exchanges were burdened with and which threatened dire disaster, (since, several of those exchanges have been compelled to close their doors) and while several level-headed Exchange Managers were ready to have a try at this plan, I found as the meetings progressed a peculiar attitude on the part of others who considered themselves on a higher plane than some of their fellow exchange men and having discovered the antagonistic feeling existing among a number of others, I finally with deep regret abandoned the idea, knowing the time would come when the independent exchanges throughout the country will be compelled to get together under some such plan—as otherwise the proverbial handwriting on the wall spells their wreck and ruin!

Mr. Aronson should be given encouragement by the entire industry to help put into operation his plan, I would suggest that his article appearing in your issue of June 18th be reprinted together with an expression from you giving your attitude. Let's have it.

Contracts and Contrasts

"If we look at the reforms for which exhibitors are still fighting in the States, this fact becomes almost ludicrously clear.

"Cash deposits form one serious American grievance. There is not a British exhibitor of established credit who would not laugh at the suggestion of payment seven days before playing, much less at the time of signing the contract.

"The express prohibition of the right to remove from a film material offensive to the public—even if it be an obvious advertisement—is another sore point.

"Again the 'Uniform' contract practically asks the exhibitor to abandon his common law rights.

"Charges for advertising material, in this country, are sometimes excessive, but they almost as frequently represent a definite loss to the renter, and there is an increasing tendency to allow full credit for all such material. The American exhibitor is fighting against the obligation of returning his campaign material after paying for it.

"He resents, also, the obligation to mention the name of the distributor and producer in newspaper space of which he has personally paid a hundred per cent of the cost. No one, that we know, has ever suggested that the British exhibitor should be compelled to subsidise a distributor's goodwill advertising in this way, though, as an act of grace and because it frequently suits his own interests, he frequently mentions the 'brand' of his features.

"Nor, we are quite sure, would British exhibitors long remain quiescent under a contract condition which leaves the renter free to dictate his playing dates.

"To take the contrast further is unnecessary—though it could be extended considerably. The fact that seems to emerge is that, in the phrase of one of our recent visitors from the other side, the British exhibitor is really a mighty lucky fellow.

"And, if so, another excellent reason is supplied, it seems to us, for a compromise in our own Contract dispute. The exhibitor is so strong that his insistence on demands which are as pronouncedly anti-renter as the American contract is anti-exhibitor has compelled distributors (formally, at least) to abandon the idea of a universal contract for the present—with the inevitable results of confusion and ill-felling.

"Let him show his strength by rather more of a disposition to compromise than has lately been obvious.

"He has quite a lot of useful advantages already in hand—and by example might prove inspiring to Will Hays."

The suit filed by the Gotham National Bank against the American Cinema Corp., Walter Neibuhr and others, has been settled, and discontinued on an order signed by Supreme Court Justice McCook.

A default judgment for $5,150 has been filed in the Supreme Court in favor of James A. Heitzman against the Richmond Film Prod., Inc., on a note given Jan. 6 last to R. M. Thompson and transferred to the plaintiff.

Supreme Court Justice Pierce has signed an order dismissing the suit of Frank M. Boothe against the National Playhouse Corp., Gerard Roberts, and others to recover $1,650 paid for stock of the corporation on the ground that the stock was worthless and was sold under misrepresentations. It was alleged that the company had no arrangement, as it represents, to build film houses in Louisville, Pittsburgh, Washington and Cincinnati, and that Arland W. Johnson, prompter of the scheme, tied up the assets of the corporation with an attachment in a suit for $153,000 for services.

A good advertising stunt to attract attention to the low temperature maintained at Loew's New York Theater is the erection of a cold air blow pipe which juts out into the street from the entrance of the theater. Come in and keep cool."

Films At Sea

Many Steamship Lines Now Including Picture Programs for Entertainment of Their Guests

Important steamship companies are apparently beginning to recognize the value of motion pictures aboard ships at sea. Several lines have already contracted for pictures while others are understood to have the plan under consideration.

The French line, all Cunard boats and Shipping Board vessels now include motion picture entertainment as part of the day's routine. The Red Star, Munson, White Star and the Japanese-American line, which has its American terminus in Seattle, are understood to be the next to enter upon the necessary arrangements.

It is understood that on many British liners, industrials are being shown regularly in an effort to interest the spectators in purchasing English goods.

Warners Plan Convention

The first annual convention of the exchangemen handling the Warner product will be held at the Drake Hotel, Chicago July 15-16.

Another House for Loew

William and Harry Brandt have sold the West End theater, 5128 New Utrecht Ave., Brooklyn to the Loew circuit, thus giving the latter organization control of three theaters in that section. The others are the Borough Park and the Alpine. It is understood that the Borough Park will house vaudeville and the West End pictures only. The Brandts have also sold their interest in the Garden, 4601 New Utrecht Ave. to Al Friedlander who already held an interest in it. The Brandt theater holdings in Brooklyn are now confined to the Bunny, Parkside, Carlton, and Cumberland.

Golf in England

Reggie Bromhead, of Gaumont, who attended the spring Film Golf Tournament returned to London so enthusiastic that "Freddy" of the Film Renter is inspired to say:

"I am wondering whether a like affair could be promoted in this country?"

Sure, old top, it can. Go ahead. And if necessary we'll send Felix and the Committee over to help make it a success.

104 Foot Sign

For "Little Old New York"—Letters to be 14 Ft. Each in Height—"Yolanda" Started

What Cosmopolitan claims will be the largest electric sign ever constructed for the exploitation of a motion picture will adorn the front of the Cosmopolitan theater when "Little Old New York" opens there on August 1. It will be 104 feet in height and will bear the lettering "Marion Davies in Little Old New York." Each letter in the star's name will be 14 feet in height.

The lower end of the sign will be on a level with the third story of the theater building and in all likelihood will be visible for some distance. It will be constructed by the Electric Sign Co. for whom the order was secured by Sam Roth.

Work was started yesterday on "Yolanda," Marion Davies' new picture. The opening scenes will be made in the Tilford studio on West 44th St. with Robert G. Vignola directing. Cosmopolitan officials openly declare this will be the most elaborate picture the company has ever attempted. The story occurs in France during the reign of Louis XI in the 15th century. One episode depicts a battle in which Cosmopolitan says 6,000 men will take part, all of them in armor. This will be staged near Stamford.

Cummings Will State Right

Irving Cummings will state-right his own productions. He has sold the Ohio rights on "Broken Hearts of Broadway" to E. Mandelbaum. Cummings has opened offices in the Loew State building.

Trans-Canada Liquidating (Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Montreal—Trans-Canada Theaters, Ltd., has gone into liquidation, thus ending another ambitious theater enterprise. The company was organized in 1919 and at one time, controlled more than 100 houses. It is intimated that the equity held in many houses will more than cover all liabilities but it is understood that the shareholders will lose heavily.

To Follow Michigan and Minnesota? (Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Chicago—There has been considerable discussion lately in local exhibitor circles relative to the possibility of calling a meeting of the Illinois M. P. T. O., to take action on whether or not Illinois shall follow Michigan and Minnesota in seceding from the national organization.

Institutional Advertising

The institutional advertising conducted by Balaban & Katz of Chicago has proven one of the greatest advertising campaigns ever conducted among exhibitors. It has built goodwill for the four theaters of this group to an amazing degree. The "Chicago" is one of the greatest money-makers among all the profitable theaters of this country.

Because it is believed that every showman, especially those conducting large, important first or second run houses can use this title, or a like campaign to profit and advantage THE FILM DAILY will, beginning with next Sunday's issue, reproduce many of the most effective ads of this campaign. There after they will appear every Sunday.

It is suggested that these advertisements be retained and filed for future use.

He will take over the duties until now handled by Floyd M. Brockell who, in turn, will do special work for First National, the nature of which has not been divulged.

No successor in Eschmann's place has been named. This, in all probability, will be done by Elmer R. Pearson, who returns to New York today from Los Angeles.

Goldburg Plans Trip

J. J. Goldburg leaves for a short trip to Canada today. Upon his return he will go to the coast to place two new pictures in production for ultimate release through Independent Pictures Corp. He will be on the Coast for three months.

Fox Releasing "Red Russia"

The Fox organization will release "Red Russia Revealed" on July 14. The picture is in several reels and is claimed by the Fox offices to be one of the first films to come out of that country which shows the situation there under Soviet rule.

Tivoli, London Leased?

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

London—Ernest W. Fredman in "The Film Renter," says that, despite reports that Famous Players, Goldwyn and Fox had secured the lease of the new Tivoli theater, which James White is building, in all probability, Ben Blumenthal and Walter Wanger will be the joint lessees.

Buy Fineman Feature

Lawrence Weber and Bobby North announced yesterday the purchase of world's rights of "Don't Marry for Money," produced on the coast by B. P. ("Bernie") Fineman. The picture will be stated righted. Another release of that organization will be "Marriage Morals," the second William Nigh picture.

Siegel has purchased an interest in the Apollo exchange and will act as general manager. Lester Adler, former Associated Exhibitor manager will assume Siegel's place at Selznick while Ben Schwartz, at present Apollo manager may take Adler's post.

Arrow Wins Storage Suit

As a result of a decision favoring Arrow as against the City of New York it is expected the regulations governing the storage of films in the Candler Bldg., Mecca Bldg., Leavitt Bldg., and others of similar construction will be lightened. Under Chapter 10, Article 20, Section 240 of the city ordinances, no more than 5,000 ft. of film can be stored without a permit and permits, according to film men, are hard to secure.

The city charged Arrow with a violation but Magistrate Earl E. Smith ruled there had been none, although it was true that more than 5,000 ft. of film had been found on the premises. The defense was that the films were not stored but were merely held during the business day. Harry C. Kosch appeared for Arrow.

Air Conditioning

The Answer to the Exhibitor's Summer Problem, Says Harry Goetz

Harry Goetz, of the Erbograph Co., forwards the following:

"Being a subscriber to your valuable paper, I cannot help but read the discussions pro and con, anent the summer problem of the exhibitor. I am indeed surprised that in this advanced and scientific age that this matter should cause so much discussion when the remedy is a very simple one.

"Some eight years ago when we built our present laboratory we decided that the summer season was a very poor one for the manufacturer of film, the same as it is for the exhibitor. In high temperature and in humid weather it became practically impossible to handle film. We found the remedy for this in air-conditioning by the means of refrigeration. We are able to make our own weather so to speak, and on the hottest days of the year have it cool and comfortable indoors with a variation in the temperature as between inside and out, of from ten to fifteen degrees.

"I understand that the McVickers Theater, Chicago, has an air-conditioning system of this kind operating, and that the patrons of that theater attend regardless of the attraction. It is reasonable to assume this, as one can readily appreciate that if the temperature is around 95°, and one can sit in a theater with a temperature of approximately 78°, that it is worth the price of admission and more. (Ask Aaron Jones).

"The argument might be advanced that air-conditioning is a very expensive proposition, but it is nothing compared to the total cost of a great many of our present day theaters. We ourselves operate a seventy-five ton machine, and I believe a machine of 150 tons capacity can take care of the largest sized theater at an initial cost of not more than $50,000. If the installation of a system such as this in some of the large theaters would make it possible for them to do a business as good as normal, or better, over eight or ten weeks of the hottest time of the year, it would pay for itself in very short order.

"There are different kinds and degrees of air-conditioning and the small houses could go in for that kind which is less expensive and which would suit their needs.

"This I believe is the answer."

SELZNICK DISTRIBUTING CORPORATION

"Rupert of Hentzau"—Selznick Strand

AMERICAN—Beauty of scenery and merit of cast are the chief points of distinction. . . . Important as is the company, impressive as are the settings, the story dominated the film.

DAILY NEWS—Any one who enjoyed the first part of Sir Anthony Hope's lovely romance on the silver screen will be equally satisfied with the sequel. . . . The splendid picture is self-explanatory. . . . A visit to the Strand this week is an enjoyable one, well spent.

EVENING JOURNAL— . . . Another good romantic film . . . eligible to enter the lists of popular romantic screen successes.

EVENING WORLD—If you like your romance spelled with a great big capital "R," . . . then you'll rave over "Rupert of Hentzau."

HERALD—The picture is pretty consistently exciting, although it never rises to any great heights of drama, it is moderately well acted, and it is nearly always pleasing to the eye. This sounds like faint praise, which is exactly what it is intended to be. . . .

The story follows Anthony Hope's whenever it finds it convenient to do so, but it drifts away from the original completely at the finish. . . .

MAIL—It could have been cut to six reels and made an entirely satisfactory picture.

In its present form, many of the stirring incidents lose much of their effect. There are few of the impressive outdoor scenes which made the little kingdom Ruritania live in "The Prisoner of Zenda." . . .

The costumes are rich. The scenes are artistic and built on a huge scale, a fitting setting for a romance such as this.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—It is an ambitious presentation and boast of many large sets of baronial halls as well as some beautiful exteriors. There is action galore throughout the picture.

Although it is a long film it does not drag, and the action is sustained all the way through. Some of the scenes have been directed in a decidedly moviesque manner. . . .

POST—It is a fine production (even the cardboard trains can be forgiven), intense, interesting, and, in all but a very few instances, well acted and directed. . . . The film has a genuine all-star cast.

SUN— . . . a satisfactory film successor to the "Prisoner of Zenda," and should please all lovers of the Zenda stories, in that it sticks closely to the plot of Anthony Hope's romance. . . . "Rupert of Hentzau" is a mighty good film.

TELEGRAM—That stirring romantic story is better in the film form . . . than it was between the covers of the book or on the boards of the speaking stage.

TIMES—This photoplay is equipped with large and impressive settings, that of the street scene in which so many thrilling incidents occur, being particularly charming. The photoplay also is of high standard and pleasingly original in certain sequences, notably the "shots taken looking down upon the players." . . . The sub-titles are sometimes ludicrous. . . .

TRIBUNE— . . . it is a mighty fine picture. . . . magnificent production and it is so well adapted and directed that the interest never for a moment flags.

WORLD—This picture play has cost a great deal of money in the making, as it has a cast of notable stars in its line-up, yet it is cheap looking in places, many of its settings appearing to have been built of cardboard . . . rather poetically inclined sub-titles. . . . At least a third of these tedious "guides" ought to be eliminated. . . . another big film of foreign intrigue—one with its moments of beauty and also its moments of inadequacy and overacting.

"Success"—Metro Capitol

AMERICAN—Brandon Tynan . . . makes of it an interesting bit of theater life.

Tynan does very good acting and lends himself sympathetically to the part. . . . the rest of the cast is capable, the settings are interesting, the atmosphere is carried out well.

DAILY NEWS—"Success" finds its leading character most successful in portraying the unsuccessful. The rest of the cast is as successful in the picture as the film itself will be on Broadway this week. That is, of course, if you think the same as we do about it.

EVENING JOUR. L— . . . of a really fine picture of heart. His (Tynan's) work in the . . . affected not only the great heart of your reviewer, but also his tears ducts, . . .

EVENING WORLD— . . . we thoroughly enjoyed his (Tynan's) screen efforts. This is another instance of how the screen version must be better than the spoken one.

We think you'll like "Success," despite the hot weather. We did! And besides, the accompanying program is very pleasing.

MAIL—Ralph Ince has succeeded in making "Success," . . . an effective and thoroughly entertaining moving picture.

Its ending is one of the most touching we have seen on the screen. . . .

MORNING TELEGRAPH—The story is good, strong drama. . . . The picture, however, is wanting in no important quality for the attainment of its title—"Success."

POST—The feature film, "Success," is a real old-time melodrama about the stage—not very interesting as a whole, with the bright spots few and far between.

SUN—Tynan, was quite at home in the role. . . . In view of the rather ham like quality of this actor of the old school, certain very histrionic mannerisms of Tynan can readily be forgiven him. Mary Astor was charmingly simple.

TELEGRAM—Its authors have managed to capture the spirit and atmosphere of the playhouse, and the characters which they have introduced are all actual types.

TIMES— . . . reveals the weaknesses of motion-picture directors more than most others.

All the time one is gazing at this picture one realizes that it could be a beautiful photoplay if done by a master in the art of direction. To accomplish this it would have been better to make the actual scenes longer and to have given more study to all the characters.

TRIBUNE—"Success" is an old-fashioned melodrama done in an old-fashioned way. . . .

WORLD—It seemed a film with a serious moral purpose. Certainly it was not amusement.

"Children of Jazz"—F. P. L. Rialto

AMERICAN—"Children of Jazz," . . . is exactly that sort of a picture. One sits aghast through the first part of it, and wonders just where the younger generation is heading.

EVENING WORLD— . . . just one of those pictures that form an excuse for calling international congresses on motion picture arts in an effort to take the question mark out of the expression, "What's the matter with the movies?"

HERALD— . . . quite as bad as you think it is going to be, no matter how pessimistic your outlook or gloomy your forebodings. . . .

The story is ridiculous, the titles are awful and the whole thing is a waste of time, whether you sit in the seat of the producer or the spectator. Jerome Storm is one of the best directors extant, but he could not do anything with such a story.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—The film has no dull moments and is played by an excellent cast, but the action of the story depends upon two such improbable circumstances that it rather strains one's imagination.

POST—One thing is certain, "Children of Jazz," at the Rialto, does not mean anything and as a film it is no better or worse than most of the pictures which have been showing recently.

SUN— . . . a screen production which is enjoyable, to us at any rate.

Eileen Percy as Babs Weston, a jazz girl, is devastatingly fascinating. . . .

TELEGRAM—Embracing in its story many situations of dramatic power and thrill. . . .

TIMES—Theodore Kosloff is utterly miscast . . . The costumes on the island and the sets are picturesque . . . The novelty of this production makes it quite pleasing as an entertainment.

WORLD— . . . frivolous stuff. . . . Nothing much to it and yet it is pleasing.

Farnum Here

Reported He Plans One Feature to Stage a "Come-Back"—Deal Once on With Truart

William Farnum, with his Fox contract completed, is in New York with reported plans that call for the production of one picture in which, it is said, Farnum will attempt to prove conclusively that he can stage "come-back" that will again place him in his former position as a drawing card.

Farnum is at the Lambs' but could not be reached yesterday for statement relative to his plans. It will be recalled that Coast reports reaching here some weeks ago indicated that he had signed a contract with Truart Prod. While this was not denied at Truart yesterday, it was stated that the matter had never materialized.

Buys the Hollywood Studios

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Los Angeles—William Siström, formerly with Cosmopolitan, has been appointed manager of the Hollywood Studios which have been purchased by a group of which S. M. Tompkins and J. M. ## Coast Exhibitors Slam "Expo"

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Los Angeles—At a meeting held Friday, local exhibitors discussed the exposition situation. They voted the Coliseum show very good but decided that there was no attraction in the exhibit for the public. They also stated that the exhibits of the various companies contain nothing to bring back the people and declared that the fifty cents gate charge is a drawback to a returning public.

Questions Lichtman

Abe Carlos wired the following from Los Angeles yesterday:

"Your issue of July 2 quotes Al Lichtman as stating that for the 11 pictures produced by his organization, each averaging 6,500 ft. there never were more than 11,000 ft. of negative exposed. This is evidently a misprint or a mis-statement. Aronson's article 'The Golden Bubble' is correct. There are few well-regulated studios. Most of them are wasteful."

Build The Theater

So Urges Joe Brandt—Advocates Secondary Consideration for Star in Advertising

Joe Brandt of C. B. C. blames the high cost of production on exhibitors who have consistently built up the reputation of their houses but have concentrated all efforts on popularizing the names of stars and players.

"Exhibitors like Balaban and Katz," says Brandt, "have the right idea. In all of their newspaper advertising and exploitation they dwell upon the value of the entertainment given in their houses. While they do not entirely neglect the names of the stars, the names of their theaters are given preference at all times. The result is that they have built up a consistent business for their houses and if the other exhibitors in this country would follow in their footsteps it would be a short time before the enormous salaries demanded by the stars would be a matter of history. The inflation of salaries is entirely due to the fact that exhibitors insist upon placing the names of the stars in the headlines of their ads and on the marquee of their theaters, and as a result of all this, the stars over-estimate their value."

Winter Business in Summer Time

"Fine pictures will do it every time," says Joe Plunkett, of the Strand, who, to prove his contention, points to the business yesterday and Sunday with "Rupert of Hentzau" as the attraction. "We did a regular winter period Sunday business" said Plunkett, "and yesterday when the house opened we had 155 admissions with the opening of the doors."

The indications are that the picture will be carried over to next week at the Strand.

Fight Pictures

Cause Comment—Operators Here Wary of Handling Them, Fearing Trouble With Govt.

Several large operators in the "independent" field, who claim to have been approached regarding handling the Dempsey-Gibbons fight pictures, say they have been unable to accept the idea of handling the pictures on the grounds that they did not want "to buy trouble with the Government." In consequence it will be interesting to watch what distribution these pictures will obtain, if any.

It is said that the negative is in California, and that a well known film man negotiated a deal with Dempsey and secured the privilege of handling the distribution. But if operators in other territories view the pictures as do some local exchange men distribution may be difficult.

It is said that the price asked for the picture is reasonable, but the great fear of the buyer is difficulty regarding the prints, in view of the existing law regarding interstate commerce. This applies, it is said to those who might be interested in buying foreign rights as well, as the prints would have to come from California.

Some film men say the decision established with the showing of the last fight pictures would establish a precedent, and after a fine was paid the pictures could be shown without further difficulty.

Pathe officials are claiming a record for the development and delivery of scenes at the Dempsey-Gibbons fight arena.

Pathe employes met the second Mineola plane, which got in at 8:30 P. M., on Friday, and brought the undeveloped film in to the Pathe headquarters. On the way to this city, the plane's halt at Chicago had enabled Pathe men to get their Western film to the Pathe laboratory at 418 South Wabash Ave. early Thursday morning. As a result, the pictures were shown in Chicago theaters last afternoon.

Making good time in from Long Island, the Pathe men in New York got to the developing rooms at 9:10 o'clock. In fifty minutes they had developed, cut and assembled 350 ft. of film. It was decided to give one print a preliminary try-out and at 1:50 o'clock on Friday night the reel was run off on the New York Roof. On Saturday the perfected film was shown at Keith, Proctor, Moss and other theaters using Pathe News locally.

Emanuel Cohen, editor of Pathe stated yesterday that his company's films are entirely within the law since they show incidents around the arena and not scenes of the actual fight.

In the Courts

Allan Rock has filed his complaint in the Supreme Court in his suit against Mae Murray and Robert Z. Leonard for $35,000. He alleges that an agreement was made between them in January 1921, by which he was to form ventures to exploit Miss Murray as an actress and Leonard a director. He alleges that the Globe and Tiffany Prod. were formed to carry out the plan, and that the defendants were to get $50,000 from each picture made. He asserts that they got $350,000 from "Peacock Alley," "Fascination," "Broadway Rose," "Jazzmania," "French Doll," "Fashion Row," "Mlle. Midnight" and "Conquest" the two latter being in course of production. He alleges he was to get 10% of what they have received.

The third trial of the suit of the J. S. Printing & Lithograph Co. against Patrick A. Powers and Harry M. and Albert Warner for printing ten years ago for Warners Feature Films, has been ordered by the Appellate Division. The court directed a new trial on the appeal by the plaintiff from a judgment for only $7,955 in the suit for $40,915. The defendants were sued on a guaranty, the plaintiff contending that they were to pay any amount which the Warners Features Films failed to pay both on the sum due when the guaranty was made, and on future work while the defendants contended that they guaranteed only the existing indebtedness and $25,000 lent to the film company by the plaintiff on an agreement that they would get all the printing. The judgment appealed from by the plaintiff represented only the sum due Jan. 1914, after all future payments had been applied on it. The Appellate Division ruled that the evidence does not sustain the verdict of the jury.

A default judgment for $714 has been filed in the City Court by Strauss & Co. Inc., against the Allentown Theater Co. on a note signed by Max Spiegel as president.

A jury in the City Court gave a verdict for the Far Rockaway Strand Theater in a suit of Max Freisinger for $2,000 damages on the ground that while he was playing in the orchestra at the theater he was assaulted by one of the employees.

Ray-Kane Deal Ends

With Product Going Through Asso. Exhibitors—Star No Longer Needs Eastern Manager

The business association of three and a half years existing between Charles Ray and Arthur S. Kane has ended. Now that Ray has decided to release his future product through Associated Exhibitors, Inc., of which Kane is president, the latter's post as Eastern manager for Ray no longer is a necessity.

In that period, the line "Arthur S. Kane presents" has appeared on the main titles of 15 Ray pictures, 13 of which were released through First National and two through United Artists. Kane has also exercised a supervision of all contracts closed by the distributing companies handling the product and has generally taken care of Ray's interests.

Albert A. Kidder, Jr., general manager of the Ray Prod. Inc., is in New York relative to the termination of the arrangement, and also in connection with "The Courtship of Myles Standish." Kidder stated yesterday that production activity on the coast is terrific and that producers who have not had the foresight to engage players ahead are now finding it almost impossible to secure the people they need.

T. O. C. C. in A. B. C. Offices

The T. O. C. C. will shortly move into the offices at 1650 Broadway now occupied by the A. B. C.

At Tuesday's meeting, the T. O. C. C. held a four hour discussion on the rental situation when the evils of high prices for film as compared with soaring operating costs were pointed out.

Found Coast Busy

Elmer Pearson of Pathe returned from Los Angeles yesterday. He said he had never in all his experience seen the coast film colony so busy.

"Everyone is working at capacity," said Pearson yesterday. "All of the studios are rushed. The activity is unprecedented. Hal Roach's plant has six or seven units at work, all turning out product for Pathe."

Pearson declared that no successor for E. A. Eschmann who joins First National on Monday has been appointed.

Behind

Artie Stebbins and Harry Goetz played golf at Inwood yesterday behind Walter Hagen.

But how far behind?

Will Discuss Taxes

M. P. T. O. Atlantic City Meeting to Talk About Legislation—Unit Planned for Canada

What bids fair to be an important meeting of the national officers and board of directors of the M. P. T. O. will be held in Atlantic City, August 6, 7, and 8.

Definite arrangements will be then made to carry into effect the organization's announced program to effect the repeal of the admission and seat taxes as well as securing a modification of the copyright laws so as to set aside the music license tax. The proposal on the part of certain interests to have a national censorship bill and a national Sunday closing bill introduced in the next Congress must also be met, according to the statement.

Swiss Would Bar Foreign Films

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Berne—A petition, now circulating in Switzerland, which has already received numerous signatures, asks the authorities to impose an ad valorem import duty on all foreign films. Such a duty, it is maintained by those who drew up the petition, would have the effect both of stimulating Swiss production and of shutting out altogether many inferior films on which it would not be worth while to pay the duty.

To Make "Tess of D'Urbervilles"

Marshall Neilan will return to the Coast within a few days to begin work on "Tess of the D'Urbervilles," in which Blanche Sweet will play the lead.

"Rupert" Held Over

Third Week for "Merry Go Round"

"Merry Go Round" will be held over for a third week on Broadway. It will be switched from the Rivoli to the Rialto on Sunday. The new Rivoli feature will be Jack Holt in "A Gentleman of Leisure."

Talmadge Film at Apollo

Norma Talmadge's new picture, "Ashes of Vengeance," will open at the Apollo on August 5th for a run.

This is the first Talmadge picture to open at a New York theater aside from the Strand which is the regular home for First National releases. The picture will probably have other runs at legitimate houses throughout the country.

"A Great Idea"

Commenting on THE FILM DAILY'S intent to reproduce the institutional advertising campaign issued by Balaban & Katz, Spyros Skouras of St. Louis says:

It's a great idea. Every showman will benefit from this."

Deal With Halperin

"Tea With a Kick" and Three Others to be Distributed by Associated Exhibitors, Inc.

Four features and a sum of $750,000 are said to be involved in a deal closed between Halperin Prod. and Associated Exhibitors, Inc. All of the pictures are to be produced by Victor Hugo Halperin.

The first of the series is "Tea With a Kick," which was brought here by the Halperins some weeks ago and brought to the attention of the trade in New York through a series of clever exploitation stunts.

"Tea With a Kick," deals with prohibition and has a number of well-known names in the cast. It is the plan of the Halperins to build their other pictures around topics of equal importance and on matters that are of general interest to the public.

Mae Marsh Signed by Warners

Mae Marsh has signed with Warner Brothers to star in "Daddies" David Belasco's stage play. Harry Beaumont will direct.

Hunter's First

Glenn Hunter's first picture for Famous Players will be "West of the Water Tower and not 'Merton of the Movies'" as expected. The picture will be made in the East with Rollin Sturgeon directing and Ernest Torrence and George Fawcett in the support.

Mooser Resigns: Pearson Succeeds

George Mooser has resigned as Far Eastern representative for United Artists. He has been succeeded by H. Wayne Pearson who will represent the company out of Tokio.

Pyramid Picture for Selznick

"Wife in Name Only," produced by Pyramid will be distributed by Selznick. Several of the Pyramid releases are now being handled by Selznick by virtue of the deal with American Releasing but this is the first Pyramid has turned over directly.

Washington—The Internal Revenue Bureau has instructed deputy collectors to make a careful check of admission tax returns over the country, following discrepancies discovered on the books of a number of exhibitors.

It was found in some cases that although the record book containing admission charges tallied with the tax reported for that day, an investigation of the exhibitors' bank account revealed deposits for the corresponding day considerably in excess of the admission returns reported. The Internal Revenue Bureau's campaign, it is learned, will be carried to many theaters in the effort to prevent evasion of the law.

Seek Low Insurance

New York Theater Owners Plan Aggressive Campaign—Prompted by Success of T. O. C. C.

William Brandt, recently elected president of the M. P. T. O. of New York State, has appointed a committee of 17 to work for a reduction in insurance rates as they affect theaters throughout the state. The committee will include in its activities not only fire insurance, but liability, compensation and other forms of insurance used by theaters.

Brandt pointed out yesterday that the success met by the T. O. C. C. in New York in bringing about a reduction of from 25% to 50% in insurance rates in this city. It is undoubtedly as a result of this successful move that the state unit is taking similar action.

The point was raised yesterday that, despite the rigid supervision of local authorities over theater operations, the insurance rates for this class of risk were in many instances higher than those on garages, hotels, tenements, churches, non-fireproof departments stores and similarly built structures. The committee intends securing a mass of details to present to the various companies. Herbert R. Ebenstein, who has insured a number of T. O. C. C. members through his own agency, will cooperate with the committee which is composed of the following:

A. A. Fennycosey, Rochester; Wm. Bernstein, Albany; H. Tibbitt, Rochester; Joe Schuchert, Buffalo; Sam Sheer, Corona; Morris Fitzer, Saratoga; G. H. Tooker, Elmira; C. H. Moore, Hamilton; F. S. Kirk, Malone; Geo. Cohn, Poughkeepsie; Morris Silverman, Schenectady; J. T. Williamson, Niagara Falls; M. J. Kallett, Oneida; Harry Lux, Utica; Nicholas Dipson, Olean; Robert Landry, Ogdensburg and C. A. McCarthy, Hossick Falls.

The statement goes on to say that a representative of Canadian exhibitors was an observer at the national convention and that immediately following that meeting, proposals looking to the formation of a Canadian division were made and are now moving well toward consummation. Several meetings looking toward this end have been held during the past few weeks.

Sydney S. Cohen and other national officers will attend the meeting. Matters affecting legislation in Canada will be cared for entirely by exhibitors there. Cohen expects that several hundred Canadian theater owners will be represented at the initial meeting. It is planned to have a business manager to handle the affairs of the Canadian division with headquarters in Toronto.

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Duluth—Differences between J. B. Clinton of Clinton-Meyers, operators of the Lyceum and Goldwyn, were finally settled by Goldwyn refunding $250 to Clinton. Clinton had contracted for ten pictures at $750, thinking his contract had been approved, and was later informed that he must pay $1,000 with a 50-50 arrangement on gross receipts exceeding $4,500. He appealed to the Minneapolis Film Board of Trade after signing the new contract under protest, and finally took his grievance to Will Hays, who suggested that as the matter was not under his jurisdiction Clinton take the matter up with the Minneapolis Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan manager. Acting upon this suggestion, the dispute was settled by Clinton's receiving the $250 refund.

Walter Wanger in Newsy London Letter, Says Big Pictures Can't Find Homes There

Walter Wanger, writing to Danny from London says in a breezy letter: "The season is at its height, with Morris Gest wearing a grey top hat and Joe Godsol wearing a morning coat and Jake Wilk wearing the same soft shirt which has always identified him in Metropolitan circles. So much for the social world.

"With the exception of the anxiously awaited arrival of Hiram Abrams and Carl Laemmle, the great question is, who has the 'Tivoli.' The next question is where are they going to put the big pictures for a run. Theaters are more in demand than ever and very few are possibilities for pictures.

"Production is looking up very much, and in another year there is no doubt in my mind but that England will be producing some real pictures. As a matter of fact, 'Chu Chin Chow' looks like a winner to me, as you know they have Betty Blythe playing the lead and the stills look great.

WHAT a picture is Universal's "Merry-Go-Round!" They've carried a slogan in conjunction with this fine achievement which read "You'll Be Surprised." Well we are surprised. There has been no bombast no fanfare of trumpets in the exploitation of this intensely human story of Vienna. But no director is going to fail in grasping the advertising possibilities now that it is here. Whatever he says (and he is going to make capital of this effort) should be shouted from the housetops.

We predict great success for "Merry-Go-Round." It is lavish, human, dramatic and rich in its story-telling quality. We especially liked the manner in which the central figures are ever in the foreground regardless of the surging tide of life in the background. Indeed we never lose track of the story—the pathetic little romance of the organ-grinder who found her Prince Charming and made him real when he was inclined to play. The idea here is novel in that picking a figure from a carnival has never been employed before. She might be called a first cousin of the circus performer. Which, of course, makes her fascinating and appealing. For stories of the big top never fail to touch the heart-strings.

Rupert Julian, the director, plays upon these same heart strings with the same effectiveness of a great orchestra leader. He lifts his baton (a simile for a megaphone, if you would have it) and the players respond with fine co-operation and feeling. The concertmaster (it's a concertmistress here) is Mary Philbin who, prior to this picture, had never indicated that she was destined for the high places. It must be that we were blind to her ineffable charm and hidden talent. It has taken a great role to bring out her expressive gifts. Surely Mary Philbin has arrived; Lillian Gish, emotional as she is, could not have done any better. This newcomer (after all she is a newcomer) extracts the deepest sympathy and the most compelling admiration in her wistful and pathetic study of the organ-grinder. Her child-like expression—her youthful naivete—her suggestion of deep humility covering wounded pride—these are but a few of her shadings. And nearly keeping pace with her are players, thoroughly in character, such as George Hackathorne, Norman Kerry, Cesare Gravina and George Seigmann.

"Merry-Go-Round" palpitates with real heartbeats. It sings a colorful swan song. It moves with real, dramatic strokes through scenes which never clash. How deep are the humanities and how finely expressed. Universal has reason to feel immensely proud. Incidentally this company has several prizes which it will take from its magic box before another year has been chalked upon the calendar. With "Merry-Go-Round" and "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" it is setting a dizzy pace. And some dare to say that the secret is going to the how-wows.

Putting it Over

Here is how a brother exhibitor puts his show over. Send along your ideas. Let the other fellow know how you cleaned up.

Spurred on "The Spoilers"

Chicago—Walter D. Nealand, local Goldwynner and W. K. Hollander of Balaban and Katz, got behind the showing of "The Spoilers" here with plenty of vim and vigor. In addition to a heavy newspaper campaign which include two and three columns display advertising in all newspapers, with special stories and layouts, there were the following:

A full showing of the Thomas Cusack boards in choice locations: a tie up with the United Cigar Stores when 350 posters were displayed advertising the Stroller cigarette and "The Spoilers;" 6000 two color placards were displayed in 1500 elevated trains: a travelling billboard 18 ft. long mounted on a truck patrolled the streets for two consecutive weeks: 25,000 imitation fire crackers were distributed from this truck, an advertising insert being used: a tie up with the United States Army whereby on July 4th four Army aeroplanes flew over the city bombarding the streets and bathing beaches, with 100,000 circulars advising the spectators to see "The Spoilers" at the Roosevelt. On the reverse side was printed the advertisement of Camp Custer, a government camp for young men. This stunt attracted a lot of attention as the planes also carried a quantity of the fire crackers.

An attractive lobby and marquee display was made at the Roosevelt. A typical Arctic setting, suggestive of snow and ice, with icicles hanging from the marquee and illuminated at night with twelve spot lights was built. The box-office was transformed into a replica of a log cabin, with glistening snow effect and hanging icicles giving the entire front a realistic Alaskan atmosphere.

Good Stunt on "Divorce"

Los Angeles—An unusual tie-up was effected by Sid Grauman on behalf of "Divorce" which played at the Rialto.

Discovering that there were 200 divorce cases on the calendar, Grauman influenced Judge Summerfield to invite the 200 women to see the production.

The judge issued the passes with his compliments, hoping that many of the women would kiss and make up after seeing the picture and thereby save him a lot of work. A special section was reserved for the women at the Rialto and the stunt drew a lot of free publicity.

In St. Louis a mail advertising campaign in the form of a divorce summons was used at the Kings. The outside cover of the petition had a genuine appearance with the plaintiff and defendant's names written in, with ink.

Complete Campaign For "Vita" Film Salt Lake—A thorough exploitation campaign was recently effected by Marshall Taylor, of the Kinema for the run of "Masters of Men."

Taylor papered the city with 24 sheets, threes and ones, and placed in 25 stores sets of 8 x 10 stills. Thousands of heralds were distributed as well as novelty cutouts of the ship. Taylor designed and built a complete miniature battleship, which he placed on the top of the marquee. This was equipped with a search-light attached to an oscillating fan motor which swung the light from side to side on the passerby. The battleship was illuminated with bank lights. The Navy recruiting station joined in the campaign. The trucks of the Navy were plastered with one sheets tying up with the theater and the service.

Letters Boost Golf Reel

Seattle—Prior to the run of Educational's "Golf, as Played by Gene Sarazen," at Jensen & Von Herberg's Strand, H. B. Wright, manager of the house, exploited this short subject in an effective and economical manner through a series of exceptionally well written letters directed to members of all the golf clubs in Seattle and the immediate vicinity.

The value of this simple bit of exploitation was proved during the run drawing many new patrons to the house, among them a number of the leading figures in business and financial circles.

An Effective Lobby

Minneapolis—When "Lost and Found," was the attraction at the Lyric, the lobby display was given a big drawing power by the use of poster cut-outs, palms, grasses and posters by the house artists.

On each side of the entrance, under the marquee, was placed a cut-out of Pauline Starke in native costume from the 24-sheet poster. The figure was considerably more than life-size. Mounted on the ticket booth, in the center of the entrance, were palms and grasses. Around the ticket window were cut-out heads of House Peters, Pauline Starke and Antonio Moreno.

The head of Miss Starke, with hair flowing, was used by the staff artist for six posters. Frames of stills and oil paintings were placed on the sidewalk.

A Worthwhile Tie-up

McKeesport, Pa.—For "Lost and Found" booked at the Globe, Wm. N. Robson, arranged a tie-up with the National Tube Co., of that city whereby its 7,000 employees had printed and sold special tickets. This was effected in connection with a good-will election which the employees held to send their Miss Hester to France under the auspices of the American Committee for Devastated France. Each ticket sold carried one vote for the company's entrant for this trip to France. Thus 7,000 people were advertising the showing of "Lost and Found" by word of mouth and actually selling tickets.

Officials of the company allowed Robson to post 30 pictorial one-sheets throughout the plant. A "Lost and Found" puzzle picture was wrapped in each package sent out during the showing. Every person who returned the puzzle picture correctly outlined was admitted to the performance free.

Light House Built in Lobby

Duluth, Minn.—A light house, protruding ten feet above the marquee showed patrons the way to "The Isle of Lost Ships" when it played the Garrick. It was painted white with the title of the film in black lettering.

A 500 candle power light, mounted at the top of the House on a wheel, was run by a fan motor, to revolve with the speed of a light house beacon.

Dagmar Godowsky Here

Dagmar Godowsky, who has just completed in "Red Lights" for Goldwyn is in New York.

Gerson Film for Selznick "The Cricket on the Hearth" has also been secured by Selznick. It was produced in San Francisco by Paul Gerson.

My Friends:—

I appreciate all the wonderful things that have been said about "Merry Go Round." Some Eastern newspapers have paid me a greater compliment than they know, although they thought they were praising another.

Of the ten thousand feet in this subject all but approximately six hundred feet were entirely mine.

The story, treatment and characterizations were completely changed by me after I assumed charge of the direction of this production.

WE ANSWERED WITH PICTURES, NOT TALK

No. 340. Straight-From-The-Shoulder Talks

By CARL LAEMMLE
President, Universal Pictures Corporation

THERE has been a lot of talk about BIGGER AND BETTER pictures. And there has been a widespread attempt to cash in on this talk. Many a picture which is no better than the product of five years ago has been advertised as "bigger and better" in the hope of hooking up to the talk of the hour.

Universal has taken the "bigger and better" slogan seriously. It has deliberately set out to make bigger and better pictures than were ever made before—not only better than we ever made but better than anybody ever made before!

Our first answer to the popular demand for bigger and better pictures is "Merry Go Round"! Boy, it's a picture!

On the trial trip of the great ocean liner Leviathan, this picture held in its thrall five hundred American business men of all types—bankers, newspaper men, merchants, senators, congressmen, young and old—and made the greatest hit of the whole trip.

Many of the men who were familiar with Vienna would hardly believe that "Merry Go Round" was not actually produced in Vienna, but was made from beginning to end in Universal City, California, U. S. A. So faithful was our reproduction of well known places in Vienna that they made the positive statement they recognized every inch, even to the lamp posts.

So much for accuracy and lavishness of reproduction. As for the acting, you never saw anything better in your life. The story, as I have already told you, is one of the simplest love stories ever told—the kind your audience loves but so seldom sees.

The sensationally successful run of "Merry Go Round" at the Paramount's Rivoli Theatre on Broadway in the heat of July is history, but it proves several things:

First, that when you have the right picture, you can pack your house regardless of weather conditions.

Second, that "Merry Go Round" is one of the "bigger and better" pictures you have been hoping for.

Third, that Universal has the pictures. "Merry Go Round" is only the first shot out of our big gun. Every shot that follows will be of the bigger and better variety. AND YOU CAN STAKE YOUR LIFE ON IT.

The coming season will be the greatest in the long, successful history of Universal and it will be the greatest in the history of those faithful theatres who have stuck to Universal through thick and thin.

Universal has the pictures, not the talk. And they are BIGGER AND BETTER!

The fact is - - - the truly great pictures for 1923-24 will be

Buys Back Franchise

Preferred To Open Own New York Exchange-Arrangement With Commonwealth Ends

Preferred announced on Friday that it had established its own exchange in the Godfrey Bldg. for the distribution of its product, beginning in the season of 1923-1924. The announcement was made by J. Bachmann, treasurer of the company, upon the completion of negotiations conducted by Al Lichtman and Bachman, with Sam Zierler, president of Commonwealth Film Service, who owned the Preferred franchise for New York and who has sold his holdings to Preferred. Commonwealth will continue to distribute the first eight Preferred pictures on the schedule ending with "Daughters of the Rich." The first lease through the new exchange will be "The Broken Wing."

Deny Combine

Lichtman, the Warners and Louis B. Mayer Call Such Reports Ridiculous

(Special to THE FILM DAILY) Los Angeles—New York reports concerning a three-cornered merger of Preferred Pictures, the Warners and Louis B. Mayer are denied here by all parties concerned.

Al Lichtman said concerning it: "I know nothing of it. I have not seen the Warners or Louis Mayer executives for a few minutes on the studio."

Harry Warner says no such plans are contemplated and that the present method of releasing will not be altered in any way.

Somewhat Delayed

THE FILM DAILY yesterday received from the secretary of the M. P. T. O. of Connecticut a resolution condemning the "unfair, untrue and plainly distorted reports" of the Chicago convention. The resolution was adopted June 27, at the Double Beach convention.

Those "unfair, untrue and plainly distorted reports" of the Chicago convention happen to have become definite facts, as the distorted condition of the M. P. T. O. of America proves.

And no one knows this better than the officials of the Connecticut organization.

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Los Angeles—Earl J. Hudson, business manager of the various First National producing units has left for New York to confer with Richard A. Rowland.

Swearing

To. Not at. Your figures. Taking an oath that you're telling the truth. Harsh words, these, Nell. But just the same it's an idea. Comes from a pretty important exchange man. Who says: "All the trouble; all the difficulty is about who believes each other. And the answer is—no one. That's why the exhibitor and the salesman are always rowing with each other. There's a way out—a way by which all of us could be happy. Let's try it. Here it is—let the producer give a certified statement of his cost. Distribution counts and we all know its cost, approximately, anyway. So we know what the picture stands when it goes into a house. All right then. So now let Mr. Exhibitor, give a certified cost sheet. Of his operations. And then arrange for the right kind of a sharing of the moneys coming in. Then with these certified cost statements on both sides it will be easy—at least it should be—for the proper sharing of the receipts.

"Don't call this 'bunk,'" he went on. "It's being done. The Columbia Burlesque wheel works it out along these lines. And they are pretty successful. Of course they haven't the same problem. But along general lines we are identical. Let's get the certified audit working and see how it develops."

Yes, these are hot days, and one doesn't like to think too much. But this is something to think about.

THE EVERLASTING WHEEL

Whirled again and again last Tuesday. At the discussion of the T.O.C.C. Over high rentals. And probably will continue.

What greater material for thought, inspiration and entertainment have we in the archives of national literature than the LIVES OF OUR PRESIDENTS?

What more fitting monument can we erect than the graphic visualization of their lives, portraying the romantic, dramatic and inspirational impulses that guided their footsteps from infancy to the highest position in our land?

Swearing

Without much being accomplished. Because—and it's the simplest of reasons—the exhibitor won't help himself to stop paying more than he can afford. He would rather "go broke" handling a certain picture that he thinks is a good bet. Sooner than let the other fellow have it. And take his grief with it.

Any time an exhibitor figures he is being asked to pay too much he has one way out. Don't buy. That's all there is to it. Of course this can lead to all sorts of things—such for instance, as groups of exhibitors getting together and doing things that Uncle Sam says is wrong. Such as combining. In what might be called restraint of trade. And when you do that you want to make sure you're not caught. Otherwise you're in a jam. But this constant over bidding for a picture always causes trouble. Always will. And it seems you can't stop it.

There was a chap out in the Middle West. He insisted on paying more for "The Four Horsemen" than Loew could afford. Even in a Loew house. He got it. And went deep into the red. And then cursed distributors. For what they wanted for a picture. And he has a flock of brothers in the business. Even if they have different names.

COMING ATTRACTION

We are busy. Right in the midst of collecting data. Relative to the History of Hiram Abrams. In the picture business. First installment promised. In an early issue.

AN OLD ADAGE

Wise men rent houses. That fools build. It's an old saying. In the real estate business. But it might well be used in this. Apropos of building or renting theaters.

Which, incidentally, is the policy of the Loew organization. Which is renting a lot more houses than ever before. And building fewer.

ALL OR NONE

That's the Warner policy for the coming season. You can have the 18 or not. As you please. And that's all there's to it. From what the doodlebirds say they are doing pretty well, thank you, with this policy.

MORE FROM THE DOODLEBIRDS

They also say that Famous is paying Jeff McCarthy $75,000 for his year's work. To handle "The Covered Wagon" on the road show basis. Quite some change.

LONESOME

Eddy Eschmann will have a fine job at First National. But when lunch time comes he'll be lonesome. The Pearson-Storey-Eschmann combine has been smashed. And the golf scores will be told over the 'phone.

By the way the doodlebirds hint at Storey succeeding Eschmann at Pathe. As sales manager.

IT'S A NAME

"Dhirendranath Gangopadhyaja is not the name of a patent medicine, neither has it anything to do with a guessing competition," says "Kine," of London. Explaining that it's the name of a producer.

Yet the immortal Bard of Avon dared ask, "What's in a name?"

Well, we'll fall, what is in a name?

GELT

From across the Pond come reports that Chaplin's "The Pilgrim" brought approximately $150,000 and a percentage arrangement for the British Isles.

Wow!

"RED'S" COMMENT

You know "Red." Well, he was up in Maine. On a vacation. And dropped in on a few houses. In Portland. And then postcarded: "If Roxy saw Portland theaters—

Those !!! must mean something.

BRILLIANT

J. O. Taylor recently showed his picture "The Pied Piper of Hamelin" to the Hodgkinson organization. And later one of the brilliant young men on the staff wanted to know. Why there were so many rats in the picture.

SUGGESTED TITLE

For the Jolson-Griffith picture. Which will probably never be made—

"Black Magic."

A FEW IDEAS

Monte Katterjohn talking. Monte, if you please, is scenarioizing for Famous. Says Famous is allowing scenario writers far greater liberty than any company in the business. "The scenarioist who will do his best work," says Monte, "is the one who is unhampered. The minute you begin to tie him up with restrictions the scenario writer isn't worth a hang.—He didn't say hang. You guess it.—When you begin to get a lot of people muddling over a script it loses all the individuality of the author. If he isn't the right man for the story take him off. If he doesn't belong to the organization by virtue of what he writes fire him. But if you employ him to write scenarios for the love of Pete let him do it."

THE "DOC" HAS FALLEN

He has been bitten by the bug. Golfastroitis. And is expected to make his debut. With other fillum golfers. At the Fall tournament. Oh, yes; Doctor Riesenfeld. That's who.

"Between Two Worlds"

Artclass

As a Whole... MARVELOUSLY ARTISTIC, WONDERFULLY PRODUCED FOREIGN OFFERING; A QUESTION WHETHER ITS PECULIAR THEME AND HEAVY DRAMA WILL CONSTITUTE ENTERTAINMENT FOR AVERAGE HOUSE.

Players... No familiar names but finely chosen cast whose personalities are subordinate to their characterizations.

Type of Story... An allegorical drama that is entirely different from anything ever before presented on the American screen. It presents a different idea of the meaning of death but will not conflict with any religious belief. There are several cut-back episodes along re-incarnation lines which afford in some instances humorous relief and which have been produced with the utmost care with regard to detail, scenery, etc.

Box Office Angle... Its theme may be over the heads of some, but for those who favor an entertainment that is "different" and that makes them think it should register one hundred per cent. The finish, with its idea of the lovers being reunited after death instead of in the flesh may prove unsatisfying to some, but in view of the story this could not be otherwise.

Exploitation... You had best see this before you decide to play it, as its success at this date is problematic. In case you cater to a clientele that enjoys the unusual and you decide to play it, get behind it in a big way and rely on its unusual qualities to put it over. You can make all the fuss you want to about the production end of this. From an artistic angle it has hardly ever been surpassed. The fact that it had an extensive run in Paris, although under another title, should have drawing power.

Throwaways and newspaper ads should read "What lies on the otherside of the Wall?" "See 'Between Two Worlds' at the blank theater and find out." This idea also lends itself to a lobby display in the shape of an imitation stone wall made of paper-mache, with the same question painted on it.

Direction by... Fritz Lang; has handled a difficult theme with the utmost skill, besides creating scenes of exquisite beauty.

Author... Fritz Lang
Scenario... Fritz Lang
Cameraman... Erich Nitschmann
Photography... Wonderful; some of the best double-exposure shots ever seen.

Locale... A town in Europe; Venice in medieval times; an Emperor's court in ancient China; the Sultan's palace in India.

Length... 6,940 feet

"Three Wise Fools"

Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan

As a Whole... GREAT SUSPENSE AND INTERESTING CHARACTERIZATION MAKE THIS ONE ENJOYABLE ENTERTAINMENT.

Players... Claude Gillingwater, William H. Crane and Alec Francis an ideal trio for title roles; Eleanor Boardman a pretty heroine with William Haines suitable but rather inconspicuous as the hero; others John Sainpolis, Brinsley Shaw, Lucien Littlefield, Zasu Pitts, Martha Mattox, Craig Biddle, Jr., Creighton Hale and Raymond Hatton, (the last three mentioned only appear in one scene.)

Type of Story... Mystery drama touched off with humorous bits of business; well constructed and with good variety of entertaining elements; three rich "old fogies" adopt pretty girl who becomes implicated with crooks who threaten life of one of the men; the denouement is well hidden and the interest splendidly sustained.

Box Office Angle... A real thriller for mystery lovers; they'll have a job trying to beat the director to a conclusion so well does he handle the plot; should be happy choice for your box office.

Exploitation... "Three Wise Fools" should be an easy one to handle. Right off you have a title with fine possibilities for stunt exploitation. Have three men dressed in clown suits, wearing dunce caps, parade about with a youngster heading them off, carrying a sign which reads: "Here come 'The Three Wise Fools.'" After you have aroused curiosity sufficiently with this stunt, announce the showing date of the picture.

For a distribution stunt, give away small paper dunce caps with the title of the picture imprinted upon them.

Show a trailer of the daring prison escape that comes early in the picture and you can make promises for other thrills and a few chills that the mystery business affords.

Broadcast the title. The stage play was a favorite and the picture adaptation should enjoy equal popularity but in a still broader field.

Direction by... King Vidor; has given the stage play a really worth while presentation; the picture ranks with the good ones of the season and should please them all; he has handled the material to splendid advantage and the cast also; a little surplus footage can come out and speed up an occasional slow spot but these spots are not prominent enough to spoil the excellently sustained interest.

Author... Austin Strong
Scenario... King Vidor
Cameraman... Charles Van Enger
Photography... Very good
Locale... The home of three rich old men.

Length... 6,946 feet

"Red Russia Revealed"

Fox

As a Whole... INTERESTING AND INTIMATE VIEWS OF SOVIET GOVERNMENT THAT GIVE VIVID IDEA OF CONDITIONS IN RUSSIA; OFFERING HAS GOOD EDUCATIONAL VALUE AS CURRENT HISTORY

Cast... The armies of Russia, the people and the famed political leaders Trotzky and Lenin; others Kalenin, the peasant president, as well as commissioners of foreign affairs, trade, labor and education.

Type of Story... "Red Russia Revealed" is no fiction plot. It is Soviet Russia as it actually is under the Bolshevik regime. The picture exposes points of vital interest in connection with Soviet rule, starting with views of Trotzky's two million trained soldiers, pictures which contradict the popular impression that this army is poorly trained, underfed and lacking in clothing. They appear well drilled and well equipped. The massed armies of Red Russia are shown as they appear "maneuvering on a half a dozen fields from the Baltic Sea to the Crimea, ready at savage command to drive against western Europe."

The offering proceeds with views of Kalenin, the old peasant president, the pacifier of the peasants, shots of Russia's poor begging fuel, scenes of the Kremlin, and a suggestion of the religious persecution wherein monks are forced, at the point of bayonets, to desecrate the tomb of patriarchs.

Box Office Angle... Of topical interest because it deals with current history and a matter that is of vital interest to the majority of civilized peoples and should prove absorbing to those whose only previous insight into Red Russia has been through the newspapers. The picture offers splendid propaganda in depicting the dangers of Bolshevik government.

Exploitation... The Fox press sheet claims that this compilation of pictures of Russia today is the first to come out of Russia in two years. Certainly there have been no more intimate or extensive views than those to be seen in "Red Russia Revealed."

Play the picture up as representing the "tyranny of Russia amazingly exposed in first authentic pictorial record of actual conditions under Soviet iron rule."

Talk to local educators and political factors who might be interested in helping you exploit it.

You might also protect yourself against any interference from Soviet sympathizers if you are located in a quarter largely inhabited by foreigners.

Photography... Usually all right though occasionally spotted.

Length... 1,600 feet

"Rupert of Hentzau"

Selznick Distributing Corp.

As a Whole... A BIG UNDERTAKING AND VERY WELL PRESENTED; LIKELY TO DRAW CAPACITY BUSINESS; ROYAL ROMANCE HAS BIG APPEAL FOR MANY; TITLE A GOOD CATCH.

Players... Cast carefully assembled and with evident attention to suitability of individuals to various role; Elaine Hammerstein capable though not quite as beautiful as she has appeared before; Bert Lytell good although occasionally over confident; Lew Cody a devilish villain as usual; others Claire Windsor, Hobart Bosworth, Bryant Washburn, Mitchell Lewis, Adolphe Menjou and Irving Cummings.

Type of Story... Costume drama dealing with the love of a Queen for man whose likeness permits him to impersonate her husband, the king, in a scheme to preserve the queen's honor and the respect of her subjects.

Box Office Angle... "Rupert of Hentzau" is undoubtedly one of the specials that you will want to show. It will probably be one of the pictures that get "talked about" and any production that gains the publicity of word-of-mouth advertising is worthy of your consideration.

The Strand opening of the picture drew regular "winter" business. If that is a criterion you can't go wrong.

Exploitation... First of all you have the already widely read and entirely familiar title of Sir Anthony Hope's celebrated romance.

For a street stunt, to be used well in advance of the showing, and during the exhibition of the film, you could have a royal coach going about with persons representing King Rudolph and Queen Flavia. The more elaborate this is staged, the more attention it will get.

Have another man dressed to impersonate Lew Cody as Rupert of Hentzau. He might distribute whatever you wish to use in the way of throw-aways.

Dress your lobby to represent a palace entrance and anything else in the way of decoration that you can use.

Direction by... Victor Heerman; usually on a big scale with many splendid settings with an occasional one appearing rather unreal, but most of them are good; court ceremonies and detail is interesting and plot development holds interest generally but liberal climaxes, especially a few long stretches where the players overact will speed the tempo.

Author... Sir Anthony Hope
Scenario... Edward J. Montagne
Cameramen... Glen McWilliams and Harry Thorpe.

Photography... Very good.
Locale... A royal household.
Length... 9,717 feet.

We predict that

Elmer Clifton's

DOWN TO THE SEA IN SHIPS

will create as great a sensation in CHICAGO at the

ROOSEVELT Theatre

as it did in New York, at the Cameo Theatre, where it ran for twelve consecutive weeks and where it was seen by 740,000 persons at 30 theatres in one week.

It's a HODKINSON Picture

"Children of Jazz"

Paramount

As a Whole...ANOTHER JAZZ NUMBER WITH THE FIRST REELS LIVING UP TO THE TITLE BUT THE LATTER A FAIRLY DULL REGENERATION FOR THE "CHILDREN."

Players...Eileen Percy well suited and gets over the part of the jazz girl first rate, much better in fact and more convincing than where she has to sober down; Theodore Kosloff miscast in role in which he persists in assuming Napoleonic poses; Ricardo Cortez good "matinee idol" type. Others Robert Cain, Irene Dalton, Alec B. Francis, Frank Currier, Snitz Edwards, Lillian Drew.

Type of Story...Jazz is running in a stretch of popularity as far as pictures are concerned. "Children of Jazz" is an easily digested potion with the actual jazz scenes far more interesting and entertaining than the long, draggy latter sequences that contain absurdities such as the forceful regeneration of the girl and her frivolous companions by the lover she had jilted.

Box Office Angle...A fair summer entertainment; they won't enthuse over it and they probably won't find it tedious enough to bore them. The opening reels get it off to a good start at any rate and cutting could speed up the slow latter reels.

Exploitation...Once more a tie-up with a music shop would be about the best stunt you could use. Get the proprietor to put on a special display of jazz instruments and keep a victrola playing the more popular current numbers. Have the proper announcement displayed in the window with the title, "Follow 'Children of Jazz' to the blank theater."

A jazz band, or your own orchestra if you have one, can be utilized to ride about in an auto, rendering the latest hits.

Paramount has some posters and ads that will attract the eye and give them an idea of what they may expect.

Use Eileen Percy's name and stills of her in the lobby. Those co-featured with her are Robert Cain, Theodore Kosloff and Ricardo Cortez, the latter a fine romantic type that will appeal to your women patrons. You might use stills of Cortez, also.

A teaser campaign might consist of invitations to a jazz party mentioning the date of the showing, following the stunt with the title of the picture and the fact that "Children of Jazz" offers a real jazz party that can be seen at your theater.

Direction by...Jerome Storm; has injected plenty of pep and atmosphere into early reels and good pictorial effects into latter sequence although it would have been better told in less footage.

Author...Harold Brighthouse (from the play "Other Times.")

Scenario...Beulah Marie Dix

Camerman...Dev Jennings

Photography...Good.

Locale...A cabaret and a desert island.

Length...6,080 feet

Katherine MacDonald in

"The Scarlet Lily"

Producer: B. P. Schulberg

Distributor: First National

As a Whole.....VERY CONVENTIONAL STORY WITH DEVELOPMENT QUITE OBVIOUS, DOESN'T TAKE STAR OUT OF THE RUT SHE HAS GOTTEN INTO THROUGH POORLY SUITED VEHICLES.

Star...Still "suffering" convincingly and tries hard to put the part over but it's all so lacking in plausibility that the job is too big for her.

Cast...Orville Caldwell again the star's lead and not an especially well suited opposite for her; others Stuart Holmes Adele Farrington and little Jane Mishkin.

Type of Story...A popular formula of the eternal triangle with only excellent production values to make the picture interesting, besides the appearance of the star; girl a victim of circumstances, becomes involved in scandal which threatens her marital happiness until her name is cleared.

Box Office Angle...It depends almost entirely upon the drawing power of the star whether or not you can use this one advantageously. Or if it happens that you know your folks still favor the eternal triangle business, you can also play with it.

Exploitation...Here you have a title that should give you first rate exploitation material. You can first play it up in teaser form by distributing cardboards in the shape of a lily and printed in scarlet. Later follow it up in same style but with the lilies in paper and in booklet form allowing for printing inside.

There isn't much else in the way of stunt advertising that you could use. If you think they might be attracted by pathos you might let them know of the self-sacrifice of the heroine when she risks honor for the sake of securing comforts for her little sister who is ill.

You can tell them the picture is good to look at and there are plenty of attractive settings, gowns, etc., to appeal to the eye. The star wears some attractive costumes that will interest your feminine patrons.

Use stills in the lobby and for a trailer the incident in which the wife and detective trail the woman's husband to the apartment occupied by the heroine, might serve to interest them.

Direction by...Victor Schertzinger; has given story good production and otherwise done as well as he could with material that didn't give him much leaway.

Author .....Fred Sittenham

Scenario...Lois Zellner and Florence Hein

Camerman .....Joseph Brotherton

Photography .....Very good

Locale...A luxurious apartment and a health resort.

Length .....6229 feet

Short Subjects

"Her Dangerous Path"--Roach-Pathe

A "Different" Serial

Type of production...10 episode serial

Pathe's latest serial differs to some extent from the type of chapter play they have been releasing in the past. This difference consists in the fact that each episode is a complete story in itself and although the central figure is the same in each case and the different episodes, if seen in sequence make one complete story, the spectator seeing one part and not the preceding episode will understand the action as easily as if he had seen what went before.

The story has been written and produced by Hal Roach, and directed by Roy Clements, who has succeeded in making the action live and interesting. Robert Doran is responsible for the clear photography. Edna Murphy makes a very satisfactory heroine and will in all probability prove a favorite with serial fans. The supporting cast is also adequate but constantly varying with each episode.

The general theme is that Corrine Grant, a wealthy society girl, is forced upon the physical and financial breakdown of her father, to choose her future path in life. Her Chinese cook, Wong, offers to read her future in the sands, and the rest of each episode shows what would happen if she decided upon the different careers open to her, coming back at the finish to the girl and the Oriental pouring over the box of shifting sand. The different careers hold plenty of interest, excitement, thrills and even humor at times so that "Her Dangerous Path" should have no difficulty in pleasing. Where they like serials it looks like a good bet, especially for the women-folk.

"True Gold"--Universal

Good Average Western

Type of production....2reel western

Jack Dougherty the star, and Laura La Plante who ably supports him are pleasing featurers of this western, which although a trifle confused as to plot is fairly interesting entertainment of its kind. There is somewhat too much footage in the first reel devoted to unimportant detail, but the scenes in which Miss LaPlante appears with Dougherty hold the interest well. The story is built around a case of mistaken identity, the hero being taken for a gold thief when he is in reality the man whose mine has been robbed. Miss La Plante is cast as the sheriff's daughter who in her father's absence falls in love with the supposed bandit. It is a good average western.

"The Host"--Universal

Mildly Amusing

Type of production....1 reel comedy

Directed by Lloyd Bacon, "The Host" stars Neeley Edwards in a one reeler that may prove to be fair enough entertainment for those who like the star. There isn't very much to say about it except that it contains the usual situations found when a tramp is mistaken for a gentleman and is made to act accordingly. He gets tangled in some chewing gum, puts shoe polish on his hair and generally gets untidy until the fellow who was really hired to be the "host" at the summer hotel puts in his delayed appearance. The bit in which Edwards breaks open a wall disclosing a bearded man in a bathtub will probably get a laugh.

"Yellow Gold and Men"--Ranger

Rider--Pathe

Satisfying Entertainment

Type of production ...1 reel western

Leo Maloney gets an opportunity to do a bit of work that is somewhat of a departure from his usual role of stalwart Ranger in the earlier portion of this. And he gives a really good impression of a man half dead from thirst who sees at last an unlimited supply of water. Aside from this, there is the usual interesting little drama this time woven around a water canteen filled with gold nuggets, its theft and recapture and the usual love affair between Joseph Hill, cast as the daughter of a ranch owner, and the hero. The suspense is well held.

"Jack Frost"--Pathe

Should Be Laugh-Getter

Type of production .. 2 reel comedy

Beside having a fine hot-weather title, Snub Pollard's latest comedy is really very funny at times. It has a good supporting cast, too, including Noah Young, Marie Mosquini and James Finalyson. Most of the laughs result from Snub's efforts to keep comfortable in spite of the severe cold at the farm house at Zero Center. A new idea in the familiar comedy line, is also introduced with good results. It consists of having the different characters dart out unexpectedly from behind trees and snatch the important "paper" from each other's hands. This happens continually and at a fast pace with laugh each time.

Story No. 6

Let's give the children a good vacation

How about the children—the countless thousands of children who do not go out of town during the summer months? If they can attend one of our theatres once a week, it will go a long way towards making their vacation worth while. And there isn't anything they will love more.

If Mother can break away from her household cares long enough to take the little ones to the matinee, it will break the monotony of the day for her. She will enjoy the performance as much as the children will. And it wouldn't hurt Dad a bit to follow the same plan.

Just remember that BALABAN & KATZ theatres are the only ones in the country that have no Summer policy. Our entertainment programs are just as elaborate—just as select in the Summer as they are in the Winter. We do not curtail the programs, the orchestras or the service in the slightest degree.

These theatres were originally designed to do an all-year-around business. We knew, even before the plans were drawn, that we would put elaborate refrigeration plants in every one. We did, and the result is, that every BALABAN & KATZ theatre is a delightful Summer resort when the heat is at its height.

If parents find it inconvenient to bring their children to the theatre, they may send them along alone. We will take the best of care of them, find them good seats and give them the same attention their elders get.

Don't forget that we charge special low prices for matinees every day but Sunday. Yet the program that is given is precisely the same as in the evening. So, send the kids to us. We will give them a good time and good pictures—good music and clean, fresh, cool air for every breath they draw.

Further advertisements of this unusual campaign will appear hereafter in the Sunday issues of THE FILM DAILY.

Keep Cool at Our Theatres

We have invested a quarter of a million dollars in cooling plants for our four theatres to keep you cool and comfortable when the world is hot and humid

And the air we give you to breathe is no less pure, sweet and invigorating than the wine-like air which sweeps over mountain tops and fragrant meadows—the kind of air which thousands seek on vacation days.

On hot days and nights when every move distresses you, and you seek in vain for a cooling breeze, the air in our four theatres is as cool as the first breath of Spring.

The air is constantly changing. You breathe fresh, new air with every breath you draw. Our theatres are healthful Summer resorts.

They are cool but never too cool. When you leave them you can't help feeling refreshed.

A great many of the 17,000 theatres in this country close during the heated term. But all Balaban & Katz theatres actually reach the peak of their business in June, July, August and September.

It costs us $2,000 a week to maintain and operate our cooling and ventilating plants. It requires many experts. It involves the use of more than 50 motors, ranging from 5 to 240 h. p., to wash, cool and dry the air we give you to breathe.

Ours are the only theatres in Chicago which make this modern and scientific provision for your comfort. There is no such equipment in any theatre in New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Paris, London, Berlin. Just think of it!

Yet, this is but one of the many things we do to serve you.

COAST CONVERSATIONS

Hollywood—The producers out here are continually experimenting with oodles of players hoping to find new faces. And they have shown some results this year.

You will discover a number of "finds" in next season's productions. Young ladies bound to be heard from in the next few years.

Mary Philbin in "Merry-Go-Round," Aileen Pringle and Kathleen Key at Goldwyn. Finis Fox's latest lead, Gloria Grey. And Renee Adoree with Louis Mayer. In current previews and rushes they look good.

Sid Grauman went out to Metro lot the other day to visit Jack Coogan, Sr. And before he left the lot he was one of the mob of two thousand extras—without the pay check.

Jack Coogan had his new Rolls-Royce cabriolet on the set for atmosphere. And would not trust anyone to drive it, so became a chauffeur for the best part of the day.

Look who's here!

Anna Nilsson shorn of her famous golden tresses, masquerading as a youth in "Ponjola." And she really had her hair cut short for the part. If you wonder how successful she was, just try to pick her out as a girl in the picture.

Lou Anger, with extensive oil interests, at times confuses picture production and oil.

The other day, he was asked how his new star, Clyde Cook was progressing.

"Oh," said Lou, "We've just spudded in on his first picture."

Try to see "The Gold Diggers" at work on the Warner stage. Director Harry Beaumont last week issued a decree against all visitors. Which is unusual for Harry.

But it seems Jules Brulatour, Hope Hampton's manager, dotes on newspaper editors visiting the set to interview Hope. And invitations were broadcasted; resulting in a raving director waiting to shoot scenes while Miss Star interviewed and interviewed. In just two days, Harry banned all visitors on the set, and the "Gold Diggers" are now going along on schedule.

Stroheim has a new slant. He's up in Frisco making "Greed," and instead of specially constructed sets, he is shooting interiors in a regular house. Four walls, ceilings, and everything.

During the past six months the extra has been in paradise. More work than in two previous years. Just because producers want plenty of mob stuff and atmosphere.

But a situation arose last week with Jackie Coogan company where shooting was held up four days because two thousand extras could not be obtained.

Now directors are planning schedules in advance according to the days the extras will be available.

GREENE.

Mary Mc Laren and the Murray Garsson company are in Connecticut shooting exteriors.

Edith Taliaferro has completed work in "The Darkened Doorway" and will start on a new production at once.

A Thrill Bally-Hoo

Wildwood, N. J.—Norman Johnson, Hunt's Theaters, Inc., demonstrated a novel, trick bally-hoo upon the roof of the New Casino during the run of "Safety Last."

A life sized dummy was dressed up, impersonating Harold Lloyd and placed upon a chair, the back legs of which were hinged to a corner of the roof, and upon which was printed "Safety Last." At night a searchlight played from the roof of a building opposite, the rays sweeping through the crowd on the boardwalk and travelling upward to the figure of Lloyd on the roof. When the light reached the dummy, a rope attached to the chair was pulled, causing chair and figure to tilt at an angle and apparently fall at the proper moment. Another rope was pulled, raising the chair to an upright position, giving the impression of Lloyd being saved by a miracle.

In addition to the above bally-hoo the theater used an automobile to announce the screening of "Safety Last." On the top of the car, pennants announced all the Hunt Theaters. On the sides the name of theater, picture and play date was lettered, and two large cut-outs of Lloyd clinging to a clock, completed the decoration.

Camp Fire Girls Sell Tickets

Omaha — An attractive ad displayed in the Omaha Bee, announced the showing of "Nanook of the North," at the Sun, and was a decided change in the World Realty Co's usual type of advertising. The upper left and right hand corners of the display contained copy as follows: "What Shakespeare is to literature' and what Rembrandt is to painting' 'Nanook of the North' is to the screen."

A tie-up was made with the Camp Fire Girl's Ass'n of the town, which was conducting a drive for its summer camp. The management arranged for these girls to sell tickets for "Nanook," and they in return received a percentage of the receipts toward the fund.

Splurge on "Souls for Sale"

Dubuque, Ia.—A carnival at the ball park was utilized by Walter D. Nealand of the Goldwyn Chicago exchange, in exploiting "Souls for Sale" at the Grand.

Cards were tacked all along the roads leading to the park. Heralds were distributed at the midway of the carnival and all automobiles were tagged, both on the streets and at the carnival. The Times-Journal tied upon the questionnaire used successfully in exploiting this film, starting with a three-column head story a week in advance. Displays of the novel were obtained in the windows of three book stores. Stickers were used all over town, which was well billed.

Turn Down Cohen

"That there has been no change in the situation, that we can see, since Michigan decided to withdraw from the National body which would warrant a reconsideration. It was the consensus of opinion that the Michigan unit could not be an integral part of any organization that would sanction the political methods employed at the National convention, particularly the Foran matter as it was used by M. Cohen and other leaders of the National body.

"This action on the part of Michigan does not mean that Michigan is not willing at any time to co-operate with or give its support to any constructive move made by the National body or any state, which will accrue to the benefit of the theater owners of the country, and to this end will be glad to discuss exhibitor problems with any leaders who may pay us a visit, to whom will be extended every courtesy.

"It may be of interest to you to know that at the meeting today definite plans were laid to wage an extensive campaign with the National legislators of Michigan to secure the repeal of the admission tax, and it is our sincere hope that such a program will be carried out in every state."

An unsuccessful effort to secure a statement from Sydney S. Cohen was made yesterday.

Series for State Rights

House Peters Prod. About 70% Sold First To Be "Q" by Katherine Newlin Burt

Charles O. Baumann has been quietly selling his proposed series of House Peters Prod. on the state rights market. Seventy per cent of the country has either been secured or pledged.

Baumann stated on Saturday that the date on which the first picture will be started is not definite. The initial picture, however will be "Q" a story by Katherine Newlin Burt. Production will be centered in Los Angeles. Peters at present is working in "Held to Answer," one of the fall specials on the Metro list. Among the more important territorial sales to date are the following: Midwest territory to Harry Charles of Standard Film Service Co., Illinois and adjoining territory to Joe Friedman of Celebrated Players; Harry Asher of American Feature Film of Boston for New England and Ben Amasterdam of Masterpiece Philadelphia for Eastern Pennsylvania and Southern Jersey.

Dover, Del.—The Eldorado W. Cott Pictures of Philadelphia have been formed here with capital of $1,000,000.

Equitable Rentals

The following has been received from Alexander S. Aronson, sales manager of Truart:

"Naturally I have read with considerable interest the various statements my article 'THE GOLDEN BUBBLE' brought forth. Far be it from me to take issue with those who disagree. If it has been food for thought, then it has served its purpose.

"If I may be pardoned for saying it, to me one of the outstanding features of my article was the question of equitable rentals and in none of the various statements printed, was this given more than casual consideration. Obviously this industry must some time or other face this as one of its major problems and with your permission, I shall prepare for your publication an article dealing with 'EQUITABLE RENTALS.'"

Fine. Shoot it along.

Some "Summer Slump" Helps (Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Kansas City—C. E. ("Doc") Cook, of the state exhibitors unit, in a recent statement, declared that general theater business was good in this vicinity, but for those who find the regular "summer slump" prevailing, he asks these questions:

"Do we keep our theaters clean, cool and inviting?"

"Is our ventilation system modern and adequate?"

"Are our programs varied to what our patrons desire, or are we forcing them to accept 'just pictures?'"

"Do we analyze the requirements of our customers in planning our programs."

"Are we pulling surprises and putting on special entertainments to stimulate public interest."

"Is our music what it should be?"

"Is our ticket seller kind, courteous and congenial?"

"Are the employees hospitable and obliging?"

"Is your operator efficient and on the job?"

"Is your equipment in A-1 condition?"

"Are you giving time and attention to exploitation—do you plan and write advertising copy to fit your particular need?"

"Are you getting the most out of your lobby display—are lobby display frames clean, substantial and attractive?"

"Do you keep your theater front and canopy illuminated or has the local supply of light bulbs been exhausted?"

"Is your theater well painted and decorated inside and out?"

"Are you personally managing your show and on the job at every performance?"

Seligman Returning to England

Paul Seligman, for some months American manager of the Stoll Film Co., London leaves for home shortly. He expects to return in September with prints of some new pictures.

Warners Change Name

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Albany—The name of Warner Bros. has been changed to Warner Bros. Enterprises. The Secretary of State has been so informed.

Proving It

Over in the Glendale studio, working in "Clipped Wings" the Burr special featuring Connie Binney is a tall, somewhat distinguished looking man who has a minor role. He is not familiar with a motion picture studio and shows it. But he is earnest; sincere and trying to make good.

His name is Leroy Ellsworth Groom, and by profession he is a consulting engineer. He is about 35, and has just completed the construction of an ore mill in the far West which cost upwards of $4,000,000.

Naturally you wonder what he is doing making pictures. And the answer is as interesting as simple. Groom is a college graduate. He never had an idea of appearing in pictures, and probably never would have, but some of his fraternity brothers met awhile ago to discuss the Edison idea of college men. You know what Edison thinks of college men. He made it plain in a statement issued some time ago, and voiced the idea that college men might be all right for the job for which they were trained, but otherwise, in any other job—nix-no-and that was all there was to it.

So Groom and fellow collegians chewed the Edison idea over. And they reached the belief that a grave and great injustice was being done to all the boys in college and those who planned to go to college. And so, for the benefit of these boys 12 men, all collegians, including Groom, voted to devote an entire year to disprove the Edison idea, and to go to work in some profession other than that for which they were fit and ably trained.

In the drawing of the lots to determine what jobs each should try for Groom picked the ticket to become a motion picture actor. Luckily he was able to get a chance with Charley Burr.

Here's hoping Groom makes good—not only for himself, but for all college men.

DANNY.

Expedite Contracts

Universal Has District Managers Approve Them—Close Contact With Exhibitors Observed

Universal officials express themselves as very well satisfied with an innovation inaugurated recently whereby contracts with exhibitors are approved in the field and not sent to the home office first.

The company exercises what it calls a sales cabinet control and is said to have saved considerable sums of money for the organization. The system is based on the conversion of the former district managerships into assistant general sales managerships. Instead of dividing the country into districts with supervision vested in district managers who are subject to correction by the home office, the country is divided into nine territories, each controlled by an assistant general sales manager who spends most of his time in the territory assigned to him.

The assistants are all home office men and know the home office policies. They have all been authorized to approve or reject contracts without recourse to the executive offices. (Continued on Page 2)

Affidavits to Prove Stand (Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Los Angeles—Al Lichtman is preparing affidavits by Preferred cameramen and laboratory men to indicate the exact footage on each of the 11 pictures produced by his organization last year. Abe Carlos wired last week that Lichtman must have erred in stating only 11,000 ft. of negative were shot on each release and now Lichtman wants to prove his original statement was right.

Putting It Over

"The Christian" in Cincinnati

Cincinnati—When H. T. Snowden, Goldwyn exploiteer went to Logansport, Ind. to help Manager H. Hornbeck of the Colonial exploit "The Christian," he arranged for a street ballyhoo consisting of a sandwich man carrying cards reading: "John denies that he prophesied the end of the word at midnight, Sunday." He carried this teaser message for three days and two days before the opening, "In 'The Christian' at the Colonial." was added to the sign.

A silk tie-up was obtained with Gube's Department Store. Four models wearing cherry red gowns were placed in the most prominent window. A special card read: "Cherry red is the favorite color of Mae Busch, star of Hall Caine's 'The Christian.'"

The daily Pharos-Tribune and the Press agreed to have their Saturday and Sunday editions stuffed with heralds. Fifteen hundred postal cards were mailed to persons in the telephone directory with a message about having seen "The Christian" in Indianapolis and advising the receivers to see it in Logansport. A book tie-up with an oil painting, 25 hangers, several special window cards and copies of the novel was arranged with the E. Mett Company. A free ticket to the matinee was offered to the purchaser of each copy. The billing campaign was a little more than usual for that town.

In this way, much time is saved because the practice of sending on tentative contracts for approval or rejection in New York is done away with it. To all intents and purposes, the Universal home office has been brought to the exhibitor direct. Contracts are always disposed of in a day or two because the headquarters of the various assistants are rarely any further away than that from the exhibitor.

The Universal salesman are likewise getting closer to the exhibitors than heretofore. There has been a definite follow-up policy inaugurated. As explained by a company executive, the salesman does not drop from sight as soon as he signs a contract with an exhibitor. He comes back and follows the progress of the picture. Universal officials openly declare their delight over the manner in which the plan is working out. They state its advantages are showing definite increases on the sales sheets.

Broadway in midsummer, especially last week (July 4th), isn't expected to bring anything like a real pouring of dollars into the picture house box offices, but the Rivoli developed surprising box office strength with "The Merry-Go-Round" rolling up a gross that proves there is no such thing as bad summer business providing the pictures played during that period have the strength to pull audiences. "The Merry-Go-Round" did pull, and to such an extent as to surprise the biggest part of the Broadway wise folk, for the gross almost touched $23,000 on the week.

Rivoli—"The Merry-Go-Round" (Universal). (Seats 2,200; 30-50-85.) This Universal, heralded as unusual picture, proved more than that on initial showing at Rivoli. House did business of street during week playing, to standees when other houses half filled. Arrangement between Universal and Famous Players was that if picture did business it would remain for second week, and that is being done. Gross first week almost $23,000, which gave picture certainty of second week. This week business is little off from last week.

Block Deals for England—Buyer Leaves Without Product and Sore

Methods of some American distributors so far as the sale of their product for England are concerned brought sharp criticism from an Englishman who sailed Saturday with but one picture purchased, although he had something like $75,000 to spend here for pictures.

His chief objection to making any further effort to purchase film were what he termed the "unsatisfactory methods" of many of the film folk with whom he came in contact. His intention, when arriving, was of secure at a minimum four pictures, perhaps more. Here are some of his experiences, as related prior to his sailing:

One distributor agreed on a price of $12,500 for the British rights to his picture which, incidentally, has not been released here. But when the final papers came the price showed $15,000. The Englishman refused to do business and returned the contract.

The representative of a California producer agreed to sell the rights of a production, also not yet released here, for $12,000 and the visitor thought he also had a good deal here. The producer wired acceptance to the terms but later rejected them after holding matters up a week, and giving no reason for the refusal.

On another occasion the buyer was prepared to buy a light comedy and the price was agreed upon, and the deal fell through because of some difficulty with the laboratory which held the negative.

These were just a few of the difficulties which faced the buyer. He finally became disgusted and quit, sailing Saturday.

Exchange Planned

American M. P. Corp. for Non-Theatrical Distribution—Edward O'Donnell Handling Stock

The American M. P. Corp., a $1,000,000 Delaware company, is now opening a number of exchanges in the non-theatrical field. Edward O'Donnell, formerly with Schenck and Fox, is with the organization handling the sale of a stock exchange to carry out the plans.

The company recently took over the Community M. P. Service, Inc., the Church M. P. Corp. and is understood to have entered upon negotiations with Henry Bollman, Inc. A short time ago there existed some interest in the film business because reports circulated that the company intended agitating against labor unions through motion pictures. These reports gained credence because they were based in the American M. P. Corp., are J. E. Edgerton, president; William H. Barr, a director of the Nat'l Association of Manufacturers. Assurances are understood to have been made, it is understood, to those interested and to officials of the American Federation of Labor that no such actions were intended.

The officers of American are, William H. Barr, president and treasurer; Frank F. Porter, vice-president; Paul Smith, vice-president; Herbert Maynard, Jr., secretary and John E. Edgerton, chairman of the board of directors. The latter is also interested in the Lebanon Woolen Mills of Lebanon, Tenn., and Barr is connected with the Lumen Bearing Co., of Buffalo.

Buying Out Grauman

Famous Players to Control Three Los Angeles Houses—One to be Sold to A. and H.

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Los Angeles—Famous Players have paid $50,000 for a six months' option on the purchase of Sid Grauman's interest in three downtown theaters, the Metropolitan, the Million Dollar and the Rialto.

The total consideration for Grauman's share is expected to reach $1,045,000. In all likelihood, the complete operation will be completed by January 1st, when Famous will control the theaters in their entirety.

The Hollywood Egyptian theater, at which "The Covered Wagon" is playing, is not part of the deal. Grauman intends building another theater in Hollywood along lines similar to the Egyptian. There will be two shows a day, with all seats reserved and elaborate prologues and accompanying bills. Eventually there will be a third Grauman Theater in Hollywood, to house legitimate shows and occasional pictures. Joseph M. Schenck and the West Coast Theater interests will be interested jointly with Grauman in it.

A deal is understood to have reached its last stages whereby the Million Dollar Theater at Broadway and Third will be sold to Ackerman and Harris, thus leaving Famous Players with two houses here.

While no one at Famous Players cared to comment on the Grauman deal yesterday, it is understood the above details are correct.

In the Courts

Associated Exhibitors, Inc., has been sued in the Supreme Court by Nathan & Semerad, owners of the film, "A Pasteboard Crown" for $51,550 damages. The complaint alleges that the plaintiff granted to the defendant the right to release the film, under an agreement that rentals were to be made on the basis of a valuation of $200,000, since the film cost $37,500. The complaint states that the film was released through the defendants subsidiary, Playgoers pictures, on a rate which made it appear that the cost was only between $15,000 and $20,000, and that the film was inferior. It is alleged that but for the defendant's acts the plaintiff would have received $57,000 from the picture whereas Nathan & Semerad have received only $5,449.

In commenting on the above, Arthur S. Kane of Associated said yesterday that matter had been turned over to Seligsberg and Lewis, his attorneys and that the charges would be proved unfounded when the matter came to trial.

Harris Lumber of Niagara Falls has applied in the Supreme Court for an order transferring the trial of the suit brought against him by Commonwealth Film to recover a balance of $480 on a picture to Buffalo for trial because the defendant has a number of witnesses there to prove his counterclaim for $1,000 on the ground that the plaintiff failed to give him promised advertising for the picture.

Supreme Court Justice Tierney has dismissed proceedings brought by the F. Keith N. Y. Theaters Co. to reduce the assessment of $360,000 on the Royal Theater in the Bronx, for 1921, and $330,000 in 1922. The court ruled that the assessment is not an overvaluation.

Supreme Court Justice Mullan has denied an application by the Powers Film Products Inc. to punish Nicholas Kessel, head of the Nicholas Kessel Film Laboratories for contempt in failing to make promised payments of $2,754 in installments of $500 to pay up a balance of $2,784 due on a judgment. The court ruled that the failure to pay is merely a breach of an agreement and not contempt of court.

The report of Nathan Burkan as arbitrator in a dispute between the National Film Corp. of America and the Walgreene Film Corp. has been filed in the Supreme Court, in which the arbitrator holds that the defendant had no right to make a charge of $2,250 against the proper disbursements of the film. "Hearts and Masks," sold to the Federated Film Exchange after the $2,000 had been paid to members of the exchange to induce the exchange to buy it for $22,500.

Dillon, head of the company operating the theaters, has served a two-week's dismissal notice, explaining as the reason for his action that it would cost $12,000 a year more to pay the musicians the increase.

Hornell, N. Y.—Members of the orchestra of the Majestic, managed by Fred Peters, demanded 15 minutes rest in each playing hour, the rest period to be selected at the pleasure of the orchestra. Universal's "Merry Go Round" float was a blue ribbon winner in the Silver Jubilee Parade. The float, a large merry-go-round with living figures, beautiful girls and handsome men, mounted on horses, revolved down Fifth Ave., as a hurdy-gurdy organ on the float added to the realism of the effect. The float was drawn by six white horses, led by six men in flashy red outfits. Raymond Cavanagh, director of exploitation for Universal, was the originator of this winning float. The presentation was handled by Cavanagh and his assistant, Marc Lachmann.

The Silver Jubilee Committee approved the window cards and sniping. The float was placed at the entrance to the Jubilee grounds with a sign reading, "Make it a Merry Go Round—See the Silver Jubilee." The picture is now in its third week on Broadway.

British Distribution

ed for This Country—Rowson of Ideal Films, Reported Interested in the Move

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

London—The latest issue of the Film Daily in a lengthy article captioned "British Films in America," says in

It is said that a powerful corporation is shortly to be formed, or is in the process of formation, for the distribution of British films (in the United States); this is to have some title as the British Distribution Company. Behind are said to be the Hudson Bay Co., already the chief concern of one of our biggest producers, and the Bank of Montreal. Together with these will be included some of the best known and most influential film magnates in this country.

The leader of the new movement is said to be Ideal, and coinciding with this rumor it is interesting to note that H. Rowson has just returned from a business visit to the United States.

Danger Crossing

Elmer Pearson Warns Industry to Watch Production Costs—Will Top Revenue, He Says

Support of the argument advanced by THE FILM DAILY recently relative to the amount of money being spent on 1923-1924 productions as against the gross income of the business was voiced yesterday in a statement issued by Elmer Pearson of Pathe. Mr. Pearson, who recently returned from the coast made the following, pointed remarks:

"Production costs are running high as compared with the past. Male and female stars have been engaged at salaries that read a bit too fabulous, even to those accustomed to large figures.

"It is my impression from close observation that the total production costs estimated for this year, will exceed the total film rentals received during any previous year. That looks like a danger crossing that needs a 'stop, look and listen' sign on it."

Continuing, Pearson states:

"Producers often make mistakes by bidding against each other for the most popular leading men and leading ladies. At present many stars work in more than one picture at the same time, and several are drawing salaries from two or three producing companies, and this practice is likely to kill those players' popularity.

"Upon returning East, I was agreeably surprised to find that business has been holding up so well and in fact exceeded expectations, and the much talked of 'summer slump' has not materialized as early this year as usual. Probably the serious part of the hot spell is over and the damage will not be great this year. This is encouraging, particularly in view of the facts outlined above."

A. B. C.'s Future

To Be Discussed at Monday Meeting—Prominent Member Denies Circuit Has Become Inactive

A meeting of important members of the A. B. C. will be held on Monday to discuss matters pertaining to the future of that organization. One session was held last Monday when it was decided to meet again next week. A prominent member of the organization yesterday denied that the circuit had become defunct. "Operations are still going on," he added. Regarding the future, this same individual was non-committal.

The statement of an important local exhibitor made at the time the A. B. C. was formed was recalled yesterday. This exhibitor, at that time, urged that the organization be given the financial support necessary to make it lasting as an institution. He advocated the purchase of features on a definite basis and not their acquisition in a sporadic fashion. If necessary, this exhibitor said then, the A. B. C. members should be willing to finance one production or a series of them in order to wage the fight successfully against the big circuits. All this was voted down at the time.

Describes Invasion

Former Lynch Man Tells About Theater Buys in Dallas—Hearing Now in Atlanta

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Atlanta—T. O. Tuttle, branch manager for Southern Enterprises in Dallas from July, 1919 to April, 1920 was one of the principal witnesses at the second days' Federal Trade hearing here.

Tuttle testified that E. H. Hulsey refused to renew his contract for Paramount service for the season beginning 1919 on the ground that the increased prices were out of line. After several major Texas exhibitors had declined to renew their contracts on the same plea, the witness testified that a large group of Southern Enterprise executives and employees from Atlanta arrived in Dallas and immediately inaugurated plans for acquiring leading theaters in leading cities. Lynch, Freeman, Dent, Bamford and Barnard were members of the party from Atlanta colloquially known as the "wrecking crew." Soon after their arrival in Dallas and in pursuance of their theater acquisition plan, Lynch, deposited approximately $1,000,000 in a Dallas bank and from that moment excitement was rife. Several exhibitors, according to the witness, expressed great indignation at the Southern enterprise invasion of the theater field.

In his cross examination, Robert Swaine, of counsel for Famous sought to show that the theater acquisition policy was virtually forced on Southern Enterprise, since the failure of Hulsey and others to renew Paramount contracts meant that Paramount pictures might be shut out of important Texas towns. Further, Famous counsel endeavored to show that the growing strength of the First National circuit made theater acquisition on their part a protective measure.

Asked pointedly by Swaine whether Paramount pictures did not represent the highest quality the witness answered that they were the best advertised picture product and such advertising was largely responsible for creating a demand.

Newspaper Opinions

"A Gentleman of Leisure"—F. P.-L. Rivoli

AMERICAN—is probably meant to be what is called Summer entertainment. And Summer entertainment, as such, is its own definition. * * * There are the customary complications. * * *

Holt is a good actor, but cast in an indifferent play, he seems an indifferent one.

EVENING JOURNAL—proves an excellent vehicle for Jack Holt. * * * It also gives the motion picture fans an opportunity to get well acquainted with a new beauty of the screen, Sigrid Holmquist.

EVENING WORLD—For those who like Jack Holt and his screen methods, * * * will prove an enjoyable and appealing picture bit.

HERALD—No one is going to be materially upset by the feature picture. * * * It is a mild melodrama, with a redeeming leaven of farce, entitled "A Gentleman of Leisure."

MAIL—The picture has preserved all the comedy which made the play successful. There is a good laugh in every other scene. "A Gentleman of Leisure," is contrary to the general rule that a stage comedy loses all its laughs and effectiveness when placed on the screen.

POST—The picture is by no means unusual, but it does not attempt to be other than comedy, pure and simple, and this makes it more enjoyable.

SUN—Jack Holt is one of the most engaging young men on the screen. * * * At any rate, Holt seems to be following in Fairbank's path, and proves quite as aerobic as a role which once tried to hold down that agile star would require.

TELEGRAM—"A Gentleman of Leisure" is a delightful melodramatic comedy, with the star, Jack Holt, unusually well cast. * * *

TIMES—Notwithstanding impossible features of the story, * * * the film * * * possesses elements that make it one of those pleasing entertainments that evaporate from one's mind soon after leaving the theater.

TRIBUNE—"A Gentleman of Leisure" is a leisurely picture and at times the thread of the story is stretched so tautly that you think surely it must snap.

WORLD—This picture is pretty poor stuff.

"The Love Piker"—Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan-Capitol

AMERICAN—* * * the appeal is there. The picture gets you from the beginning and doesn't let go until the final fade-out. Even after you leave the theatre, the thought of it remains, pleasantly.

For "The Love Piker" is a simple, human thing, woven out of emotions that might stir in any one's heart. * * *

EVENING JOURNAL—Anita Stewart * * * has never been seen before in a film that gave her the opportunity for display of such vim and dash.

EVENING WORLD—Although "The Love Piker," * * * was evidently made from scenario No. 47—plot 682—formula No. 13, it proves rather good entertainment. * * *

DAILY NEWS—The film dotes on speed.

HERALD—We have seen plenty of stupid films this year, but nothing quite so bad as "The Love Piker." It is feeble, foolish and incredibly boring. Aside from a part played by William Norris, there isn't a real characterization in it, and the situations are forced and unconvincing.

MAIL—* * * has been pictured most effectively and as a whole is delightful entertainment. It has a convincingly wholesome quality which is often lacking in most of the films of today.

POST—* * * A good picture. It is some time too, since Anita Stewart has been seen on the screen, and she is better than ever.

SUN—The story has elements of simple charm, and enables the personable Miss Stewart to look grandly forbidding in a society environment, and then humbly contrite—two of her best specialties.

TELEGRAM—Anita Stewart returns to the screen at the Capitol Theater this week, winning new laurels at the head of an all-star cast in "The Love Piker." * * *

TIMES—* * * one of those productions—of which there are many—with a giddy beginning and bromidic ending. * * * There are sprightly sequences in this production together with maudlin sentimentality.

Describes Lynch Theater Activities in Southern Field—Gives Data on Circuit

(Editorial Note—The following dispatch was delayed in delivery and otherwise would have appeared in yesterday's issue.)

Atlanta—The entire Monday morning session of the hearing of Federal Trade Commission's charges against the Famous Players-Lasky group, which was resumed in Atlanta, was consumed with taking testimony from Dan Michalove, director of theaters under the Lynch administration, of Southern Enterprises and general division manager under the new Famous regime.

During the two hours that Michalove was on the stand, Chief Counsel Fuller for the Government pursued a line of questioning calculated to show that the big majority of the 164 theaters which, according to their statement to the commission, Southern Enterprises has disposed of were less profitable investments being small theaters in relatively small towns. Following up the "disposed of" list town by town, through the states of Alabama and Florida, the one notable exception was the case of Orlando, Fla., where the entire holdings of Southern Enterprises numbering five theaters were sold early this year to E. J. Sparks.

Asked why Southern Enterprises should have sold houses returning so good a profit, Michalove said it was partly of consideration for Sparks who had been for ten years with the Lynch and Southern Enterprise organizations and who was leaving the company and anxious to buy and partly because they knew Sparks to be a live-wire, high-class showman who would maintain a good standard of exhibition. Continuing along the same line of examination, Fuller developed that Southern Enterprises about a month ago bought the Fairfax theater in Miami where the company is already interested along with Harry Leach and others in some five or six theaters.

Questioned as to why his company sought another house where they had ample outlet for their product, Michalove replied that they wanted a better theater. At this juncture Fuller asked the witness if that proceeding was not a variance with the agreement Zukor had with the national exhibitor organization. Thereupon, Bruce Bromley, acting counsel for Famous Players, objected, but Examiner Alvord overruled the objection and Michalove replied that no agreement made by Zukor would have affected Miami since Southern Enterprises owned only 50% of the holdings.

Continuing his examination of Michalove in the afternoon session, Chief Counsel Fuller established the fact that many of the 164 theaters sold or disposed of by Southern Enterprises represented less desirable investments, or surplus theaters in towns where the seating capacity of their other theaters was more than adequate, or theaters on which leases expired, or theaters which automatically closed when Southern Enterprises opened better houses in the particular town. On cross examination Acting Counsel Bromley for Famous sought to show that competitive houses had an equal break with them in location, seating capacity, and general character. He was proceeding smoothly until he mentioned Atlanta and attempted to show that both the Criterion and Metropolitan theaters had played Paramount pictures. The laugh that greeted his leading question caused even the witness to smile and refer them to Willard Patterson, who just entered the room. It is a conspicuous fact that the Metropolitan has never been offered a Paramount picture and that in all its history the Criterion played only one. The question scored a point for the Government. Examiner Alvord adjourned the session on the conclusion of cross-examination. Michalove will resume stand for direct examination Tuesday morning, and it is expected that Willard Patterson will be called immediately thereafter. Indications point to a two weeks' session in Atlanta.

Gov't Expected to End Atlanta Session Monday—Exhibitors on Stand

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Atlanta—The Government's investigation into Famous Players activities in the South is expected to terminate here the end of the week. The next seat of the hearing will be in New Orleans.

The five hour afternoon session Tuesday was devoted to the examination of three exhibitor witnesses. C. Hackworth of Huntsville, Ala., Edgar F. Boyd of Adel, Ga., and C. Haas of Charlotte, N. C. Hackworth testified that he had lost more than $75,000 in Huntsville and Florence, Ala., as a result of Southern Enterprise opposition. Hackworth made a promise made to him in the summer of 1919 by S. A. Lynch wherein Lynch agreed that Southern Enterprises would leave Hackworth unmolested and acquire no theaters in Huntsville and Florence provided Hackworth would play Paramount pictures in those towns 100%.

After giving Hackworth this assurance, the witness testified, Southern Enterprises acquired a theater in Huntsville, took Paramount service away from him and even sold the Paramount output to Hackworth's competitor in Florence. The witness further testified that as soon as Southern Enterprises acquired the Huntsville house other major distributing companies notably United Arts, Metro, Goldwyn and Select discontinued serving him and sold their product to the Southern Enterprise theater. Since Southern Enterprises sold back their Huntsville holdings early this year the witness testified that he had no difficulty in getting the pictures he wanted.

Boyd's case hinged on the methods the Paramount exchange employed in effort to induce him to play

Two For Metro

Laurette Taylor to Make "A Night in Rome" and "Happiness"—Deal Closed Yesterday

Contracts were signed yesterday whereby Metro will distribute two pictures in which Laurette Taylor will star. These will be "A Night in Rome" and "Happiness."

It is understood that the arrangement provides that J. Hartley Manners will not direct Miss Taylor whose only other appearance on the screen was in "Peg O' My Heart," produced and distributed by the same organization, and directed by Manners.

Star Value

In his address at the Ritz-Carlton last night when the Valentino-Williams deal was announced, J. D. Williams said:

"We are sometimes likely to forget we cannot eliminate the human element which is part and parcel of a contract with a star. The star is called upon to live in a manner befitting his popularity and to uphold the dignity of his position. These conditions actually demand big increases in salary and they must be met. The very essence of the show business is 'give and take.' Show me a company that hasn't abrogated a contract if the contract was against it. All that I know, have. The star makes a contract with the company, the pictures are made and the public doesn't want the pictures. Any star with honor realizes he cannot continue to force his services on the company, and as a result the contract is cancelled. It's a poor rule that doesn't work both ways. With the increase of a star's popularity and drawing power, the contract must be adjusted.

"There is no reason in the world why one should not receive 50 times more salary than another because he is worth that much more at the box office. There should be no limit on salary, as properly it is all a matter of earning power."

J. D. Williams Announces Valentino As First Star of Ritz Pictures

Arrangement to Become Effective When Contract With Famous Players Expires — Two Productions Already Planned, Dinner Last Night at the Ritz-Carlton Marks the Event

At a dinner given at the Ritz-Carlton last night, J. D. Williams announced the signing of Rudolph Valentino to a long-term contract, under the terms of which he will appear exclusively under the management of Ritz-Carlton Pictures, Inc., of which Williams is president. The arrangement becomes effective upon the termination of the Valentino contract with Famous Players-Lasky.

According to a joint statement issued by Williams and Valentino, the contract and plans call for productions "commensurate with the star's unparalleled popularity." A special staff is being organized under Valentino's own supervision. Two productions have been definitely arranged for, and while no mention was made of what they might be, it was added that these

Patterson to Remain

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Atlanta—Willard C. Patterson has withdrawn his resignation as managing director of the Metropolitan. He resigned last week and then changed his mind, following a renewal of negotiations with Sig Samuels.

Meyer in Adler's Place

Philip E. Meyer has been appointed Associated Exhibitor manager for New York. Meyer has therefore resigned as president of the M. P. Salesmen, Inc., and has been succeeded by Albert Reinlieb.

"shall be the sort of productions that the public requires in story, technique, atmosphere, action and character portrayal."

Present at the dinner were Williams and Valentino and a number of newspaper men. Valentino, in commenting on his arrangement with Williams said he will now be enabled to produce the kind of pictures he had hoped to make since "The Four Horsemen." His statement to newspapers stated that the new contract will enable him to exercise the liberty to "perfect the art in which I am so deeply interested." He said he had already made tentative arrangements with an important director to make the first picture.

Williams, in his speech, scouted all talk about decreasing the salaries of stars. "There should be no limit," on salary," he said, "as properly it is all a matter of earning power."

Valentino leaves for a vacation in Europe next week.

Officials of Famous Players who were communicated with last night relative to the Valentino-Williams deal, remarked there was "really nothing to say."

It is understood that Valentino's contract with Famous is scheduled to expire on Feb. 19, 1925.

In the Courts

Rodolph Valentino has filed an answer in the suit of his former attorney, Arthur Butler Graham for a balance of $48,000 alleged to be due for services in the litigation with Famous Players-Lasky which resulted in an injunction against him. Valentino asserts that Graham rendered no services except in this case, and in the organization of Cosmic Arts, Inc., and other matters, for which he paid the lawyer $20,500. He alleges that the lawyer gave him "improper and bad advice" and "misguided him." He asks the court to compel Mr. Graham to return the money paid him.

A judgment for $425 has been filed in the Supreme Court against the Freeport Theater in favor of the Addressograph Co. for equipment sold. The court decided that there was no valid defence to the suit.

Paramount pictures. Boyd testified that a tent show, operated by one Watson and advertising Paramount pictures exclusively so harassed him by playing at Sparks, a small town adjacent to Adel, that he telegraphed the Paramount exchange asking them to keep Watson out of Adel and offering Paramount one day a week. The witness testified that Watson did not show in Adel, that Southern Enterprises sent a representative who closed with him for pictures, but that paid pictures were not delivered in accordance with the terms. Famous Players' counsel interposed, demanding the original file of letters to which the witness referred. Examiner Alvord instructed Boyd to send the letters so demanded on his return to Adel.

The examination of Otto Haas developed that he used Paramount service from the time Paramount began until S. A. Lynch built the Imperial theater in Charlotte and took the service for that house. He declared that though the loss of Paramount pictures hurt his business for eight months or more he changed the policy of the house to cheaper pictures and smaller admissions and recovered.

M. P. T. O. Arranging Direct Representation With Legislators Through Members

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Rochester, N. Y.—At a meeting of the Rochester M. P. T. O., held Tuesday, it was decided to appoint a Congressional committee which will have definite representation in each Congressional district of Upper New York. It is planned to develop this idea nationally so that the national executives will be able to get into immediate touch with Congressmen through their exhibitor Congressional committees. Stress is placed on this plan as a means of securing action on the Federal tax situation.

Sydney S. Cohen was the principal speaker of the meeting which was held at Irondequoit Bay. He spoke on plans to secure taxation repeal. The Chicago convention was endorsed; censorship in general condemned; and clean and wholesome pictures endorsed. Plans were discussed for a state meeting of all M. P. T. O. state units in the fall, this to include Greater New York, too.

A service station has been established in the Palace theater building in Buffalo to serve exhibitors in the district from Albany to Buffalo. Another has been established at national headquarters in New York.

"Nobody's Darling"—Universal—Rivoli

POST—There isn't any one on the screen who is more interesting than little Baby Peggy. This week at the Rivoli she delights anew in "Nobody's Darling," an amusing comedy in which Peggy does all the funny things that the grown-up comedians do, but oh, so much better!

WORLD—Baby Peggy, a little over six, has never been so sweet in a picture play before.

Here is the most talented child actress on the screen, and it is a mystery to us why some one doesn't produce a film co-starring her with Jackie Coogan. Next to a Jack Dempsey-Harry Wills contest, it seems the safest bet of all.

TRIBUNE—Baby Peggy in "Nobody's Darling" is the best part of the picture program, for Peggy is by far the most attractive child on the screen. She isn't spoiled or self-conscious, and she never will be. Don't miss "Nobody's Darling," for Peggy is everybody's darling.

At Broadway Theaters

Capitol

"March of the Toys" from "Babes in Toyland" is the overture at the Capitol this week. Pietro Capodiferro, solo cornetist then plays "Inflamatus" from "Stabat Mater." Grrek Evans, a baritone sings "A Son of the Desert Am I," after which Capitol News is shown. Unit No. 5 is a series of ballet divertissements, composed of three numbers, a Syrian Sword dance, a Japanese Spring dance and a Siamese dance. "Prickly Conscience," a Bruce Wilderness Tale is the next number after which "In Our Broadcasting Station" goes on. This is the number which proved so popular last week, but this week the numbers are all new. The feature is "The Love Piker." Unit No. 9 is "Beside a Babbling Brook" played by the entire orchestra. Then comes "The Bill Poster" a Hal Roach comedy. The organ solo concludes the bill.

Rialto

Hugo Riesenfeld and Joseph Littau jointly lead the Rialto orchestra this week through "Beautiful Galatea," the overture. Riesenfeld's Classical Jazz is next and the third number, "The Old Refrain," sung by Alexis Adamov, tenor. The feature is "Merry-Go-Round" transferred from the Rivoli where it played for two weeks. Bin Gallili, mandolinist then plays "Souvenir." "The Battle," a Max Fleischer "Inkwell" comedy is the concluding number.

Rivoli

"Zampa" is the Rivoli overture. Symphonized home tunes is the way the program describes the next number during which "When You and I Were Young, Maggie" is sung by Miriam Lax, soprano and Adrian De Sylva, tenor. A Bray technical romance, "The Sky Splitter" is the third number. The Rivoli Pictorial is No. 4 on the bill. Betty May, Florence Davidson, Marley, Lilly Lubell and Paul Osgood all appear in a special dance number after which "A Gentleman of Leisure," the feature goes on. Elizabeth Bartenieva then gives a dramatic recital, aided by Sylvester Belmont at the piano. "Nobody's Darling," a Baby Peggy comedy is the final number.

At Other Theaters

The Cameo still shows "Enemies of Women;" the Criterion, "The Covered Wagon;" the Lyric, "Human Wreckage" and the Strand, "Rupert of Hentzau."

Next Week on Broadway

The line-up at Broadway theaters next week includes "Three Wise Fools" at the Capitol; "The Purple Highway" at the Rialto; "Lawful Larceny" at the Rivoli and "The Brass Bottle" at the Strand.

Valentino's Future One Question Interests Industry: When Can He Start Making Pictures?

When will Rudolph Valentino start making productions for Ritz Carlton Pictures?
That's the one question interesting the film world in view of the announcement made in yesterday's issue by J. D. Williams that Valentino will make pictures for Ritz release.
At the dinner Wednesday night at the Ritz Williams said:
"I think Zukor will listen to reason. He is a very big man, building a very great institution and I am going to try to leave the settlement of the Valentino situation to reason. If we cannot get it settled that way, I intend to put it up to Will Hays to act as an arbitrator and try to settle this matter out of court. I am sure this matter will be adjusted."

Officials of Famous Players yesterday refused to comment in any way on either the Williams' statement with regard to the Valentino situation or the actual situation as it exists but it is understood that the situation will be something like this:
Famous Players—Valentino litigation can not be arbitrated by Will Hays or anyone else unless Valentino is prepared to pay Famous Players several million dollars, which they will contend is what they have been damaged by the failure of the star to live up to his contract.
The Valentino contract expires in February 1924, but Famous Players' intention is that they have the right option for another year.

Production Problems

Of the Coming Season and Distribution, Discussed by Elmer Pearson at A. M. P. A. Meeting

Elmer Pearson, general manager of Pathe Exchange was the chief speaker at yesterday's meeting of the A. M. P. A. (Advertisers.) Production costs and distribution problems were his topics and he started off by declaring that the advertising and sales departments would have their work cut for them this season because of the strong productions under way and promised. He said production costs were from 35 to 100 per cent higher for the season than ever spent and more was being expended on them than had ever been taken

Discussed at Hearing—Famous Received $400,000 Yearly and Others $600,000, Michalove Testifies.

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Atlanta—Film rentals paid during the past three years to producers other than Famous Players by Southern Enterprises, Inc., a subsidiary of the former concern, have averaged $600,000 annually, while annual rentals paid to the parent corporation have averaged only $400,000 or about 40 per cent of the gross rentals, according to Dan Michalove, General Division Manager of the Paramount subsidiary who again was placed on the stand at the Federal Trade hearing here.

Editor of "Kine" Talks of Graft and Incompetency in Hollywood

"Canning factory."
"Trust-made pictures."
"Graft, incompetence, lack of understanding of what the public wants."
These interesting charges and statements were made with reference to pictures being made in Hollywood, by Frank Tilley, editor of the Kine-matograph Weekly of London, one of the strongest publications on the other side, at the Valentino-Williams dinner Wednesday night.
Tilley, just back from Hollywood, leaves for England tomorrow morning. He said that in California he saw no sign of the better pictures promised.

200 Theaters Closed

In Greater New York Vicinity—Says Billy Brandt Who Gives Some Reasons Why

Not 25 as stated in yesterday's issue of THE FILM DAILY, but over 200 motion picture theaters are closed in the vicinity of Greater New York.
This statement was made by "Billy" Brandt, president of the M. P. T. O. of New York State at the Valentino dinner Wednesday night at the Ritz. Among the causes ascribed for the closing of this unusual number of houses, said to be the greatest ever in the history of the industry, are lack of good productions, the unusually early summer, and daylight saving.
In commenting on the situation, Brandt said that undeniably 80 per cent or more of these houses would be re-opened in the fall but not by the former owner or manager; that the houses would probably be taken over by circuits or that new money would come into the business.

Rentals In South

Practically all the afternoon session was concerned with the re-direct examination of Michalove with Chief Counsel Fuller seeking to establish through a detailed analysis of each town that theaters operating in opposition to Southern Enterprises constituted no formidable competition. The witness repeatedly declared that any amusement showing in opposition to a picture theater constituted competition. Cross examination by Robert Swaine, of counsel for Famous further emphasized the respondent's attitude toward any opposition as being positive competition but at the same time the counsel drew from the witness the statement that "the theaters we run are the best in town."

Exhibitors on Stand

Another witness was W. L. Brandenberg salesman for Vitagraph who emphatically denied that he had any instructions to push the booking of Vitagraphs "Little Minister" even sacrificing price in order to compete with Paramount's picture of the same name. Asked by Swaine whether he thought $25 a fair price for "Blood and Sand" in Americus, Ga., the witness replied "No, I do not, but I will say that Americus is the poorest picture town in the state for its size." This question was incident to Paramount's taking the service away from Rylander who refused to pay more than $25 for "Blood and Sand."

C. D. Cooley of Tampa, testified that after Frank Freeman had assured him Sou. Enter. would not come to Tampa without consulting him Freeman was called to Texas and another Sou. Enter. representative came into Tampa and bought a competitive theater without Cooley's knowledge within less than a fortnight following Freeman's assurance. Subsequently and after much negotiation Cooley and his associates formed with Sou. Enter. a new operating company that still controls the Tampa theaters. The witness did not testify as to breach of faith on Freeman's part but rather seemed to regard the purchase of the first Tampa holding by the Southern Enterprises' representative as a matter in which Freeman had no hand. Cooley testified that he was forced to enter into some sort of arrangement because against Sou. Enter. opposition he could not get the pictures he wanted. Of the three witnesses called by the Government Wednesday, L. D. Joel of Jacksonville, Fla., Frank H. Smith of Thomasville, Ga., and Barney Beachem, Jr. of Orlando, Fla. by far the most interesting testimony was developed from Joel, who declared that Southern Enterprises had harassed him in various enterprises.

Says He Was Harassed

Joel recounted in detail his experience in Lakeland, where he acquired a relatively large theater, called the Auditorium, in opposition to the Casino, a smaller house running Paramount pictures and owned by one Garner. In his direct testimony the witness said in agreement with Garner, prices were raised in both the Casino and Auditorium, and tried out for weeks; then, being unable to make a go of the Auditorium, Joel asked Garner to agree to reducing the price, Garner refusing. Subsequently Joel reduced his admission to 20 cents but issued cards representing the equivalent of ten cents which virtually made his admission 10 cents. Still later, when a Government official advised him unless he discontinued the cards, he must pay war tax, Joel actually reduced the admission to 10 cents—whereupon Garner protested that the Casino was losing money, because of Joel's methods and Joel offered to buy out Garner but satisfactory terms could not be reached.

Shortly thereafter, witness said Sou. Enter. bought a half interest in the Casino, and began furnishing films free of charge, furthermore free tickets and cash prizes constituted further inducement at the Casino.

Meantime, Joel declared distributing companies other than Paramount began selling their product to Sou. Enter. for the Casino, thus depriving him of pictures with which to compete. Thereupon, Joel testified, he converted the Auditorium into a Keith house, but after four weeks Delmar of Keith cancelled his contract without giving a reason. Admitting himself licked, the witness said, he sold the Auditorium to Sou. Enter. for $7,500 although it represented an investment of more than $12,000, and he said, $25,000 would have been a fair price.

Production Attacked

"There is a lot more money being spent on pictures than heretofore, but the pictures are not so good, and the most of the money being spent is going into studio politics and graft," he said. "Stories are not being purchased because of their value, but because of the graft that someone obtains from the purchase."

He said that the increased cost is not going on the screen and added that American producers had betrayed the artistic success of the screen to a greater extent than the English producers had. He predicted a complete collapse of the motion picture industry within the next five years unless producers more reasonably sensed the desires of the public in its motion picture entertainment.

"The trouble is," said Tilley, "that producers think that by appealing to the lower elements they are giving the public what it wants. They don't give the public what it wants, but what they think it wants."

The Tilley remarks came late during the speech making, but among those who challenged his statements were Martin Quigley of the Exhibitors' Herald, who said that he deplored the Tilley viewpoint on foreign production and added that he hoped Mr. Tilley might converse with some who might change his view prior to his departure. George Blaisdell of the Exhibitors' Trade Review also questioned the Tilley statements.

Editor's Note: Frank Tilley is an able, conscientious, capable editor. He has made a place for himself in the conduct of "Kine."

It may be that petty grafting carries on in certain studios, but when he makes the declaration that forthcoming pictures will not show on the screen the added cost of production he generalizes on a statement, the accuracy of which will undeniably be challenged by the type of production to be presented.

Mr. Tilley's viewpoint that producers are giving the public not what it wants, but what they think it wants, is something akin to the problem which developed the first horse-race—that is a difference of opinion.

And when Mr. Tilley predicts the collapse of this industry within a period of five years unless these conditions change—well—Mr. Tilley is a brave man.

in by the directors in any one year—reiterating what has previously appeared in this publication.

During the time when he answered questions John Flinn of Famous wanted to know if he thought the theaters would be able to absorb the product and Pearson admitted that distributors and producers would have to look a little more into the theater side of the case than ever. He declared all pictures should be sold on a cancellation basis, with the distributor having the same right. He believed "Robin Hood" would gross from $8,000,000 to $10,000,000 and felt there would be sufficient profit in this for exhibitors as well, admitting some had overpaid to secure the picture and keep it from another exhibitor. Answering Eddie Klein as to possible results and benefit to be obtained through a consolidation of some of the distributing companies Pearson said an investigation made at the time of the proposed distribution by the American Express Co. showed the distributing costs would not be saved to any extent by consolidation; that actual handling cost about 11 or 12 per cent; that advertising and exhibitor helps could not be dispensed with without injuring business with the exhibitor.

Harry Reichenbach broke in and said that the consolidation of distributing was a Utopian idea that would never be achieved. A. M. Botsford, Famous, wanted to know about the revival of costume pictures and Pearson said the old feeling against them had been worked away because of the success of those that had been made. Pearson added that he was sorry to see some concerns making contracts for block booking of their entire product over long term contracts.

Leroy Ellsworth Groom, the consulting engineer, who, as noted, is working in pictures to offset the Edison theory about college men was introduced and told his story. Referring to the plan of the collegians Pearson offered a job in the business end of the industry to any of the collegians if they wanted to try it out.

Tilley's Charges

As to graft. Incompetence. Lack of understanding on the part of producers. As to what the public wants. Sure to raise a hullabaloo. Out in Hollywood. And when his paper—"Kine"—reaches this side it will sure carry interesting matter.

Tilley spent a month on the Coast. Just got back. And sailed for England Saturday. And told a lot at the Valentino dinner. Of how producers were failing. And how pictures wouldn't show next season. For the money being put in them. Talked of graft. In the purchase of stories. And all that sort of thing. Predicting, in the end, a collapse of the business within five years. If these conditions did not change.

Maybe Tilley's right. Maybe the increased cost of production won't show. In the coming pictures. But if those already shown are an indication—then Tilley is just all wrong. It is possible that exhibition values to be placed on the coming product will be higher than cost justifies. But that's not new. That's old stuff. Always has been done. Don't see any chance of a change. The whole business needs changing around to stop that. But if the pictures for the coming season aren't better—on the average—than ever before—we're making the worst guess in the world.

Only a few have been seen so far. They include "The Merry-Go-Round," which is a sweet baby for any box office—"Trilby," which will clean up if given a fair chance, and show a new girl who promises to be a comer—"Hollywood," which

According to Patterson, the ability of Southern Enterprises to pay more for pictures than its competitors works a hardship in many instances on independent exhibitors. As an example, he cited the showing of "Main Street," at the local Howard, owned by Southern Enterprises. Patterson stated that after the Metropolitan had offered 20 per cent of the box office receipts as rental for the film, the Howard secured the picture by bidding 25 per cent of the receipts and guaranteeing a minimum of $12,500.

Testimony that the practice of large firms exhibiting pictures from their own studios in theaters owned and controlled by themselves and the practice of selling films in groups, rather than individually, had practically barred the independent producers in the larger cities in the Southeast was given by Michael C. Coyne, district exchange manager for United Artists.

According to Coyne, the practice of "block booking" was employed by all the leading picture corporations in this territory, and the exhibitor has to buy a number of inferior films to obtain special features which his patronage demands. He further stated that the practice of buying films in blocks frequently overstocked the exhibitor and that they find themselves under contract for so many pictures that they do not have time to show all.

He called attention to the recent announcement of a series of 29 by First National and said in order to get the features they desire, exhibitors will be obliged to contract for the entire series.

H. H. Jackson, an exhibitor in Columbia, Tenn., testified that Paramount service had been taken away from him in Columbia, and that he had been told by R. B. Wilby, a district manager for Famous Players, that unless he sold out to Southern Enterprises, the corporation would "carry on its usual policy of building a theater of their own in competition." He said he sustained a $3,300 loss because the Paramount service was taken away from him.

Daniel Ware, of Barlow, Fla., told Examiner Fuller that a Southern Enterprises representative told him on one occasion that the company would show pictures for the war tax if such a step was necessary to drive him out of business.

D. V. Marquis, manager of the Orpheum of Barlow, testified that what he regarded as undue pressure was brought to bear to make him use Paramount films.

On cross examination by Robert T. Swaine, chief counsel for Famous Players, Marquis admitted that he had paid a $100 penalty for violation of his contract with Southern Enterprises, in that he had subrented films owned by them to an exhibitor in a neighboring town.

Barney Beachem, Jr. of Orlando, Fla., gave no testimony that indicated any coercion in the sale of his theaters to Southern Enterprises, Inc. He did say, however, that E. J. Sparks stated to him that Southern Enterprises would go into every town where L. D. Joel of Jacksonville went.

Testimony of Frank H. Smith was wholly favorable to Famous, it being shown that although Son. Enter. had opened negotiations for his Thomasville theater, they desired nothing more than a channel for their product and it was Smith's own suggestion that if they give him the Paramount service at a price he could pay, he would prefer not to sell. Witness testified, that Frank Freeman issued instructions to the Paramount exchange—which resulted in his getting service for less money than before—and Smith did not sell.

When the inquiry resumes, Will Woods, an exhibitor of Gadsden, Ala., will take the stand. Examination of witnesses in Atlanta will be concluded early next week, according to Fuller.

Keaton's Next "Hospitality"

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Los Angeles—Buster Keaton's next picture for Metro will be "Hospitality" in which his mother and father will appear. This will be the first time the Keatons will make a joint appearance since their old vaudeville days.

Equipment Dealers Dinner

Members of the Eastern Zone, of the recently organized Ass'n of Equipment Dealers of America, tendered "Bill" Oldknow of Atlanta, national president, a dinner at the Astor Thursday night. Max G. Felder was chairman and called on Wm. C. Smith to act as toastmaster. The chief address was made by Oldknow, who told of how the organization planned to establish a credit bureau to save the losses that occurred annually. He pointed out that every year something like 40 per cent of the equipment dealers failed; that this branch of the business did something like $10,000,000 annually, and that organization could place them in a profitable, rather than an unprofitable business.

Billy Brandt spoke on the value of organization and said that the equipment men could help the exhibitors a great deal in having the admission tax removed. Lou Blumenthal also spoke in behalf of exhibitors, and among the other speakers were Jack Hornstein, Felder, and Danny of THE FILM DAILY. C. B. Hoy, in charge of the credit department, told of the need of organization for credit purposes alone. He just returned from a trip to the Middle West and reported conditions as deplorable so far as equipment men were concerned. The representative of one of the leading projection machine companies said that his company had not made a dollar during the past two years, "not enough to pay our advertising bills," he said.

Viola Dana in "Her Fatal Millions"

Metro
 Pleasing farce with star in role of her typical girl; will satisfy a variety.

Furnishes a good deal of entertainment in role of shop girl who is millionaire; will please admirers and gives a first performance.

All right; includes Huntly Wood, Allan Forest, Peggy Wood, Kate Price, Edward Conlon and others.

Story....One of those comedy farces in which the situation becomes highly involved and the action consisting of piling complications and finally arriving at a denouement; girl plans to display to meet former sweetheart now rich business man, by acquiring jewelry, furs and automobile not her own, with complications that implicate a domestic quarrel and even ends in her marriage to the sweetheart.

Box Office Angle....An average attraction that will do as a regular attraction offering without any special posting and will allow for a variety of short reels.

Exploitation....Appeal to Viola Dana's admirers by telling them she is a role especially well suited to her personality. Let them know she plays the part of a shop girl who borrows "fine feathers" in order to pretend to a former sweetheart that she has made great money in his absence and in spite of apparent neglect of her.

Direction....An engagement ring is the thing that gives the girl a hunch, she might use posters with a large engagement ring and the star's picture in the center with the line: "What an engagement ring I had in 'Her Fatal Millions,'" Dana's latest picture at the theater."

Exploitation....might also arrange a tie-up with a jewelry shop by having the display a variety of engagement rings and strings of pearls with a notice reading: "A diamond and a pearl necklace play important parts in 'Her Fatal Millions' at the blank theater. See Viola Dana's latest and you'll know what she has made great money in his absence and in spite of apparent neglect of her."

Direction by....William Beaudine; directed the picture along strict technical lines and for the most part distributes the laughs satisfactorily although the picture is at times riotously funny.

Author....William Dudley Pelley
Scenario....Arthur Statter
Director....John Arnold
Photography....All right.
Any city....Any city.
Length....About 6,000 feet.

"Itching Palms"

Film Booking Offices

As a Whole....AN AVERAGE PICTURE WITH A GOOD MANY IMPROBABILITIES BUT SURPRISE ENDING EXCUSES MOST OF THEM.

Players....A satisfactory cast that measures up to requirements on most occasions; Tom Gallery suitable hero and Virginia Fox a pretty heroine although she hasn't very much to do; Victor Potel a sort of simpleton whose weakness for stealing hats is only a ruse to cover his real identity, that of a private detective; others Tom Wilson, Joseph Harrington, Gertrude Claire, Robert Walker, Tom Lingham and Richard Cummings.

Type of Story....A combination of drama, comedy, mystery, meller and what-not. Not very carefully constructed and continuity has several misleading twists although it may add to the mystery atmosphere and help along the suspense where that element happens to interest them; son of dead man fights bogus doctor who threatens to expose latter's theft but son eventually proves the doctor guilty.

Box Office Angle....Suitable for the average theater if shown with good selection of short reel pictures; not especially deserving of particular exploitation; the regulation announcements should be all that is necessary.

Exploitation....Rely chiefly on the title to attract them. It is fairly catchy and should readily attract the eye. You have no names to use in connection with the title so give it all the space in your campaign. Get behind the title in your newspaper advertising.

Should you care to go a little further into boosting it,—and it might be worth while if you know they like mystery meller with comedy touches—you can use the stage money stunt. Distribute bills with the line printed on them: "Have you 'Itching Palms'?" It may mean money." Follow the stunt with announcements of the showing.

Posters might contain a palm of a hand such as those displayed by palmists with the lines of the hand indicated. A woman dressed as a fortune teller going about distributing the money, as suggested above, might also attract attention.

Direction by....James W. Horne; has done fairly well but could have improved upon continuity in several instances; otherwise average.

Author....Wyndham Gittens and Helmer Bergman.

Scenario by....Wyndham Gittens and Helmer Bergman.

Cameraman....William Marshall.

Photography....All right.

Locale....A farm.

Length....6,100 feet.

Tom Mix in "Soft Boiled"

Fox

As a Whole....A NEW VENTURE FOR MIX. COMEDY THAT WILL REGISTER WITH MIX FANS AND SERVE TO SATISFY AS ENTERTAINMENT FOR THE MAJORITY OF PICTURE GOERS.

Star....Works to put the part over and supplies all of the pep in the film; his whirlwind climax going to go big where they like the action fast.

Cast....Billie Dove opposite Mix; others Joseph Gerard, L. C. Shumway, Tom Wilson, Frank Beal, Jack Curtis.

Type of Story....Comedy-drama with the comedy accentuated; not much to the story, but it has laughs and moves along at a good pace; the picture needs cutting to eliminate a few slow spots, the more obvious because the rest of the picture steps along fast.

Exploitation....Story deals with rich uncle who threatens to disinherit nephew unless he curbs his violent temper; in a thirty day trial Mix avoids all temptation to fight but on the first day following his probation makes up for it, but wins the uncle's admiration as well as a wife.

Box Office Angle....When properly cut so that it can be used to better advantage and also make a better impression, "Soft Boiled" should be a satisfying number. It is a good humorous entertainment.

Exploitation....Shouldn't be difficult. This is one of the first of the new Fox schedule of releases. Let them know it is something out of the ordinary for Mix. Play his name up prominently and say he leaves off the cowboy togs to play comedian. Show them stills of Mix in his shoe clerk costume.

For a stunt get a local gent's furnishing store to put on a display of canes in their window. You might get a collection of broken canes, put them in a pile in the window with a sign reading: "He's raising cane. Who? Tom Mix at the blank theater in his latest picture 'Soft Boiled.'" This is in line with the uncle in the picture who breaks a stick every time he gets mad.

Another idea would be to distribute china eggs with the words: "How do you like 'em?" This might be in the form of a teaser, followed by announcements of the showing.

Direction by....J. G. Blystone; has gotten a good deal out of story in spite of its being rather slight and puts the laughs over well; gags occasionally overworked but these can be fixed in cutting.

Author....Edward Moran

Scenario....Edward Moran

Cameraman....Dan Clark

Photography....All right

Locale....An inn and the home of hero's uncle.

Length....7,054 feet

Jackie Coogan in "Circus Days"

Producer Sol Lesser

Distributor: First National

As a Whole....JACKIE ANOTHER JOY IN PICTURE OF KID DAYS THAT IS A DELIGHT IN EVERY RESPECT AND SHOULD MAKE A CLEAN SWEEP.

Star....The inimitable Jackie; either bringing a laugh or putting over a touch of pathos and he hits the mark every time; "the kid" never fails to register.

Cast....Good types and satisfactory although subordinate to Jackie, as usual; includes Barbara Tennant, Russell Simpson, Claire McDowell, Cesare Gravini, Peaches Jackson, Sam de Grasse, DeWitt Jennings, Nellie Lane and Wm. Barlow.

Type of Story....Not big, not unusual, but a real treat when it comes to entertainment; just a lot of kid stuff that pulls big at all times and with everybody.

Box Office Angle....Can't miss. Your only worry on this one is to get your order in before the other fellow. You can't go wrong on this Jackie Coogan picture. He's an idol for old and young.

Exploitation....Get in back of this one and if you don't clean up with it it's your own fault. You have the goods and if you cannot get results, it must be due to poor showmanship.

First of all bank on Jackie Coogan's name and his past successes to get them interested in "Circus Days." He hasn't done anything just like this before so you can promise them something a bit different.

On account of the circus atmosphere, any street stunts should naturally pertain to a circus. If you can secure a regular circus wagon, have clowns driving it about town distributing throw-aways.

Poster the town with announcements and pictures of Jackie in his bareback riding outfit. If you get a youngster that resembles Jackie to dress up in the typical Coogan get-up, you might attract considerable attention.

What kid in your town looks most like Jackie? Get the idea?

The entrance to your theater can be decorated to represent the entrance to a tent. Use whatever else you can to create the atmosphere of a circus.

Direction....Eddie Cline; has done splendidly on this one; picture is a good length, moves along at a satisfying pace with the laughs just correctly shaded with pathos; it's very good work all told.

Author....From James Otis' "Toby Tyler"

Scenario....Eddie Cline and Harry Weil

Cameraman....Frank Good

Photography....First rate

Locale....A farm and a traveling circus

Institutional Advertising of Balaban and Katz, Chicago

INTEREST-AROUSING copy placed in Windy City newspapers by the Chicago showmen. The second in the series of display ads designed to acquaint the Chicago public with pertinent facts about the B. and K. houses. The ad immediately below, in its original form, was 8 inches by 16 inches and that on the right, 6 inches by 20 inches.

Balaban & Katz
Work-Shop

The "Little Chicago"

—the most exclusive theatre in the world

On the top floor of the Chicago Theatre building is the "Little Chicago," the private theatre of Balaban & Katz, and the only one of its kind in the world.

No admission price is charged to enter this theatre. The public has never seen it — doesn't even know it exists. It opens its doors only to the members of the Balaban & Katz organization. It is their work-shop.

The "LITTLE CHICAGO" seats only 250 people, yet it is as completely equipped as any theatre in the land. It has a wide, deep and complete stage, wings, drops, curtains, spot-lights, colored lights, moving-picture screen, dressing rooms and every facility and convenience known to the modern play-house.

The "LITTLE CHICAGO" is a try-out theatre where the executives of the Balaban & Katz organization, the theatrical experts, moving-picture experts, musical directors, light and scenic artists, gather to discuss and rehearse the specialties and pictures suggested for Balaban & Katz theatres. Nothing has a place on a program until it is passed upon and approved by this entire organization.

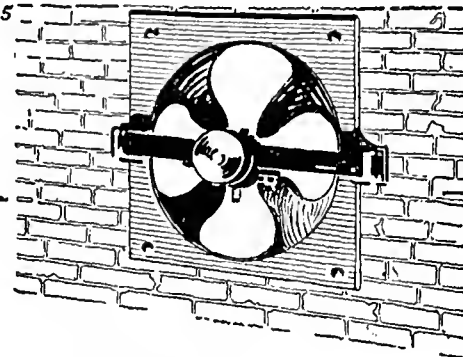

It is a very critical "audience." It is a paid audience, composed of men chosen from the very top of their professions. Each is a recognized specialist. And they use their combined brains and knowledge, and devote their lives to developing entertainment for you.

Old-Time Ventilation

This was our "ventilating system" in 1908. This funny old exhaust fan was originally used in a saw-mill and eventually found its way to a junk yard where we bought it for $28.

It was a God-send to us in those primitive days of the motion-picture theatre, because, after two audiences had been in the house, the air was thick enough to slice. Gee! we can remember it yet.

We put the fan in a hole in the wall and attached it to the electric light power. It was effective, all right enough, but when it was turned on, the lights went down and the pictures became dim and vague.

At full speed the fan made a noise like an approaching cyclone. The roar and the rattle frightened half the audience, and annoyed the other half to the point of murder.

In the alley across from us was a restaurant. And when the fan really got busy, it caught up the smells from the restaurant kitchen and distributed them around the neighborhood. And it wasn't good advertising for the restaurant.

Can you wonder, after those experiences, that we all became bugs on the subject of ventilation and dug up everything that had ever been written about it? No one in this wide world had more cause to analyze, dissect, bisect and study the subject of fresh air and ventilation.

And see what it has led to. Our four beautiful theatres of today are equipped with ventilating and refrigeration apparatus that represents an investment of over $500,000. And there are as many men working downstairs making comfort for you as there are upstairs making entertainment.

From the ashes of the past come the wonders of today.

Herbert Rawlinson in "The Victor"

Universal
As a Whole....LIGHT COMEDY-
A MA THAT SHOULD AP-PEAL GENERALLY; A REAL FIGHT AND SOME WELL HANDLED COMEDY SCENES.

...Does rather well in English
"role" and gets his fight scenes across in good shape.

...A very satisfactory cast includes Dorothy Manners as girl, Esther Rawlston, Eddie Carson, Frank Currier, and Otis
Harmon who gets over the role of Chewing Gum King in a way that will bring the laughs.

Type of Story....Interesting incident the most part dealing with the eccentric ways in which an English man's son, without money, manages to live at the best hotels.
Finally becoming a pugilist, he wins a championship and solves all difficulties for himself, his father and the young struggling actress who is in love with.

Office Angle....This should please the average audience without any difficulty. It is short enough to enable you to build up a good short reel program in conjunction with it, and contains pleasing incident, a good fight and quite a few laughs.

Exploitation....An attractive lobby display of posters and stills showing the fighters in the ring will arouse interest. Play up this feature of the picture where you have crowd that you know enjoys fight scenes. In the event that you can play this before a big fight you can attract attention by having signs in your lobby and over them sign reading "Who will be the winner?" "No one knows!" "But Herbert Rawlinson become The Victor in the blank theater on..."

Technique....Such as "Do culture technique count more than the force in the ring?" "See a man's son knock-out Porky Schaup,
The Victor."

Direction by....Edward Laemmle; adds the interest and injects good humor with the help of Otis Harmon. Fight scenes run a trifle too long to please some women. English dialogue titles are a bit overdone at times.

Cast....Gerald Beaumont
Protagonist by....E. Richard Schayer
Cameraman....Clyde De Vinna
Photography....Satisfactory Location....New York City, a hotel and a prize ring.
Length....4,880 feet.

Elaine Hammerstein in "Broadway Gold"

Producer: Edward Dillon Prod.
Distributor: Truart-State Rights

As a Whole.....INTERESTING STORY OF STAGE LIFE WITH THE SORT OF SITUATIONS AND ATMOSPHERE THAT USUALLY MAKE FOR FIRST RATE AUDIENCE APPEAL.

Star....Pretty and very pleasing; always very sincere in her portrayal and likely to satisfy her admirers especially for her performance in this.

Cast....A strong cast and with a lot of popular favorites; Kathlyn Williams gives interesting characterization; Elliot Dexter a first rate hero. Others Elois Goodale, Richard Wayne, Harold Goodwin, Henry Barrows.

Type of Story....Melodrama of stage life with colorful atmosphere that usually gets them interested right off; has the meller laid on too thick with two deaths and one near death occurring; plot development is very good and interest well sustained, with denouement never allowed to become obvious.

Chorus girl marries man upon death bed to satisfy a dying request, meantime becomes implicated in murder case, is cleared and happy with husband when he recovers.

Box Office Angle....They usually fall for a picture dealing with stage life. Here's a title that will get them right off. They'll know the picture has to do with the stage.
The story has first rate audience appeal and should go very well.

Exploitation....It should not be difficult to get this one over nicely. You have a good title and one that affords plenty of opportunity to play it up elaborately, if you care to.
Dress the front of your theater liberally in electric lights.

Use Elaine Hammerstein's name prominently in lights and let them know this is her first Truart production.

Distribute bogus coins merely containing the words "Broadway Gold." Follow the stunt up with throw-aways with catchlines such as: "All isn't gold that glitters."
See 'Broadway Gold,' Elaine Ham-
theater, and you'll know why."

Besides the star's name, let them know the cast contains Elliot Dexcharacterization will be enjoyed, and who gives the story an occasional humorous slant that gets over nicely.

"Lodge Night"—Our Gang—Pathe A Sustained Laugh

Type of production...2 reel kid comedy

At last "Our Gang" has a secret society of their own. They call it the "Cluck Cluck Klams." "Lodge Night" shows them all as members with the exception of the little fat boy, who is initiated into its mysteries in the old barn. That's all you need to know about this one except that it's every bit as funny as the rest of this wonderful series, and in addition has a real plot. Little Farina, Mickey Daniels and all the rest of them do their stuff with evident enjoyment, and seem to get as much fun out of it as the audience. There is a scene in a school-room that is thoroughly enjoyable, but then, so is the rest of the two reels. You're sorry when it's over. Fatty is told to sign his name in blood and then he will be a member. He declines, saying he hasn't any blood handy.
They tell him he'll have to kiss the queen. And the queen turns out to be a boxing glove with a fist in it and a face drawn on it. He attempts to "kiss the queen," and is supplied with the necessary "blood," with which to sign the paper. And that's only one of the laughs.

"Nobody's Darling"—Century Another Cute Baby Peggy Comedy

Type of production...2 reel comedy

Baby Peggy is the star of "No-body's Darling," and for those who have once seen her, this ought to be enough. She's just as cute and charming as ever and somehow you never tire of seeing her open her eyes wide and look wise or grin delightfully or do any of her cute little tricks. This time she has various adventures, among them being shot out of a swing and into a truck full of colored orphans, where her face gets so dirty she is mistaken for one of them—until she eats some watermelon. Running away she finally takes refuge in a toy store where she dresses up like a wax doll for protection, but a little girl and her mother visit the store and buy her, thinking she is really a doll. She upsets the household generally, but is finally taken home by a kindly policeman.

"Pathe Review No. 29" Varied and Interesting Subjects

Type of production...1 reel magazine

Glimpses of cool clear waters with schools of fish swimming in them open this issue of Pathe's Review in a way that starts the reel right for these hot days. Next there are scenes of Leon Volkmar, potter, who makes vases as they were made in ancient Babylon. A novel feature under the title of "Something From Nothing" shows, by means of trick photography, chaotic masses slowly forming clear scenes and finally animating them. A glimpse at the harvest dance of the natives of East Africa and some very pretty pictures of the apple orchards of Normandy complete the issue.

"Spring Fever"—Century Rollicking Rural Slapstick

Type of production...2 reel comedy

"Spring Fever" doesn't differ much from the average rural slapstick that has been going the rounds for quite a while. Fred Spencer is the star, and gets his stuff over in pretty good shape. The early portion is devoted to Fred being chased all over the farm by a bull who gets tangled up in a tent. After a while Fred emerges from the tent dragging the dead bull by the tail—only the stuffing is apparent. In another instance a stuffed skunk is used instead of a real one.
The action is quite rapid, being kept moving all the time and will, in all probability, be found entirely satisfactory by the average audience.

"Gas and Air"—Hal Roach—Pathe Some Good Laughs in This One

Type of production...1 reel comedy

As the title would indicate, Stan Laurel's latest is another "auto" comedy which seem to be coming in scores right now. However, this one has more than the average amount of laughs in it. It is probably the most amusing short reel that Laurel has turned out for Pathe so far. He is a "handy man" for a local garage-man and, as usual, does everything wrong. He never cracks a smile all the way through, even when the gasoline pipe will not stop flowing and finally explodes shooting Laurel, the garage owner, a customer and a little quick-lunch counter into the middle of next week.

"Close Harmony"— Sing Them Again Series—Educ'l A Really Novel Number

Type of production...1 reel novelty

This is the first of a series produced by Norman Jefferies, under the brand name of the "Sing Them Again Series." An explanatory title informs you that they are "modernized revivals of the songs you used to sing," and they are. Pretty photographed scenes give one an idea of the song that is to follow, and the titles are snappy and attractive.
Finally the words of the chorus are flashed upon the screen with a cordial invitation to the audience to join in.
A complete music score has been designed for each picture in the series, so that while the action preceding the singing of the chorus is taking place, the verse of the song is being played. In this number are "Rosie O'Grady," "In the Shade of the Old Apple Tree" and "Sweet Adeline."
It is a distinct novelty.

Tilley's Charges

promises to eclipse "Souls for Sale"—Chaplin's "Immortal Women," which only cost $100,000 or so, but will surely have a tremendous exhibition value; "Three Wise Fools," which should be a delightful box office—"Little Old New York," which cost a fortune and shows it—and a lot more that haven't been seen. On paper the season's product looks big. Very big.

Tilley may be right. Maybe he saw more pictures than American trade editors ever see. Or have an opportunity of seeing. Maybe he saw more wastage in the studios than anyone else. Maybe. And perhaps he got "inside" and learned more about studio graft than most of us. Maybe.

Possibly he's correct. American producers may not be making the kind of pictures the public want. Joe Schenck may be all wrong in making "Ashes of Vengeance" with Norma at a cost of $750,000. Ingram may be crazy for spending nearly a million on "Scaramouche," and Doug may be a nut with his expenditures for "The Thief of Bagdad." And so on, with all the rest. But that great American public, for which Tilley has so much sympathy, will give the answer—not Tilley.

And it is possible that the industry will go to the demnition bow-wows in the next five years. Possible is the word. But I'll bet him anything in the world he's wrong—from a London "bowler" to a highball served at the Savoy in London.

ENGLISH PICTURES HERE

And while we're on the subject. "Kine" says English producers, including Rowson of Ideal, and others, are planning distribution of their product in America.

Fine. Come on over. If you've got good pictures. But if you haven't, lay away.

HIGH INVESTMENTS

Something like 200 theaters closed around New York. Unusual. Yes. Due to what "Billy" Brandt says? Yes—in part. But in part only. The real reason will be found as something like this: Too much investment. Buying in at the peak. And unable to carry on when the wallop comes. Too much expansion. Too much desire to "be big." That's the real answer.

FAMOUS—GRAUMAN—WEST COAST

So Famous has bought out Grauman. And will own three houses in Los Angeles. All by itself. Why did Grauman get out? Well, of course only the principals know. But it isn't much of a secret that Famous isn't tickled pink over the expansion of the Lesser-Gore West Coast crowd. And perhaps it was better to be entrenched all on their own, than to have anyone else "in" should West Coast make a move.

VALENTINO AND WILLIAMS

Well, it was the big news of the week, wasn't it? There have been a lot of producers and distributors who have longingly gazed at Valentino and wished a bit. But Jaydee stepped in on 'em. And turned the trick. And now the only question remaining is: when will the Valentino pictures come? And how soon?

The answer may be a long way off. Despite Jaydee's assurances that he intends settling the difficulty out of court. Famous Players seem willing to settle. But at a cost of a million or two. Or three. And Valentino says he won't work for Famous. And February—1925, is a long way off isn't it?

It's a nice problem, anyway.

JACK COHN'S FISH

Jack Cohn, C. B. C. went fishing last week. And got mixed up on his statistics. He didn't know whether the boat or the fish was 62 feet long.

NOT INFALLIBLE

Reviewers aren't infallible. They aren't 100 per cent perfect. No one should expect them to be. And sometimes they step on a producer's toes. And do a lot of damage. By what they say—and how they say it—and where they say it.

All of which is apropos to what occurred in our review of "Temptation." Our reviewer stepped on it. That's the plain unvarnished truth. And our reviewer was wrong. And that's more of the plain unvarnished truth. "Temptation" is a darned good picture—and will do business almost everywhere—and is doing it. A C. B. C. release.

It doesn't do much good to say you're sorry. After you've done a lot of harm. It doesn't accomplish much. But we are. Darned sorry.

THE LIFE OF HI ABRAMS

Still working on this. These feature stories are difficult. But the data is coming along. And will be started soon.

MERTON'S NOM DE PLUME

His name is Healey. His father is one of the best known restaurateurs in town. But the boy has ambitions. He wants to be a "movie"actor. So he happened to drop in Jess Smith's office. And told his story. Smith listened. Finally he said, "Well, maybe you have a chance. But you'll have to do something with your name. Healey is all right—but not in pictures."

Young Healey was all willingness. "I don't mind that," he said, "what name would you suggest?"

Smith pondered a moment. "Well," he said finally, "you might try Clifford Armytage."

"Sure," said Healey.

If you know "Merton of the Movies" this will hand you a laugh.

ALL STARS

Arthur Friend tells this one. Talking to Marcus Loew. Marcus raving about an "all star" cast with many notables. In one of Metro's pictures. "And that's the way to make them," said Marcus. "Yes," said Friend, "well, who are the stars in this 'all star' cast?" Well," said Loew, "Lon Chaney's in it—" "Yes," said Friend, after a pause, "yes, Chaney, and who else?" Silence. More silence. Then, said Loew, "Chaney's in it, and—" and there was another pause.

"And," said Friend, "that's the all star cast. You remember one name."

In the Courts

Rudolph Valentino has won his application to have the attachment against his property in the suit of his former attorney Arthur Butler Graham, for a balance of $48,000 for legal services, vacated. Justice Ford, who heard the case, said that the papers do not show that the services performed by Graham were worth $65,000, as he claimed that they were any more than they show that they were worth $20,000, the sum already paid. The court also said that the affidavits submitted Graham are too vague and general "to furnish a reasonably accurate estimate of the value of the service outlined."

Graham contended that nearly all the employees of his office spent many months working on the Valentino case, and that it was through his efforts that Valentino has been enabled to draw $5,000 a week recently, which sum he says he hears Valentino is to get while he is abroad.

Grauman's new Hollywood house for pictures exclusively will probably cost $1,500,000. It will face Hollywood Boulevard. It would not prove surprising to learn of plans to build Grauman houses in Long Beach, Pasadena and San Diego. The second Hollywood house will be constructed jointly by Grauman and the West Coast Theaters group. As a matter of fact, Grauman will probably be very closely identified with that organization in the future.

I thought you might be interested to know the results of my first advertising venture in the special department for manuscript brokers in the FILM DAILY.

Because of the wide circulation my modest "AD" received I have been flooded with letters and telegrams from producers and directors who are seeking good screen material, and I am sure that I should never have come in contact with so many purchasers had I not advertised in the FILM DAILY.

Hearing at Atlanta—More Testimony Taken Regarding Southern Enterprises

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Atlanta—D. B. Dixon, exhibitor of Winder, Ga., testifying before Examiner Alvord of the Federal Trade Commission, declared that difficulties he had experienced with Southern Enterprises led to the showing of moving pictures in a Winder church by a Southern Enterprise salesman. The exhibition of films in the church he said was resorted to as a means of forcing him to buy Paramount service, which is handled in the south by Southern Enterprises, subsidiary of Famous Players.

The testimony of Dixon, which covered the feature of Friday's session of the inquiry into charges of monopoly against Famous was corroborated

Hamilton will reach New York Tuesday accompanied by Lloyd Bacon and Hugh Fay, of his technical staff, and will immediately begin work at the Griffith studio at Mamaroneck on the picture in which Jolson was to have been starred. The tentative title will be, "Black and White." Jack Noble will direct. Hamilton's services were secured through a special arrangement with E. W. Hammons, of Educational, with whom he has a releasing contract for his own productions.

Equitable Rentals

BY ALEXANDER S. ARONSON

Sales Manager of Truart Film Corp.

When a feature picture is sold in Gopher Prairie, Minn., for $300 and its box-office value is $1000, that is not an equitable rental.

When a feature picture is sold in Mercy, R. I., for $2000 and its box-office value is $1200, that is not an equitable rental.

When a feature picture is sold to a chain theater operator for $75 to $100 per day and its box-office value is $125 per day, that is not an equitable rental.

When a feature picture is sold to an exhibitor in opposition to the chain operator for $200 per day and its box-office value is $125 per day, that is not an equitable rental.

The analysis of the foregoing will probably show: That Gopher Prairie is a controlled town and Mr. Controller says: "Take my price or leave it"; that Mercy, R. I. has lots of opposition bidding for product and the distributor says "Pay me my price or go without"; that Mr. Chain Theater Operator says: "I give you quantity booking; where I have opposition I pay fairer rentals and where I have no opposition the need for fair rentals is not apparent."

The opposition to the chain theater man—has the unhappy time of it—he gets what Mr. Chain Theater does not want and most times he pays more for less desirable product than Mr. Chain Theater man pays for good product.

Obviously, for an industry to survive, it must be basically sound and if the conditions mentioned above represent a general condition, insofar as the rental of films is concerned, then only the strong can survive and the weak must perish and eventually when giant meets giant, disaster must come and if the strong and the weak are to be permitted to survive and to live side by side, then the burden of the strong must not be shifted to the weak. To be basically sound, there must be equity—each thing its just due and no more, but no less.

If the industry as a whole, can view this question of equitable rentals without being self-centered, then it would cease to be a problem. From the writer's viewpoint, its solution is so obvious as to require only the mathematical precision to create it—an honesty of purpose to carry it through. At the outset, it must be generally agreed that the producer, the distributor and exhibitor are each in this business for profit. The exhibitor must recognize that to each production there is a production cost, an advertising cost, a print cost and a distribution cost and by the same token, the producer-distributor must also recognize that the exhibitor is burdened with an overhead and that his investment is subject to depreciation and both must recognize that every picture has a worth that can only be demonstrated by its box-office value and should be paid for accordingly. Those pictures that have box-office values, must receive their just due and for those that have none, the producer thereof must suffer.

To determine box-office value can only be done by percentage. Not the various forms of percentages now generally used in the industry, but a basis of percentage that is individual to

Northern California Decides Against Affiliation with M. P. T. O. at Frisco Meeting

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

San Francisco—As a result of a referendum vote taken at a special meeting of the M. P. T. O. of Northern California, it was decided not to affiliate with the M. P. T. O. of America.

While it is true that the Northern California unit had never joined the Cohen organization, following the return of its members from the Chicago convention, a resolution was introduced seeking to pledge the unit's moral and financial support to the national body. Messrs. Griffin, Perlin and Blumenfeld attended the Chicago convention as individuals and not as accredited representatives from this state. It seems the California unit had returned a charter sent to it following the Washington convention

Famous Players Endeavoring to Build up Good Will for Theaters by Community Service

Harold B. Franklin, director of theaters for Famous Players is working on a plan to build up the prestige of the Famous Players theaters throughout the country, by instructing the managers to take active part in the life of the various communities in which the houses are located.

The managers are being placed in various civic organizations; co-operation with better films committees is being urged and children's matinees suggested to accomplish this. Just what Franklin expects to do is explained in a letter sent to the various managers. It follows:

"It is our desire to operate all theaters upon a uniform plane of excellency which will enable the casual patron to recognize our theaters wherever they may be. We feel that certain policies, if adopted throughout the circuit, will do more to accomplish this end, than any other means which we might employ.

"We know that no theater of ours would subscribe to the old policy 'the public be damned,' but we are afraid that some managers forget that each individual with whom they come in contact is a part of the public, and that the manager's attitude towards the public is reflected through the individuals whom he meets personally. Good will, rated by the big corporations of today as more vital than equipment, is made for a theater or a company by making a friend here and there, one at a time. Absolute courtesy to every individual is essential.

"Following this thought a little further, we would like to make of each theater a community institution. To do this, you must put the personal element into every operation of your theater, you must make yourself and your theater play a part in the life of the community outside of regular business channels.

"We are going to a great deal of expense to place our managers in various civic organizations, and we cannot secure any return on this money unless each individual takes an active part in the organization of which he is a member; unless he seizes every opportunity, even outside of such organizations, to extend his acquaintanceship in the community. We do not mean that these efforts should be haphazard and without purpose, but that they should be so directed as to count, and to ally the influential men and women and organizations with us.

"In this same connection, we would like for every theater to lend its fullest co-operation to Better Films Committees where they have been established, and we would like to see them established in the near future where they do not now exist. Whether the Boys' and Girls' Matinees are operated in the theater under your management or in another in your community, we would like to see you render full co-operation to make them successful, as they give great promise of developing new patrons for the future and of creating good will in the present.

"In connection with the above policies, it is well to remember that women constitute 60 to 70% of our audiences, and that the friendship of the women's organizations should be considered as an invaluable asset, even though the gaining of this friendship requires time and entails some trouble.

"We do not wish you to misinterpret this letter to the extent of neglecting the management of your theater for the matters which we have suggested for your consideration, but rather would we have you realize that these matters are integral parts of the theater managers duties, and cannot be considered as apart or separate from the successful operation of your theater."

One meeting was called but lacked a majority. A second was then held when it was decided not to join Cohen. It is stated, however, that there is no desire to hamper the work of any national exhibitor body. The Northern California unit feels that it has problems of its own to work out. An indebtedness of $10,000 has been cancelled in the past eighteen months by the organization. A well equipped office is maintained here and the organization's activities against adverse legislation have been successful to a marked degree.

J. B. Parham, a newspaper man. Mrs. Charles Cinciolo, of Gainesville, Fla., another government witness, gave testimony favorable to the defendant. She stated that Famous Players, through Southern Enterprises, had assisted her in every way possible in the operation of her Gainesville theater. According to Mrs. Cinciolo, Southern Enterprises bought her theatrical holdings for $10,000 improved the property, operated the house 18 months and then sold it back to her for $12,000 going so far as to assist her in borrowing several thousand dollars from Gainesville bank. She further stated that after she had purchased the theater, Southern Enterprises handled her booking contracts and in every way kept her service at a high point of efficiency.

A large group of southern film men are attending the sessions which will be resumed and perhaps completed here today.

each house and honest in intent. The writer of this article believes that ultimately percentage, or rather scientific percentage, will come and that its method of operation will bear some semblance to what follows:

1.—That in each exchange center a rating board consisting of exchangemen together with accountants, will determine with each theater operator within its zone, the overhead per week of the theater under investigation. This audit will give due consideration to the theater that changes more than once a week; the overhead of such a theater will be apportioned by days, having due regard for its average daily receipts on the basis of house receipts being say 50% of its income on Saturday and Sunday, its expense will so be apportioned that one half of it is chargeable to Saturday's and Sunday's operations.

2.—That having ascertained the overhead either by past history or accounting audit, the method subject to such variation as experience will indicate will be substantially as follows:—the house to take all of the gross until its overhead is covered, then the production takes an amount equal to the pro rata that is assigned to the house as its share of production cost and the residue to be divided between the house and the production. For example, a house doing $10,000 a week and costing to operate excluding feature film, $7000 a week, would receive the first $7000. The production cost assigned to the house is say $1250, which the production would receive and the balance would be divided 50% to each. Under this plan the theater would receive its overhead back and $875. The producer would secure his production cost and overhead back ($1250) and would also receive $875 additional thereto.

3.—That all of these ratings being generally established for all theaters within the respective zones, there would be no price haggling. The distributor and the exhibitor would each get his fair share of receipts from each production, and the only sales problem involved would be whether a house wanted to run the specific attraction or not.

4.—That controlled towns and circuits would pay their fair share of each production and in communities where the opposition was keen, the exhibitor operating there would only pay what the production was worth.

The writer of this article realizes that the foregoing is subject to considerable enlargement and refinement but is of a firm conviction that each worthwhile production has a box-office value that can not be predetermined and that certain productions will go tremendously in one place and come a cropper in another and that the box-office receipts only can tell what the production should yield to the theater and the distributor.

Marketing Pictures

By ELMER R. PEARSON

General Manager, Pathe Exchange, Inc.

Controversial View of Alexander Aronson's Ideas Regarding Equitable Rentals in This Business

The average chain theater has so many natural handicaps that its opposition could scarcely wish for easier competition.

The average chain theater is operated by a salaried manager who, besides having no proprietary interest in his theater, is subject to frequent changes from place to place, and does not build up the personal good will and following, that the owner-manager builds up among his townsmen.

The chain theater usually must run pictures that are selected for the entire chain and often does not suit his particular locality, besides the proprietor manager books pictures to suit certain days, such as holidays both national and local, that during a year total hundreds and thousands of extra box-office receipts.

Los Angeles—Senator James J. Walker, leader of the majority in the New York Senate is here for a stay of several weeks.

Following his arrival, the Times, in an interview, stated the coast visit was possibly in connection with a national exhibitor movement.

Friends of Senator Walker in New York yesterday were seriously inclined to doubt the story appearing in the Los Angeles Times. Walker is, of course, out of sympathy with the Cohen organization. William Brandt, president of the M. P. T. O. of New York State stated that, if the coast

Famous Officials Point to Unexpired Term of Meighan's Contract In Denying Reported Change

One of the persistent reports along Broadway has it that Thomas Meighan intends switching allegiance from Famous Players to another company. Famous Players officials deny the report quite emphatically and back their statements by pointing out that Meighan has about three years to go under his present contract.

One Paramount official in discounting this talk pointed out that it was not the first time that similar reports had been circulated. He said the facts were wrong then as they are now. Meighan, incidentally started work yesterday on "All Must Marry" at the Lasky studio, Hollywood. Later, he will return East to make a Booth Tarkington story at Kennebunkport, Me.

Judge Winslow in the U. S. District Court, yesterday appointed John Martin Riehle, receiver for the Morosco Holding Co., Inc., in $100,000 bond. The suit is based on a Morosco note for $6,000 which Robert L. Hatch is now the owner.

Hatch, in the complaint, says the company owns the capital stock of the Morosco Productions Co., Inc., a California corporation which has contracts with First National.

Object to Special Runs

It is reported along Broadway that officials of the Mark-Strand organization do not like the plan to show "Ashes of Vengeance," the new Norma Talmadge picture and "The White Sister," the Lillian Gish "Inspiration vehicle at special theaters on Broadway. While the Mark-Strand interests have consented to pre-release engagements of important First National releases in the past, this has always been done with their consent. Apparently, this is not true of the two pictures named above. These two productions are to be released on the open market.

Marketing Pictures

The chain manager follows rather untried methods of advertising. The proprietor-managed theater not untried has available to him many unique means of exploitation, and everybody knows that even one new idea may put a picture over a big success where it would only have been only the traditional advertising means resorted to.

Chain theaters are operated largely according to a central policy that is quickly becoming traditional.

The one word that describes the essential to entertainment is "different."

"Difference" and "tradition" are opposite as the two poles.

Thus, while the chain house is largely confined to traditions, the proprietor-managed theater, if alert, can throw veritable rings around such competition with the many innovations of today's film market offers.

While there is considerable talk existing that the average chain buyer will buy a given product at all units he secures that product for his entire chain, Pathe does not find it difficult in most cases to exclude from chain bookings such towns and localities where we have a good local customer, or where such other theater is sufficiently better custom to pay more, or where we feel the single theater owner has a moral call on our product, and there are many such.

For years, I have been unable to understand why distributors seem to find percentage a difficult problem.

Ordinary pictures do not deserve percentage consideration at the hands of the exhibitor, but since the days of "Graustark," "Isle of Regeneration" and "Battle Cry of Peace," I have handled thousands of percentage bookings and with very rare exceptions, I do not know of any that were not fair to both sides and so declared by the interested exhibitors.

I know a number of other distributors, mostly staterighters, however, who also borrowed a page or two from the old legitimate roadshows, who never needed any tribunals to tell them how to divide moneys derived from their combined showmanship and box office attractions.

The average exhibitor is no hog, and the moment he is convinced from our proposed terms that you are trying to make a fair reciprocal deal and with an understanding of what is fair to him, he rarely fails to frankly and honestly cooperate with your purpose.

There is nothing very seriously wrong with the industry's present methods, and certainly the least is in distribution.

Comparatively the distributor has the greater investment.

A typical year returns figures substantially as follows:

Box office receipts...$650,000,000
To producers..... 85,000,000
To distributors..... 40,000,000

Of the distributor's $40,000,000, at least $25,000,000 is expended for selling and advertising.

While this selling and advertising is directed at the exhibitors, it is a very necessary service in that those sales arguments are used by the exhibitor in selling the public and without them, would do a much smaller national gross.

Surely there lives not a man who thinks $15,000,000 too much for physically handling the business of this entire industry.

It is easily possible that specialization, concentration, cooperation, and a little more consideration for the smaller exhibitor would bring about economy and much broader distribution for the industry's big attractions, some of which, I think, are handled disgracefully bad today.

The exhibiting end is getting a little too tradition-bound, brought about largely, I think, by the proprietor-managed theaters following too closely in the footsteps of the chain theaters.

Introduce innovations and new exploitation stunts. Vary your programs. Just now, for instance, the market affords plenty material for solid short subject programs every week, solid comedy days, etc., etc.

Entertainment is the desire in all of us to experience and see something, "different."

An Unusual Newspaper Tie-up

Cleveland—An unusual newspaper tie-up exploiting "The Ragged Edge," when it showed at the Mall and Park was obtained by Eddie Carrier, Goldwyn Cosmopolitan exploitation man, with the News-Leader.

Through the Sunday editor Carrier was able to arrange for the publication complete of the story, "The Ragged Edge," in the Sunday edition on the day when the picture opened. Five thousand posters, containing a reproduction of a "Ragged Edge" still, were printed to advertise the publication of the story in its Sunday issue and these were placed with the newsdealers and on newsboys' stands a week in advance.

Street Cars Boost "Souls"

Hutchinson, Kans.—The street car system of Hutchinson, was roped 100 percent, into helping exploit "Souls for Sale" at the De Luxe. Each car on the system carried a four foot banner on the front fender.

At a cost of $1.75 an hour an old street car was chartered and each side covered with a 24-sheet poster. The car was run through the city between the hours of 11 to 2, and from 5 to 8 the day before the opening and each day of the run.

Cut-outs from the one-sheet were placed in 10 conspicuous windows; a shadow-box, 25 feet long, with lettering patterned after that on the six-sheet, was placed in front of the theater; a register was placed in the lobby in which girls who wished to receive a letter from Eleanor Boardman wrote their names.

Newsboys on Parade

Woonsocket, R. I.—A newsboy parade was utilized by Joe Donahue, manager of the Park, and Buddy Stuart, Goldwyn Cosmopolitan exploitation man, for the local showing of "Sherlock Holmes". The Call-Reporter tied up with the theater on a special matinee for newsboys. The boys marched from the newspaper office to the theater carrying banners some of which read as follows: "We are going to see John Barrymore in Sherlock Holmes," "We are going to the newsboy party at the Park," "We are guests of the Woonsocket Call-Reporter and the Park Theater."

A thousand of the masks prepared by Goldwyn for use with "Sherlock Holmes" were distributed among the children.

Other exploitation for this showing included a window display of the "Sherlock Holmes" books at Flinn's; two illuminated 24-sheet boards, 50 letters to prominent men of Woonsocket inviting them to see the picture, throwaways, heralds and window cards.

End Atlanta Session

Trade Commission Resumes Investigation in New Orleans on Friday—Michalove Again Testifies

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Atlanta—The Federal Trade Commission's hearing into the activities of Famous Players and allied companies has been brought to a close here. The next seat of the hearing will be New Orleans where testimony will be taken Friday morning. Dan Michalove, general division manager of the Southern Enterprises, was the only witness called by the government Monday. His brief stay at the stand was consumed in classifying the 74 theaters in the Southern enterprise territory which had been disposed of.

A direct question by W. H. Fuller, government counsel, asking if the Southern Enterprises was not exercising a monopoly in this territory was answered in the negative by the witness who he attributed the success of the corporation to better management and a better class of pictures in the houses.

Another session for Atlanta is scheduled for sometime during the autumn, at which time Famous Players will present its case. Robert T. Swaine, Bruce Bromley and C. Frank Reavis have been counsel here for the defendants. Examiner E. C. Alvord has been presiding.

Pyramid Restrained

The action was taken as part of the Attorney General's crusade against alleged fraudulent stock promotions and under the authority of the Martin Act. The order was made returnable Friday at which time these named must show cause why they should not be permanently restrained.

According to the affidavits, Pyramid was organized under the laws of Delaware in July 1921 capital stock of $1,000,000. Subsequently, Smallwood & Co., Inc., acquired all of the stock of Pyramid Pictures, Inc., for property "of a nominal value."

According to testimony given by Smallwood when he was under investigation, half of this stock was returned to the treasury of Pyramid.

This stock was then repurchased by Smallwood & Co., Inc., it is alleged, for $2.50 a share and resold by the latter company to the public for $7.50 a share. In all, it was alleged by the Attorney General, $600,000 worth of this stock has already been disposed of.

A plan called the "pyramid plan" was then evolved whereby the stock was to be sold in six units of $100,000 each. Each unit represented a picture, and the stock was to earn profits as the profits of the separate pictures were earned.

Recently $2,000,000 in bonds, were authorized. These were sold to Smallwood & Co., Inc., for $66.66 for each $100 bond, it was alleged. These bonds were to be substituted for stock in the syndicate up to the $600,000 worth of stock and the remainder was to be sold to the public. Already, the affidavit states, $300,000 worth had been substituted, and when a stockholder did not own enough stock to equal a bond cash was collected for the balance.

Smallwood was not at his office yesterday and it was not known when he would return.

of exhibitors would consider him a brave man for doing that.

He went further, however, and booked "Merry-Go-Round" after it has played for three weeks at the Rivoli and Rialto, and opened it at the Central, the day after it closed at the Rialto. He stated yesterday that business is building at every show, and that the gross is ahead of that of "The Storm," which played at the Central this week last year. Cobe figures it in this fashion:

"I have been making presentations on Broadway for more consecutive years than any other exhibitor that I know of, and I am sure of this one thing: when you have the picture, you can get the crowd, summer, winter or any other time. I don't intend to stop with this Central theater showing of 'Merry-Go-Round.' I am in negotiation for several other theaters."

One Week Stands for Pictures and Vaudeville in South—Thus Expect

A decision has been reached by the Loew circuit to inaugurate one week stands for pictures and vaudeville in important Southern cities beginning September 1.

Atlanta, Memphis, Birmingham and New Orleans are at present included in the innovation with a possibility that some towns in Texas will be brought into the group later. This means, of course, that where 104 pictures have been used a year in these cities, only 52 will now be necessary. So far as the vaudeville is concerned, it is expected to improve the programs because the acts will have to be of a higher calibre to stand the week runs. So far as pictures are concerned, while the number shown will be cut about in half, more money will be naturally paid in rentals to the distributor.

"Lawful Larceny"—F. P.-L.—Rivoli

AMERICAN—* * * is one expensive scene after another. * * * As a dramatic effort, "Lawful Larceny" is a sartorial revue.

EVENING WORLD—* * * proves an excellent excuse for much strutting on the part of Nita Naldi, Conrad Nagel, Lew Cody and Hope Hampton. This might sound somewhat like the echo of a hammer-throw, but it isn't; for we rather liked the picture, despite the fact that it sidles around in circles.

DAILY NEWS—It's not a very black sin to steal from a crook, "Lawful Larceny" tells us all over again, in much the same manner as we have often been told before.

MAIL—Samuel Shipman's play has, at the hands of Allan Dwan, the director, resolved itself into an ordinary film. * * *

The picture gives Hope Hampton an excellent opportunity for some good acting.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—When Samuel Shipman wrote "Lawful Larceny" he conceived a forceful, entertaining, compelling, human interest play. While digressing slightly from the original text, all of these qualities have been retained and well sustained in its adaptation for the screen. It has been carefully directed with good attention to detail and the costumes and interiors are exceedingly attractive.

SUN—It offers Hope Hampton a chance to do her best work in some time, and Conrad Nagel as the husband, Nita Naldi as the adventuress (of course) and Lew Cody as her gentlemanly but rascally assistant also bear the brunt of the action very ably.

TRIBUTES—It is a fairly good picture entertainment. * * * But the story, the fair acting, the good photography and lighting, and the money lavished on this film cause one to think that it might be worse.

TRIBUTE—The spirit of the picture is quite different from that of the play and we are not sure whether the fans out on the road are going to accept it all so lightly. Somebody seemed to realize at the end that the picture was not as serious a production as it should be, so he wrote in a couple of lull titles which met with our entire and whole-hearted approval. * * *

We liked Miss Hampton best as the faithful wife, and in her tender moments she did some very fine work.

"The Purple Highway"—F. P.-L.—Rialto

AMERICAN—"The Purple Highway" is clever and entertaining and enjoyable. The idea is different from the usual type of screen material, it is very well acted, and sustains a sympathetic interest throughout.

EVENING WORLD—With Madge Kennedy, Monte Blue and a host of other good screen players in the cast, "The Purple Highway" makes for good entertainment.

MAIL—The characters are there, but the story strays far from the path of the original drama. In fact, it wanders off a long distance and finally ends with a commonplace movie fadeout. * * *

Madge Kennedy, who plays the part of April Blair, makes up for some of the tedium. Her beauty, enhanced as it is by her excellent acting, is the one refreshing thing in the entire picture.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—* * * it has an idea, which, if carried out along conventional and somewhat commonplace lines, is at least a pleasant change from the usual lodge-podge of battle, murder and sudden death. * * * Miss Kennedy has never done anything more delightful on the screen than her portrayal of April Blaire.

SUN—* * * fans will probably find a lot of entertainment during the week's run of the film in deciding just how Miss Kennedy compares in the type of interpretation with Mary Pickford and her other rivals.

TIMES—Hery Kolker, * * * has saturated his work with fantastic motion picture ideas and eliminated everything that appealed in the stage play.

"The Brass Bottle"—1st Nat'l—Strand

EVENING WORLD—It's one of those plays that are chock full of just the sort of mystery that most of us like so well. * * * Anyway, Tourneur can always be relied on to give us fine technical direction, superb photography and an interesting story. * * * For one, dare not demand more, for we know we wouldn't get it.

EVENING JOURNAL—Enjoyment is in store for those viewing this strange film.

The picture is a Maurice Tourneur production and is at times really whimsical, while at other moments it seems staggering in its lavish sets.

HERALD—Maurice Tourneur, * * * is a man of great imagination, and there was every reason to believe that he would do right by Anstey's weird idea.

But he hasn't. He has mangled "The Brass Bottle" into an incoherent mess, adding touches of slapstick comedy. * * *

Mr. Tourneur has contrived a few striking effects, most of which are centered in the person of Ernest Torrence. * * *

MAIL—Watching this picture we lost track of the intense heat of yesterday afternoon and reveled in the fanciful and humorous turns each scene took. "The Brass Bottle" is truly the movies at its best.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—The photographic tricks * * * are effective. It is pretty fair entertainment, if you like the whimsical and fantastic, and it is competently played. * * *

SUN—* * * an amusing farce * * * The idea has been borrowed from the Arabian Nights and with the aid of trick photography and movie magic develops into a most entertaining rigmarole of nonsense.

TIMES—"The Brass Bottle" * * * is a merry photoplay, with a fairy tale not unlike "Aladdin's Lamp." Maurice Tourneur has obviously enjoyed the production, and it is also evident that Tully Marshall, Harry Myers and Ernest Torrence, a very competent trio, have found the director's mood contagious. It is a film which one can anticipate seeing with a great deal of pleasure.

TRIBUNE—* * * an annoying, silly and dull picture. * * * Where it should be whimsical it is slapstick and, in spirit at least, it bears not the slightest resemblance to the original.

WORLD—Here is one of the most interesting, certainly one of the most deftly made, motion pictures of the year. It is not going too far to say that Mr. Tourneur, with the sea storm scene in "The Isle of Lost Ships" and "The Brass Bottle" to his credit, may now sit back and dare any picture director in the business to come forward with more imaginative camera manipulation.

Golf Meet in Omaha

The winners of the tournament were as follows: Grand prize, a 15 inch loving cup donated by the Movie Age, the Omaha regional published by Ben Fletcher who sponsored the event to Joseph A. Bradley of the U. S. Theater Supply Co. for the low net. His gross was 82 and his handicap, 11, making a net of 71. The second prize, a pair of golf shoes was won by O. W. Larson, of the Princess theater, Odebolt, Ia. for a low gross of 80. --

The next ten prizes for exhibitors in the form of annual subscriptions to THE FILM DAILY and donated by that publication went to Bob Livingston, Lincoln, Neb.; Julius K. Johnson, Omaha; F. L. Honey, Ashland, Neb.; J. E. Kirk, Omaha; August Herman, Omaha; E. P. Smith, Chariton, Ia.; A. E. Childs, Villisca, Ia.; J. H. Ebersole, Avoca, Ia.; E. H. Helmets, Des Moines, Ia., and F. M. Honey, Tecumseh, Neb. There was a grand total of 20 prizes, every player receiving a prize of some sort. The duffer prize was captured by C. F. Semming, Educational manager who, after studying "Golf," one of his own releases in which Gene Sarazen shows some shots, managed to roll up 139.

Everyone was enthusiastic about the whole day. A much larger crowd will certainly turn out for the next event. Many expressed regret at their failure to enter this year. The entries covered Nebraska and Iowa and more than one comment was heard that the event had served to create more good will in this territory than any previous happening. Motion pictures were taken of the picnic crowds.

Get B'way Runs

Part of Warner's Fall Output Booked Into Rivoli and Strand—Former to Show Six

Charles Goetz, of Dependable Exchange, Inc., local distributors of the Warner output has closed an important deal covering part of the company's series for 1923-1924. A good portion of them will be shown at the Rivoli and Strand. The Rivoli will show six and possibly seven. The first will probably be "Little Johnny Jones" which is expected to go into the Strand the week of August 12. This deal is the first of its size to be closed since it became known that the limited output of Paramount for next year left about 25 open weeks at the Rialto and Rivoli. The deal, of course, gives the Warner output a good deal of prestige in that the major portion of the fall schedule will have assured first-run showings at the big roadway theaters.

Serial From Cooper Tales

The "Leatherstocking Tales" of J. Fenimore Cooper will be filmed by Loew in serial form.

Equitable Rentals

Harry Crandall of Washington Has Some Interesting Angles on the Aronson Suggestion

Harry Crandall of Washington has written an article to say in response to the Aronson idea on "Equitable Rentals": "I read the article with as much interest as I did Mr. Aronson's former article, and the more of these articles I read the more I wonder what is all about. I don't really believe that there is much room for complaint generally as we are led to believe by the many articles written by the many people trying to solve the problem that to me is not quite as big as everyone thinks it is. "We holler about the star, etc., but the star will be here receiving a big salary when we are all gone. As long as they make money for the theater owners, they want them, and if no producer don't get them for them, another will, and that is the answer.

Joint Meeting Today

T. O. C. C. and F. I. L. M. Club to Discuss Arbitration Problem Before Hays and Saul Rogers

Differences existing between the T. O. C. C. and the F. I. L. M. Club over the operation of the arbitration system under the uniform contract will be aired today at a meeting to be held at the Hays office. Mr. Hays and Saul Rogers of Fox will be present.

The T. O. C. C. stand refers to the alleged "superior attitude" of certain of the members of the F. I. L. M. Club committee. It is the contention of the exhibitor body that some of the decisions are disposed of in a manner that more properly suits the disposition of the exchange than the merits of the case. The T. O. C. C. definitely wants a cut-and-dried method of procedure outlined and moreover, wants that policy—no matter what it may be—followed to the letter.

Today's meeting may see the trouble finally disposed of.

"I was privileged only to spend a limited time in this country, and my experience did not extend beyond New York City, where, of course, I endeavored to see as many theaters as possible.

House Peters Says Agreement With Charles Baumann Is Off—Latter Denies It

Peters claims the agreement was automatically cancelled when Baumann failed to deposit a certain amount of money in a Los Angeles bank by a specified date. Philip Cohen, Peters' attorney states he gave Baumann notice of default on May 29. He also claims that Baumann neglected to observe other portions of the contract.

Charles Baumann denied all of the above claims yesterday. He stated that he had deposited $75,000 in a Los Angeles bank as agreed upon and that, under the terms of his contract with Peters, the latter was to appear

One Week Stands for Pictures and Vaudeville in South—Thus Expect to Build Better Shows

Loew officials are still discussing policy changes for the circuit. No decision has as yet been reached, except so far as the South is concerned.

Abandon Bureau

Loew Interests in Giving Up Plan to Supply Theaters With Artists Find the Picture's the Thing

Effective this week, Loew's Star Attractions Bureau, which was formed in April to supply high-class picture theaters with artists of known repute to bolster up programs, will cease to function. Loew officials have found that the picture is the thing and that when the picture fails to draw, high-calibred musical numbers won't make up for the deficiency.

The change in policy has been brought about as a result of close observation of the business done at the State, Los Angeles and the Warfield, San Francisco, for which theaters the Loew offices a few months ago booked Orville Harrold and Dorothy Jardon at large figures. It was found that the business done by the pictures on the same bill with these artists made very creditable showings when played in other houses without the presence of the

Impressed By Visit

"What impressed me most is the fact that all Americans seem to be patrons of moving picture theaters. If New York represents conditions as they exist in all other parts of the country, and I am told that conditions are all over the same, then I recognize as most impressive the much greater popularity which the moving picture theater enjoys on this side of the Atlantic. Here everybody as a matter of course visits a theater from time to time. The audiences of the various places I visited appear representative of all classes and all ages, even children being among them. This is different in Germany where a large part of the population has never visited a picture theater and where children and young people up to 18 years are not permitted to attend picture performances, unless they happen to be produced especially for younger people and released under a specific censorship.

"I understand that there are in excess of 14,000 picture theaters in this country of 105,000,000 inhabitants, where there are only 3700 serving the 60,000,000 inhabitants of Germany. These figures become glaring when one realizes that among the 3700 German theaters there are only two with a sitting capacity of about 2000 and about 12 of approximately 1500, whereas the majority have a sitting capacity ranging from 250 up to 1200 seats. Even in the suburbs of New York there are plenty of theaters with a capacity of from 1500 to 2000 seats and a great many of the New York houses have a capacity in excess of 2200, not to speak of the magnificent Capitol theater with accommodations for 5400 people. It may be of interest to you to know that my company, the Ufa, controls most of the large German theaters.

"When one considers that American theaters perform mostly from 1 P. M. until 11 P. M., and a few even from 11 A. M. to 11 P. M., while German theaters perform only from 4 P. M. to 10:30 P. M., it becomes evident to what larger extent the American theater has become the favored entertainment of the public. I think that certain outside factors contribute towards the popularity of the American theater. The absence of prohibition causes many Germans as yet to seek entertainment outside of the theater in cabarets, cafes and restaurants.

"In both countries good music has become a valuable element for the success of the moving pictures. However, we cannot claim to offer to our public such exquisite orchestral entertainment as you do in some of your Broadway theaters, not to speak of your otherwise elaborate programs, which frequently include first class vocal and dancing selections. Our failure in that respect may be partly explained by the fact that our public has an abundance of opportunities of hearing excellent music and singing in special performances and its requirements in that direction are satisfied outside of the moving picture theater.

"I have no doubt that a large part of the public in New York is attracted by the excellent music offered, particularly in the theaters which are under the leadership of men like Riesentfeld and Rothafel.

"What impressed me very strongly is the excellent care your theaters take of the public and the desire which you show to make them feel comfortable in every respect. It seems to me that every visitor is treated as a guest. Your attendants are polite and the entire personnel seems to be permeated by a spirit of hospitality. I consider this an element of which you may be rightly proud, but recognize also the fact that this spirit is largely made possible by the excellent discipline and behaviour of your public.

"I found your projection everywhere beyond praise. The machinery rooms which I had the privilege of visiting are from a technical standpoint of the first order. They may be, however, in some cases somewhat too small in relation to the size of the theater.

"Your advertising appeals to me. It is very attractive and more extensive than our own. Unfortunately, we are hampered in this respect by economical conditions and many Governmental restrictions.

"My short time in New York has given me the opportunity to see many things of interest and value for our own moving picture industry and I feel confident that the 150 German theaters under my charge will be benefited by the many courtesies and privileges which were extended to me. I wish to use this opportunity of thanking you and also the other members of our industry, whom I had the pleasure of meeting, for all the kindness shown to me. I am looking forward to the occasion of reciprocating the hospitality which has been generally bestowed upon me."

Abandon Bureau

well-known performers. This led to some calculation and final abandonment of the project.

Originally there were about 30 theaters in the line-up, 20 of them part of the Loew circuit and the remainder outside affiliations. Bookings were to be handled from New York, where Walter F. Keefe had been placed in charge. Keefe, it is understood, will work along similar lines, only as an independent operator specializing in prologues. Whatever vaudeville bookings are made for the Loew circuit will be made, in the future, through the regular booking offices.

Lloyd Hamilton Here from Coast

Lloyd Hamilton arrived from the coast yesterday accompanied by Lloyd Bacon and Hugh Fay, of his technical staff, and immediately began rehearsing with Jack Noble for his part in D. W. Griffith's black-face comedy, tentatively called "Black and White." Hamilton will play the part in which Al Jolson was to have starred. Jolson returned on Leviathan this week and it is understood that representative of Griffith will interview him with a view to securing re-imbusement for the money spent in preparing the picture. Despite Jolson's deflection, Griffith will give Jolson a chance to make settlement without subjecting the latter to embarrassment.

"Black and White" will be directed by Jack Noble, and actual shooting will start next Tuesday.

Equitable Rentals

"Now, as to the present article about inequitable film rentals, etc., would say that the producer is a good bit to blame for that, because it is admitted in Mr. Aronson's article that where there are competitive conditions the exchange immediately charges more than the film is worth, and by so doing they create the necessity for chain theaters or controlled bookings.

"Now to get down to the latter part of the article, starting in with No. 1, which suggests that each exchange center have a rating board consisting of exchangeman, together with accountants, which board will go over the exhibitors' books, etc. and decide the film rental he should pay. In answer to that, I say 'why?' Why should the exhibitor allow the producer to go over his books and decide what he should pay and how it should be proportioned, giving the exhibitor practically nothing to say? Is not the exhibitor just as important to the industry as is the producer? I would say that we would get cheaper film rentals by reversing that condition. Why not a board of exhibitors and accountants to go over the producers' books and see if their profit is not too large? That is the opposite angle.

"In No. 2, which suggests as an example that if a house is doing $10,000 a week, operating at $7,000, the production cost is $1250, the exhibitor should be allowed $7,000, the producer $1,250, then split 50-50 which would give both a profit of $875. That sounds sweet, but let's talk further for a minute. In that particular condition, what would happen? A producer would have his investment back and $875 profit in probably 5,000 points. Can you show me any theater that was ever built that had its investment all back, in say six months? No, some of them don't get it back for fifty years. Yet this plan would suggest that producers get all of their investment back even if no profit in a very short space of time. The one thing Mr. Aronson has overlooked in this is that the exhibitor only has one point at which to make money, where the producer has possibly 14,000 points, meaning by that that there are some 14,000 theaters that he has a chance to get in. He may, however, only get three or four thousand of them, but any one exhibitor can only get it at one point. So that if the picture mentioned should go bad with one exhibitor, the exhibitor would be out of luck, but the producer would still have his other points to make up for the loss. This whole paragraph is inequitable.

"Number 3 is answered in No. 2.

"No. 4: Here we get into the discussion of the controlled circuits again and it may be that some circuits do take advantage of the situation. However, not any more so, if as much, as the producer takes advantage of a highly competitive situation. From that particular angle, I would say that the producer has the best of it because there are certainly more competitive zones than there are non-competitive, and after all, if the producer does make a picture and it does not measure up in box office receipts, who should suffer but the producer! As a comparison, I might ask that if an exhibitor picked a poor location or built a poor house or did not properly ventilate it so that the public did not come in, how much would the producer kick in to help him pay back his losses?

"Now, in closing, let me say that from the producer's angle there is only one trouble and that is, over production. That is the only part about the producing business as we see it that the exhibitor need not concern himself about. He is rather in favor of over production because with the tremendous over production he still has trouble getting 52 weeks of good production."

Film Men to Discuss Arbitration—Seattle, Portland and Spokane to be Present

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Seattle — The Northwest Film Board of Trade has called a meeting for Saturday, which is to include branch managers and assistant managers, salesmen and bookers, from Seattle, Portland and Spokane. There will be a noonday luncheon and meeting for the managers, to be followed by a dinner.

The meeting is an effort to secure co-operation between the three centers and to acquaint exchange personals as well as managers with the functioning of the board. Arbitration committees to handle grievances under the rulings of the new uniform contracts will be appointed. Particular stress is to be given the point that competitive salesmen are to sell the idea that rival contracts must be lived up to and completed, as well as those the salesman has to offer. The salesmen are to respect rival contracts. The Committee on arrangements: Guy Navarre, Fox, chairman; G. P. Endert, Paramount; Carl Stearn, Metro; Paul Aust, Select; H. A. Black, Vitagraph; P. A. Black in the Cohen Organization as an Indiana Committeeman—Arbitration Plan Condemned

The M. P. T. O. headquarters yesterday issued a statement covering the recent annual convention of the Indiana M. P. T. O. in Indianapolis. The paragraph of the statement read follows:

"On the invitation of Gus G. Schmidt of Indianapolis, newly elected chairman of the board of directors of the state organization, and a national director of the M. P. T. O., Frank Rembusch, owner of theaters in Indianapolis and other cities in Indiana, was welcomed into the organization. Rembusch pledged his support to the organization and was made a member of the Indiana executive committee."

From the foregoing it becomes apparent that Rembusch has reversed good many of his opinions regarding the Cohen organization. He was openly antagonistic for a long time at apparently the differences have been buried.

Sees a Joker

W. A. Steffes Attacks Cohen Questionnaire as Attempt to Secure New Members for M. P. T. O.

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Minneapolis—The questionnaire sent out by the M. P. T. O. came in for an attack in a statement sent to all members of the Minnesota exhibitor organization by W. A. Steffes in which he urges non-members of the Cohen organization not to sign the questionnaire.

Steffes sees a joker in it and questions the purpose for which it is being distributed. He says in his opinion, "the questionnaire is but a camouflaged attempt to swell the national organization's membership on paper."

Steffes has just returned from the first leg of a state-wide trip to strengthen the Minnesota unit. He reports that many exhibitors have been sent membership cards for the Cohen outfit with a notation that they are in good standing until next year, despite the fact of the withdrawal of the state unit and non-payment of dues.

Sydney S. Cohen was not in his office yesterday. In his absence, no one cared to comment on the Steffes letter.

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Los Angeles—Charles Chaplin, in one of his infrequent statements states his future production plans will be largely guided by the reception "A Woman of Paris" gets from the public. Chaplin states he has purposely gotten away from the lavish, spectacular productions such as "Robin Hood" because he feels the simple, human story will have a greater appeal. "A Woman of Paris" is said to be that kind of a picture.

"Going Right Ahead"

Arthur Friend Denies Distinctive Will Stop Production—Internat'l at Studio for Time

"We are going right ahead with our production schedule as announced, all reports to the contrary notwithstanding," said Arthur S. Friend yesterday in commenting on persistent reports along Broadway that Distinctive had stopped production with the turning over of the Biograph studio to International.

Friend explained that two pictures, "Second Youth" and "The Green Goddess" had been completed and that, between now and September 15, the company would undertake no new productions. During that period, International has been granted the use of the plant which Distinctive holds under a year's contract. "Cain and Mabel" and "Yolanda" will be filmed, in part, at the Bronx plant.

"The Green Goddess" which stars George Arliss goes into the Harris theater on the 12th.

New Detroit Producing Concern

Jimmie Hodges, a heavy stockholder in the Detroit Corp. which recently completed a studio at Detroit, arrived here yesterday to obtain a story and cast for the first of a series of comedy-dramas featuring Hodges.

This unit will be distinct from the Hodges unit. Hodges states that it is planned to have two companies constantly working on features. Frank Talbot is president of the studio, and Hodges is treasurer.

Pyramid Will Help

Smallwood then goes on to say that the company has completed six productions representing a production cost of about $750,000, five of which have been released through American Releasing and the sixth to go through Selznick. The statement says in part:

"The failure of the American Releasing Corp. to secure returns on our pictures in keeping with their commercial value was a principal factor in causing our company to offer to retire syndicate shares on individual productions for bonds, offering a participating in all profits to be made on the company's future activities, as well as sharing in the returns on pictures already made. This action was taken for the protection of Pyramid investors. Over 50% of the company's syndicate shares were converted into bonds prior to the issuance of the injunction. This Pyramid bond is in reality a profit sharing certificate offering the holder an equal share of all earnings with the company's shareholders and guaranteeing 8% interest. The security was made in the form of a bond in order that the holders might be secured by a first mortgage on all present and future assets of the Company.

"Pyramid Pictures, Inc., has a number of new productions in preparation and expects to continue indefinitely to make pictures. The fact that our company loaned the American Releasing a sum of money in excess of $100,000 and that company owes us an additional sum nearly equal in amount for film rentals has not shaken Pyramid's solvency. Our company brand has been favorably received by exhibitors throughout the country and we will endeavor to continue making pictures that will warrant their continued confidence.

Pyramid capital stock has been very closely held since the organization of the company. Less than 8,000 shares out of a total authorized issue of 200,000 shares are held by the general public. Since the resignation of Walter E. Greene as president of Pyramid in May and the return of his stockholdings to the treasury of the company, about 90% of the company outstanding capitalization is owned by Smallwood & Co. These shares are not and will not be offered for sale."

EASY TO READ

THE world would know little of Shakespeare were it not for the perfection of printing. Few will strain their eyes to read. If the type is not clear, if the printed page does not present a pleasing appearance, the text means little or nothing. Wise publishers of books, magazines and newspapers realize that their output must be easy to read if it is to be read at all.

It is the same in motion pictures, except in that stories are published on the screen in photography instead of type. But it is just as essential for that photography to be pleasing and restful to the eye. It must be in harmony with the theme of the picture. The photographic effects must not clash if the public is to get the full value of what has been wrought on the screen.

The realization of this brings the work of the West's foremost producers to STANDARD FILM LABORATORIES. They not only want everything that has been put into a picture to show on the screen, but they want such excellence in negative and prints that audiences forget they are seeing just a motion picture of the drama. These producers accomplish this through STANDARD SERVICE and STANDARD PRINTS. The name, STANDARD PRINTS, guarantees exhibitors and public proper presentation of the cinema program.

Not In Control

ger Official Denies His Company Exercises Monopoly in New Orleans

Special to THE FILM DAILY)

New Orleans—C. M. Clark, secretary of the Saenger Amusement Co., declared yesterday that his organization was not in control of theaters in New Orleans, when the Federal Trade Commission re-opened its investigation against Famous Players and its allied companies.

Clark declared that the Sobel, Harms, Shears Corp. and the Wash Laundry Co., operators of some of the suburban theaters in New Orleans were independent of the Famous Players and that the latter company did not own any of the stock of either of these corporations. Clark stood on the stand for four hours. All the theaters owned, controlled or operated by the Saenger company were listed. There are about 100 all told.

er Understanding to Result from Joint Discussion of F. I. L. M. Club and T. O. C. C.

Although all parties concerned are agreed to silence, it is understood both the committee of F. I. L. M. Club members and that of the T. O. C. C. feel a clearer understanding will result from the joint discussion held on Thursday in the club's office.

It was denied in one quarter yesterday that the relations between the two bodies over the operations of the exhibition system in Greater New Orleans had ever become strained. It was admitted that differences had arisen but the point was made that the variances in opinion were no greater than those that come up in other lines of business.

It is expected that, in the future, the status of both exhibitors and ex-

Percentage

It's in the air. Not the way it's going now. But on a real honest basis. Where percentage doesn't mean a guarantee. That covers rental. Before it works. And so what Kent, of Famous, has to say. On this subject. To appear in Monday's issue. Will be worth reading.

Relative to which. Kent, in forwarding his ideas, says: "When you talk on percentage you're talking on a subject that is going to be nearer everybody's heart in the next year than it is now—and even now it's in the air. Why? 'Cause a lot of shoes are pinching. And tight shoes make you think of a way out. And when this industry is hurt bad enough it will find a remedy. Something like 75 per cent of all that's wrong will be cured by percentage.

"And," he goes on, "who makes the best pictures? Answer—percentage—the public will tell the story. Does the public want a certain type of pictures? Your percentage will tell you—flat rental never. Who are the real stars and directors? Look up your percentage statements. Flat rental will never tell you.

"How much can a producer afford to pay a star or director without taking blood money from the exhibitor? Percentage will show him. Had I time I could write pages to show both sides just where each and every big evil we have could be cured, or the proper light cast on it by percentage playing of pictures."

Now that's straight from the shoulder stuff. As Carl Laemmle would put it. And it's real. You may not believe in percentage. A lot of people don't. But you'll have to read what SR has to say. Because among the people who know what's

At Work on "Ben Hur"

Italian Unione May Co-operate With Goldwyn On It—Start Shooting In September

Shooting of the some of the scenes for Goldwyn's production of "Ben Hur" will probably be started in September. While F. J. Godsol, who returned from an extended stay in Europe a few days ago was on the Continent primarily for a vacation, he made arrangements while there for the use of lights and other equipment.

Godsol, when asked whether any arrangement with the Unione Cinematografica Italiene—the Italian trust—had been made for the production of "Ben Hur," he replied he hadn't made a deal with anyone. It is quite likely, however, that important sequences of the picture which will be made abroad will be produced in conjunction with the important Italian company.

Motion Picture News

"Broadway Gold"
Edward Dillon Production—Truart—
Seven Reels
(Produced by Frank Shelton)

THIS is a distinctly high class production. There is not a discordant note in its entire length. It is a picture of which everyone concerned in its making should be proud. Edward Dillon and J. Gordon Cooper have turned out a feature filled with the ingredients of which box office records are made. An excellent cast, strikingly gowned women, an absorbing plot, beautiful sets, especially the interiors, and some very fine lighting and photographic work. What more could any picture have.

Elaine Hammerstein is the star, and she has never acted more natural than in the interpretation of the role of Sunny Duane, a product of the rural places, who comes to Gotham, joins the chorus, gets mixed up in the night life of the folks who can't stand the sunlight, is involved in an early morning tragedy and other stirring adventures, but eventually finds love and peace with the man whom she married as a favor, expecting him to die soon after the ceremony. Kathryn Williams, as a Broadway actress and confidant of Sunny, and Elliott Dexter, in the leading male role, render fine assistance.

"Broadway Gold" has been given an elaborate production. Some of the interiors, especially those showing the Black Swan Club, the Durant home on Long Island and the apartments of Wayne, are the last word in luxury. There is a full quota of thrills; in fact, one night Sunny gets mixed up in a murder, an auto wreck, a brilliant party in the club, and as a climax marries a man.

This feature should be an excellent one to offset the summer slump or to open your fall season.

BROADWAY

Exploitation Angles—The title. The star. The gowns and hats worn by Miss Hammerstein should offer a fine opportunity for a classy tie-up with your best fashion store. Use the photos in the window displays. Play up the big cast. Tell them about the lavish scenes on Broadway.

Drawing Power—Just the thing for modern picturegoers. Should be a box office winner anywhere.

REELAND REVIEWS

ELAINE HAMMERSTEIN

"BROADWAY GOLD"
TRUART FILMS—INDEPENDENT ENTERTAINMENT PRODUCTION
EXPLOITATION... Splendid opportunities afforded by title and theme.
DIRECTION... Keeps story moving at good speed, holding the necessary suspense STORY... An unusual love theme with the bright lights as a background STAR... Has certain wholesome charm
PHOTOGRAPHY... Very good
TIME... About one hour and 10 minutes

Elaine Hammerstein's first independent picture promises another good bet for the independent exchanges. "Broadway Gold" is one of the type of better grade pictures which shows the unmistakable mark of the intelligent expenditure of sufficient money to get the kind of atmosphere the safe in showing to whatever kind of audience you may feel to because there is a certain high grade distinction in the quality of the story, players and settings.

It is the calibre of picture that you may feel taken advantage of by the director to the largest extent in the filming of "Broadway Gold". About her the director has also built up a cast of real worth. Elliot Dexter, playing opposite the star, has an unusually difficult part to put across, but he does it splendidly. Kathryn Williams, next to Miss Hammerstein, does the best work in the film, she having a particularly fortunate role as the chorus girl, wise in the ways of Broadway. Others who aid in the portrayal of the story are Richard Wayne, Eloise Goodale, Harold Goodwin and Harry Northrup.

Briefly the story deals with a young chorus girl who at her first midnight party meets a man who becomes interested in her. Through a strange series of circumstances she finds herself innocently in the apartment of a man when he is shot by an unknown assailant.

"Lawful Larceny"

Paramount

As a Whole.....ATTRACTIVELY PRESENTED, ALWAYS GOOD TO LOOK AT AND WITH A FIRST RATE CAST; HAS CONSIDERABLE PICTORIAL APPEAL

Players.....Hope Hampton, Conrad Nagle, Nita Naldi and Lew Cody have principal roles; Nita Naldi seems to be running Gloria Swanson a close second in race for honors in bizarre costuming; she gives interesting performances in this and photographs exceptionally well; her make-up very fine; Hope Hampton handles faithful wife role very well with Conrad Nagle good as her weak husband; Cody less a villain than usual.

Type of Story... Not especially strong in situations but it takes interesting turns and the plot works out to satisfying conclusion; cleverness of young wife saves her husband from ruin when she manages to retrieve note that would send him to prison as thief.

The development is good and a lavish display in the way of settings, costumes, etc., sets story off to good advantage.

Box Office Angle.... Aside from pictorial value, story will undoubtedly prove satisfying; they'll probably feel great admiration for the brave efforts of the young wife to save her husband.

Exploitation.... Use the names of the principal players prominently. There is a good combination here that should prove attractive. Aside from Hope Hampton you have Nita Naldi, Conrad Nagel and Lew Cody, all names that should attract attention. You can also say that Gilda Gray, the famous "shimmy" artist, does her renowned dance in the picture—that is if the censors allow it to remain.

Play up the title with catchlines that can be printed in throw-aways. Say: "If an unscrupulous woman had been the cause of your husband's financial ruin, what would you do? Would you stick to him and see him through, or let him fight it out alone? See what the wife in 'Lawful Larceny' does."

Be sure to mention that the picture is an adaptation of Samuel Shipman's stage play and recall the theme for the benefit of those who may have seen it.

A teaser stunt would be to put up posters before the regular announcements reading: "When is larceny lawful?"

Direction by... Allan Dwan; has given it a first rate production and made it attractive through lavish presentation as well as careful handling of story.

Author ..... Samuel Shipman

"The Flying Dutchman"

Film Booking Offices

As a Whole.. FANTASTIC SORT OF STORY TOLD AGAINST COLORFUL BACKGROUNDS THAT GIVE IT GOOD PICTORIAL APPEAL; DREAM ENDING COVERS UP IMPROBABILITIES OF MYTHICAL BITS.

Players.... Lawson Butt, Lola Luxford, Ella Hall, Edward Coxen and Walter Law all good types and do satisfactory work.

Type of Story.... Based on Richard Wagner's opera; theme lends itself nicely to screen adaptation and with dream ending excusing twists that would otherwise be considered far-fetched. Romantic element will appeal to women.

Story deals with legend in which fisherman is doomed to wander about in his ship and only allowed to go ashore once in every seven years to look for a girl who will break the spell by marrying him and remaining faithful.

Box Office Angle.... You may have to consider the costume angle on this although you have American players and an American production. Not a "big" picture but will undoubtedly appeal to a fair majority and satisfy them.

Exploitation.... The title is a good one and pretty familiar, and where they don't happen to know it as the name of Wagner's opera, they are acquainted with it through its application to folks in a hurry, as a by-word.

For a stunt you might have a fellow dressed in Dutch costume hurrying about the streets without any indication of what he is about. This for a teaser, to be followed by the same fellow later displaying proper announcements of the showing.

Have your theater front decorated to represent a windmill and if you have women ushers, they might be attired in Dutch costumes and wearing wooden shoes.

Placard the town with posters containing the picture of a Dutchman sitting on a trunk and presumably flying through the clouds. Throw-aways of the same order would also excite curiosity.

A musical accompaniment with selections from the opera would be quite appropriate.

Direction by... Lloyd Carleton; has supplied attractive production with quaint atmosphere very attractively presented and with considerable good attention to detail. The cast has been well handled and story smoothly told.

Author.... Based on the opera by Richard Wagner.
 Scenario..... Lloyd Carleton
 Cameraman..... Andre Barlatier
 Photography.... All right; double exposures numerous and good.
 Locale..... Holland.
 Length..... 5,800 feet.

"The Eleventh Hour"

Fox

As a Whole..... ACTION AND THRILLS GALORE IN MELODRAMA OF OLD SCHOOL VARIETY; IF IT'S EXCITEMENT THEY CRAVE LET THEM HAVE THIS ONE.

Players.... Shirley Mason competes with Pearl White for dare-devil honors in role that keeps her on the jump from start to finish; Charles Jones the mighty hero who goes through fire and water to save her; a scheming crew with Richard Tucker, Alan Hale, Walter McGrail, Fred Kohler and others pulling off tricks at the rate of one every few feet to keep the audience on edge.

Type of Story.... Wild, wild meller with the foreword acknowledging that it is intended purely for "entertainment purposes." It will fill the bill for just that where they still favor the blood and thunder stories such as those written by Lincoln J. Carter. Picture has a flock of genuinely fine thrills and some mighty fine shots in spite of its far-fetched situations.

One round after another of fights to obtain an explosive formula with hero taking and giving a battle to the finish and heroine helping him at every turn.

Box Office Angle.... Undoubtedly a big box office bet for many exhibitors. It has everything in the way of a thrill that was ever heard of. And all done in a big way. Acrobates and submarines play a big part.

Exploitation..... If you cater to a meller loving crowd it should be well worth your effort to go after big business with "The Eleventh Hour," another of the new Fox schedule of releases.

Exploitation can be effectively handled through a variety of stunts. First of all placard the town with clock faces, the hands pointing to eleven. Work this as a teaser prior to the showing. When you have them sufficiently excited, do the same thing but add the title of the picture.

Have a truck going about with a huge clock rigged up on it. The hands can be worked from the inside and revolving, to strike eleven as the hands reach that hour. A trailer will give an idea of the thrills they can expect.

Direction by... Bernard J. Durning hasn't missed a trick in registering the thrills and realism to the extent of being gruesome wasn't too much trouble for him; has made a real meller all right.

Author..... Lincoln J. Carter
 Scenario..... Louis Sherwin
 Cameraman..... Don Short
 Photography..... Excellent; several mighty fine shots and unusually good camera work Locale..... Factories, submarines, aeroplanes, etc.; covers a lot of territory.
 Length..... About 7,000 feet

"Trilby"

Richard Walton Tully Prod.

Distributor: Asso. First Nat'l Pic. As a Whole.... DELIGHTFUL ROMANCE. SHOULD PROVE A REAL BOX OFFICE ATTRACTION. ANDREE LAFAYETTE A REAL FIND AND SURE TO PROVOKE TREMENDOUS ATTENTION.

Players.... Andre Lafayette, a French girl, makes her first appearance here. She is a real bet if her work here indicates what she can do. She is different looking, distinctively has a roguish wink and a charming smile and physical appeal. She registers both comedy and serious bits splendidly. Creighton Hale does very well as Little Bill although he seems too serious times for the part. Arthur Edmund Carewe has the difficult role of Svengali and gets it over in great shape. He will be talked about a lot when this gets going. Mildred Lucas is the Laird and Phyllis McCullough Taffy.

Type of Story.... One of the sure hits of a generation ago. Made previously with Clara Kimb Young and did a sensational business. How DuMaurier's story will go with present day theater goes the only question.

Box Office Angle.... You have much to help with here. Walton Tully has never made as good a picture. It is far better than any of his previous efforts. The new girl Andree Lafayette, will probably prove a sensation. She can trouble and looks good. They don't show her posed in the nude, but still show her legs and feet and shoulders. Get your gang interested.

Exploitation..... You'll have to be behind this one because you must not take a chance that your crowd will recall the famous old story. Get after it hard. Have your book stores working; get your newspapers interested in stories of old stars who appeared in the stage play and screen version. Get up a "comparative" story showing the times and conditions have changed since this fine play was written. Contrast pictures of today with those of the period when this was previously released.

Plaster casts of a famous actress were made years ago showing her as Trilby in the great concert scene and if you can land these they will help if distributed in show windows.

Direction by.... James Young; has done very well with this, although nearly all of his people show a tendency to overact at times. Some bits well done, and many good touches.

Detail.... The beards used are all so funny.
 Author ..... George DuMaurier
 Scenario by... Richard Walton Tully
 Cameraman ..... George Blaisdell
 Photography.... Very good; Parisian shots notably worth while.
 Locale.. Paris, studio life and outdoors
 Length ..... 7,321 feet

The Importance of Public Comfort In The Theatre

Planning a theatre with only the box-office in mind, is bound to rob the structure of much beauty and spaciousness which are indispensable to public comfort and enjoyment.

Wide spaces between seats, artistic curves, roomy aisles, spacious lobbies, promenades and foyers in Balaban & Katz theatres necessarily mean the sacrifice of many seats. They were built for comfort, and the importance of comfort has not been underestimated.

The big thought was to make these theatres permanently alluring for years to come. They are designed to be so charming, roomy and comfortable that the public will never tire of entering them. And only in this way can the large investment be justified.

The greatest drawback in the theatres of this country is that every available foot of space is utilized for "pay-seats." The audience, uncomfortably seated, loses much of the joy and comfort of the entertainment.

Hence, the sacrifice of hundreds of seats in our theatres in the interests of comfort, is no sacrifice at all, but a definite business asset.

Institutional Advertising of Balaban and Katz, Chicago

THE third in the series of institutional ads used by Balaban and Katz in Chicago, where they run the Chicago, Roosevelt, Tivoli, Riviera and Central Park theaters. Giving the public an inside angle on the whys and wherefores of the things which, in the first-class theater, they have come to expect as part of the house.

The discerning showman well knows how important it is to provide the utmost in comfort for his patrons. Here are several twists it might be advisable to talk about in similar advertising or in house organs.

Both displays in their original form were 6 inches by 19 inches in size.

Story No. 7

Planning for Public Comfort

In the old days of the moving-picture theatre, there was no such thing as a lobby. The patrons of the house stood in line on the sidewalk—playthings of the wind, rain, sun and snow.

In fact, outside of BALABAN & KATZ Theatres, the lobby of a play-house is regarded as an incident, even today. We have so designed our lobbies that the instant you step into one, you are in the theatre, because the beauty, the luxury, the architecture and color scheme have been carried clear to the sidewalk line. We have even gone so far as to provide a separate heating and cooling system for the lobby so that it is even cooler than the rest of the theatre.

Though we have spent upwards of a million dollars on lobbies, we know that we have not spent a dollar too much for this purpose. We considered it highly essential in order to make the lobby high for good ventilation, warm in Winter, cool in Summer, with cosy waiting rooms, luxurious seats and roomy promenades.

We built these theatres to last for years to come—to still be modern a decade or more from now—to stand for your children, your children's children and their children's children.

These theatres, we have repeatedly been told, are far ahead of the times. Go where you will, there are no theatres like them. They give to moving-pictures the gorgeous and appropriate settings they so richly deserve. Chicago, which formerly occupied an indifferent and laggard position, now leads the world in the magnificence of its theatres.

"The Steel Trail"—Universal Pleasing to Duncan's Following

Type of production...15 chapter serial

Universal's latest serial stars William Duncan who is supported by Edith Johnson and a cast that includes Ralph McCullough, Harry Carter, Harry Woods, Mabel Randall, Cathleen Calhoun and others. Duncan is also responsible for the direction. The story, as the title indicates, deals with the efforts of a group of ranchers to construct a railway through a Western valley. They are held up in every possible way by the president of a rival railroad company and his employees. The plot is not unusual, but the star is well-known and where he has a following they should be anxious to see him in this. He is cast as a construction engineer engaged to take over and complete the building of the railway within a limited time, and his efforts to do this in the face of innumerable obstacles comprise the action of the film. Edith Johnson does satisfactory work as the pretty daughter of the chief rancher.

An outstanding feature of the three episodes reviewed are the exceedingly good backgrounds. The scenic beauty of some of the shots is especially worthy of mention. Each episode ends with a thrill, the first showing the girl going over a high cliff in a car and plunging into a lake below. The second episode shows a desperate attempt to derail a car loaded with dynamite, which is headed for a passenger train, while the third episode shows the girl who is trapped in a forest fire being rescued in an aeroplane. The story and scenario are by Paul M. Bryan and George Plympton and George Robinson is responsible for the good photography.

"The Green Cat"—Snub Pollard— Pathe

Average Pollard Offering

Type of production...2 reel comedy

Snub Pollard, Marie Mosquini, Noah Young and William Gillespie, do their best to make this entertaining. Pollard has opened a brand-new roadhouse but no one patronizes him. The help wastes food, and Pollard is almost in tears. He will thoroughly succeed in making the audience sorry for him, particularly if they are tender-hearted. Even his brilliant idea of having a blind pig outside the door fails, because while it does bring thirsty autoists in search of a drink, it also brings prohibition officers who wreck the place in search of the hooch which turns out to be nothing but vinegar. The finish is good, showing Snub making the insurance agent sign a fire policy while the place is burning down. He has a hard time keeping the agent in ignorance of the fact that the place is in flames all about him, but finally gets his policy only to have it burn in his hand, while he isn't looking.

"The Cat and the Fiddle"—

Lyman H. Howe—Educational A Novel Note

Type of production...1 reel magazine

Lyman H. Howe's latest Hodge-Podge reel follows closely in the footsteps of preceding numbers of the series which can always be relied upon to furnish a novel note for almost any program. The subject matter is varied, but the reel takes its main title from the first bit which shows two children reading a picture-book. As the pages are turned, the rhymes and pictures come to life in very amusing fashion. There are also some very nicely tinted scenic shots which range from Hawaii's surf riders to the Bridal Veil Falls, and another cartoon number under the title of "A Day at the Circus."

"Post No Bills"—Paul Parrott— Pathe

One of His Best

Type of production...1 reel comedy

This is one of the best Parrott comedies seen in many a long day. The laughs are genuinely funny, the action swift moving and the fun really merry. It should prove a mirth-getter on any program. Parrott is employed as a bill-poster and sniper for a moving picture theater, and the novel methods and places he employs in sticking his ads will give new ideas to any exhibitor. Marie Mosquini is the pretty ticket seller and the little cross-eyed fellow who plays with Parrott is really funny as an excited bridegroom who has forgotten his marriage license.

"Plus and Minus"—Hammons—

Educational

Moderately Pleasing Comedy

Type of production...1 reel comedy

A soda fountain clerk who slips on banana peels and turns on the wrong faucets thereby wetting his customers and himself is the basis for much hit-and-miss comedy in this Cameo comedy in which Cliff Bowes and Virginia Vance are the leading players. There is also an irate landlady whose name is not mentioned but who gets her bits over in satisfactory manner. Bowes is a border who cannot pay his room rent. He writes a postal card to himself saying that his uncle has died and left him some money. Thereupon the landlady regrets her harshness and loans him some cash. This is a one reeler that should give moderate satisfaction. Fred Hibbard is responsible for the direction and Francis Corby for the photography.

HODKINSON'S
Down to the Sea in Ships

wherein the exhibitor did not wax very enthusiastic and complained of the attendance. I want to contradict this review, as anyone with an ounce and a half of showmanship knows at a glance this picture stands alone today as the greatest money getter ever offered an exhibitor. The price of the rental knocked the wind out of my sails, but I was just as sure it would be a knockout as I was that I would take a nice loss on that night's program picture. I billed it like a circus, nearly twelve hundred school children attended in a body, accompanied by their teachers, the local business men and school superintendent gave testimonials, which were copied in the newspapers and distributed in every home in town and on the rural routes.

I charged fifty cents admission and packed them at every show. People saw this picture who never saw the inside of a movie before. And why shouldn't they? They can see actors any time, but where else can they see a real live ten ton whale harpooned before their eyes? Talk about thrills—even our blase operator was so excited he forgot to shift reels.

Any man that don't turn them away with Down to the Sea in Ships had better make room for someone who knows how to turn the trick. We have played practically all the big specials of any consequence and Down to the Sea in Ships grossed double the amount of any of them. Now what do you know about that?"—J. B. Laughlin, Bart's Mecca theatre, Midland, Mich.

Mr. Laughlin is right! "Down to the Sea in Ships" in New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Pittsburg, Baltimore, Toledo, Cleveland, San Francisco and other big cities proved it was one of the best money makers of the year

COAST CONVERSATIONS

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Los Angeles—The Monroe Doctrine Centennial and M. P. Exposition is running along despite many obstacles and hardships. For brevity, the gang have changed the name to the M. P. Exposition, and for the first ten days the public were wondering where the motion picture end came in. Practically all of the companies out here have reserved space for exhibits, but the exhibits generally consisted of pretty pictures of stars that hung around the walls of the individual bungalows.

Some of the organizations have spent a pile of money on the exhibits and tried whole-heartedly to put on something really worthwhile for public interest—but there was something lacking—the spirit was not there—and the public generally were disappointed in what was given for a fifty cent gate charge.

Local commercial interests had also taken space for exhibits and they lost no time in holding a meeting with the officials of the Exposition, in which they expressed in no uncertain terms their disappointment in the way things were put on generally. A few days after this the Wampas held a meeting on the grounds in which everything was gone over very thoroughly. The boys decided that the Exposition needed a lot of hokum which they immediately prepared to supply. Various concessions have been opened along the grounds to wake up the crowds, and every night is allotted to a separate studio for stars, directors and players.

Since these innovations were incorporated things have been running along much smoother, and with greater results so far as the attendance and the satisfaction of the public are concerned. Perhaps the Exposition will wind up as a successful venture, but there is one thing certain that it will be a tough job for someone at a later date to promote the gang out here in staging an exposition of the picture industry.

George Melford and the "The Light That Failed," company have returned from a week's location trip to Catalina.

"Woman-Proof," the new Thomas Meighan vehicle is being directed by Alfred E. Green. George Ade is now in Hollywood conferring with Green on the scenario.

Eric von Stroheim, has almost finished the San Francisco scenes of "Greed," and will soon take his company to the Big Dipper Mine, near Colfax.

The first of Jimmy Aubrey's new two reel comedies which he is making under his own management, titled Surely Will Rogers has arrived at the Hal Roach Studios. The writer has not seen him at work on the lot but nevertheless any person walking down the lot realizes immediately that Rogers must be close by.

It seems that all the employees of the Roach lot are taking every opportunity to practice trick rope throwing and knot tying, a la Will Rogers. Even the kids in the "Our Gang" comedies have their special pieces of rope to practice with. Warren Doane manager at the studio, was mystified when he received so many requisitions for rope during the first week that Rogers hung his hat at the studio.

Universal City has been the cause for much comment along Hollywood Boulevard in view of the curtailment of production during the past three weeks. For six months Universal City was using more people than any other studio in Hollywood: production activities were more than doubled to supply releasing requirements. Now practically all of the pictures have been completed for the moment with the present time being used for preparation. Hollywood gossips immediately believe that something radically wrong is happening at Universal City, but the big plant will be booming along at normal rate inside of the next two or three weeks.

They do say that Pola Negri is really working and getting along mavelously with her director, Herbert Brenon. It means that "The Spanish Dancer," should really show Pola Negri in her real light according to her work in European production. And it is rumored that "The Spanish Dancer," is pretty close to Mary Pickford's picture, "Rosita." If such is the case we will be able to obtain a comparison between the two in similar roles.

GREENE.

"The Buttinsky" has just been completed at Universal City.

Jacques Jaccard is busily engaged at Standard Film Laboratories supervising the editing of "The Power of Darkness," his first production at the new Golden West Studios.

Victor Schertzinger, loaned by Preferred to direct Jackie Coogan in "Long Live the King," is speeding up work in order to start work on "The Boomerang."

"Blow Your Own Horn" is now being cut and titled at F. B. O. while "Lights Out" and "Alimony" two other Fall releases are nearing completion.

Allan Dwan is putting the finishing touches on "Zaza" at the Paramount Long Island studio.

"No Mother to Guide Her," a Fox special, has been completed at the New York studio.

Edith Taliaferro has been signed for an important part in "The Love Light."

Jack Noble will start "Black and White," starring Lloyd Hamilton, at the Griffith studio next week.

May McAvoy has been signed to play opposite Glenn Hunter in "West of the Water Tower," his first Paramount picture.

Alyce Mills has been engaged to appear in a production, the working title of which is "Below the Mason and Dixon Line."

Harrison Ford has left for the coast to play the lead in "Maytime," for which he was signed through Mike Connelly.

going on in this great big industry of ours SR is recognized as big league. One of, if not the greatest sales manager in this business. And for that matter—in almost any other. I know a couple big concerns that weep every time they think. Of how they might have had SR handling their sales. And think it over. With regrets.

MICKEY AN ACTOR

Everyone knows Mickey Neilan as a director. But how many know that Mickey is also an actor. Yes; right on the screen. Doesn't make a practice of it. But then he's an obliging cuss. And so, when Eddy Dillon was directing Elaine Hammerstein. Out on the Goldwyn lot. Mickey was looking on one day. And Eddy—who is an old pal of Mickey's. Asked Mickey if he wanted to "act." "Sure," said Mickey, "don't you know I'm the greatest actor on the screen." "All right then," said Eddy, "go on and play a driver for us." And Mickey did. And the only trouble is that Truart can't advertise Mickey. As appearing in the cast of "Broadway Gold."

IN AND OUT

They have a sense of humor in Germany. Even if the mark flops every other minute. And so Kinemetograf, Berlin, used this cut, showing "Frederick the Great," departing from the Ufa Palace and "The Two Orphans" coming in. Please note the little Gish girls.

HIRAM'S LIFE

Yep; Abrams. Still in the making. But the data is coming along fine now. And when we get back. From vacationing. Yep; we're on it now. The chances are the biography will begin appearing. Don't miss it.

BURN REAL MONEY FOR ECONOMY

Over in Berlin a producer shot a scene. Showing friend wife. Carelessly burning up her miser husband's board. And it was found cheaper to burn actual 100 mark notes. Than to buy imitation money and use it.

MORE CENSORING

Not satisfied with all the legal censors that are on the horizon another has developed. Clarence D. Antrim, manager of a Philadelphia Lyceum Bureau. Which supplies films for the Ocean Grove (N. J.) Asso. Auditorium. And Antri takes "realism" out of the pictures he shows. No beach sirens, no girls smoking cigarettes. No hula dancers and no underworld crime stuff. Likes Tommy Meighan in "Back Home and Broke." Showed it without a cut. Says audience don't like the stuff he cut out. And he knows.

A MEETING

Some business men. Not of this business. Attending a board meeting of a company in which they were interested. Managing director talking. Telling of the cash the company had in negatives.

"That's all right," said one of these regular business men, "but we would rather see the cash in affirmatives."

This story is true. Name of company on request.

GETTING "ROXY'S" GOAT

When these out of the industry publications talk about picture houses they sometimes slip. One of them recently had an article telling of how the big California. In Los Angeles. Had lost money. Even tho "Roxy" had started it. Of course "Roxy" isn't talking. But those of us who know. Know that the California is making money. And did from when Roxy started it. It's enough to get "Roxy's" goat. Way out in Fieldston.

ENGLAND NEEDS A WILL HAYS

At least "Freddy" in The Film Renter (London) thinks so. Saying, apropos of the failure of the English film industry to revise the Entertainment Tax:

"The entertainment tax campaign failed, and failed miserably because it had not a single personality who could command the real respect of the Government."

Adding that he advocated "the appointment of a Will Hays in this country."

Sorry, Freddy, sorry you're in trouble. But you'll have to find a Hays of your own. We need our Willie over here.

IN THE MAIL BAG

Comes a postal from Joe McCloskey. From Venice. Saying "Come on over. Any man who can't make love here better than Valentino should be barred off."

Oh, Joe! But thanks for the compliment just the same.

OUR TEETHING INDUSTRY

P. A. Parsons in the dentist chair. R. W. Baremore, of Metro, in the dentist chair. Billy Brandt as well. And Harry Reichenbach having teething troubles. Any more?

STARTING RIGHT

Pandro Berman is Harry Berman's son. And Harry is a real hustler for FBO. Pandro had his choice. Of going through the University of Pennsylvania. Or taking up picture production. And because he's the son of his father he stuck to pictures. So on Friday last he left for the Coast. And will start in the carpenter's shop. At RC studio. Learning the business.

Atta boy!

THE MILLENIUM

Maurice Tourneur says the time is coming. When theaters will be divided in groups. And one type of house will play mel-lers; another the high brow type, and also houses where programs are specially shown for children only.

What's that old Methodist hymn? "Oh, happy day—?"

SO LONG

Goin' away. All tired out. Too much figurin' things. Want a new perspective. A new viewpoint. Back soon. Meanwhile tell "Red" your troubles.

Chanting the same words over and over the naked Solomon Islanders, men and women, dance without let-up, sometimes for thirty days and nights on a stretch.

Streaming with sweat, part of the time under the blazing sun, part by the light of huge bonfires

That's the way they heat their fighting blood for battle.

More On Rentals

Ben Davis, home office manager of the Schine Theatrical Enterprises, of Gloversville, N. Y., found a good deal of interest in Alexander Aronson's article on "Equitable Rentals." Davis has a good deal to do with the operation of 17 Upper New York houses and for that reason should be competent to speak on the exhibitor angle. This is what he says:

"The subject of equitable rentals, is a matter close to my heart. I have given it considerable thought, and any literature on the subject is of more than sufficient interest, to warrant giving it the closest scrutiny.

"As for my opinion, accept it for what it is worth.

"I find that, Mr. Aronson's article has in it teeth which bite, and bite very hard; so much so that they should make all independent producer-distributors and all independent exhibitors sit up and take notice. Without going into any lengthy discussion, or repeating parts of Mr. Aronson's article, I herewith enumerate the outstanding salients.

"(1)—Mr. Aronson admits that picture rentals as they are today, are not equitable, not good business, not honest.

"(2)—Mr. Aronson admits that cost of production does not concern the exhibitor; that the only gauge for price is box-office pulling power.

"(3)—Mr. Aronson admits that price value of a picture, can not be ascertained till after the picture has played.

"I concur in all the foregoing. I do, however, take exception to his plan, to remedy the existing evils. My exceptions are as follows:

"(1)—Under the plan suggested, the exhibitor will cease to be an exhibitor but will become a landlord, leasing his theater to the producer-distributor, or distributor, working to make his overhead and perhaps (?) a little profit. He will be compelled to play pictures good, bad and indifferent, and hold the bag trusting to luck. This is nothing new. It recalls the methods used by producers of legitimate shows, when they sent out road shows to the smaller towns. Where are the road shows today? And what has become of the small town theater owner?

"(2)—Under the plan, the producer-distributor will run the exhibitor's business, by hiring accountants to fix the exhibitor's overhead and tell the exhibitor how to run his business. From this, am I to infer that Mr. Aronson, really believes that the exhibitor is non compos mentis, and that the producer-distributor should appoint himself the exhibitor's guardian?

"(3)—Mr. Aronson believes that his plan would compel chain theaters to pay their fair share of rentals. In speaking of chain theaters, did Mr. Aronson have in mind the producer-distributor-exhibitor chains? If he did, as he must have, because they are the biggest chain-theater operators, I must ask him the question, to whom will they pay a fair share of rental? Will the Paramount chain of theaters be unfair with Paramount? Will Metro (Loew) chain be unfair with Metro? Will the Goldwyn chain of theaters be unfair with Goldwyn, or will the original franchise holders of First National, be unfair with First National? And if Mr. Aronson, will note this coming season's schedule of releases does he think that these producer-distributor-exhibitors will not have enough product to supply their theaters amongst themselves?

"Since when are these chain theaters cheating their owners?

"(4)—Mr. Aronson's plan if put into operation will be a great boon to the big vested interests of the companies known as producer-exhibitor-companies, because, (a) his plan must kill the inferior theater and the smaller house in the smaller cities, thereby making it possible to have only one theater in a town, controlled by the highly organized producer-distributor-exhibitor companies, delivering thereby the death blow to the very few real independent producer-distributors, and wiping out vast exhibitor investments.

"(5)—Mr. Aronson has apparently forgotten, and if he hasn't, most certainly is unaware of the conditions of the small towns. These as a rule are over-seated, having more theaters than really required and making one theater stand the burden of losses incurred by the others; that is, when the town is controlled. He has also forgotten that there are such things as competitive theaters, and the unfairness which goes with competition.

dicker with them," said the witness. "We have bought virtually all the pictures of a number of the important companies for this year but there is no provision in our contracts against their selling to others.

"The same applies in the various small towns where we have picture houses. We get the exclusive right to a town on the pictures we buy but our competitor gets an exclusive right on the pictures he buys. There are numerous towns where we have no competition but there are also many towns where we have no theaters or affiliations and where the one theater has no opposition. That's because the average small town in this territory will not support more than one picture house. If there are two they both lose money and one or the other must sooner or later quit."

Raleigh, N. C.—Construction work on the new State is at a standstill. The contractors having refused to go further unless payments are made. A mass meeting was held at the City Auditorium, where it was thought enough funds could be raised. This, however, was a failure. Later 200 workers were engaged to canvass the city selling stocks.

"(6)—How will Mr. Aronson, eliminate the self-centered interest of the producer-distributor-exhibitor, when under the plan the 'loco' exhibitor, (and he would have to be 'loco') makes it possible for, these companies to know his business, thereby encouraging them to come in and build a bigger and better house, putting him out of business and depriving his family of bread and butter. Does, Mr. Aronson, want history to repeat itself?

"(7)—Is Mr. Aronson aware that the Eastman theater in Rochester as well as some of the first run picture theaters on Broadway, are working along his plan? Is any producer-distributor satisfied with the results, barring of course, the rare exceptional cases like 'Passion?' And I want to ask Mr. Aronson how many pictures have the few real independent producer-distributors been able to place with these theaters, and what were the results? The theater bore losses which were made up by the distributor.

"In closing I want to say that, Mr. Aronson's plan, if put into effect, is 'grave' food for the independent producer, regardless of all the safe-guards thrown around it, and enlargement of the plan. Mr. Aronson has totally eliminated the greatest factor in the relation between man and man; namely, human nature."

17 Michigan Meetings

Schram, chairman; August 2, Niles, Robt. Codd, chairman; August 3, Grand Rapids, G. L. Willer, chairman; August 6, Muskegon, Paul Schlossman, chairman; August 8, Big Rapids, chairman not selected August 13, Boyne City, P. Tyrrel, chairman. Beginning again in September, meetings will be held on Sept. 4, Port Huron, H. L. Weil, chairman; Sept. 6, Flint, chairman not selected; Sept. 7, Bad Axe, C. H. Schuckert, chairman; Sept. 10, Saginaw, Chas. Q. Carlisle, chairman; Sept. 12, West Branch, B. Sargent, chairman; Sept. 14, Alpena, chairman not selected, and Sept. 18, Marquette, H. S. Gallup, chairman.

In attendance at all of these meetings, in addition to H. M. Richey, general manager of the Michigan organization, will be several members of the board of directors. In this manner definite facts and figures to support Michigan's contention that relief is needed will be gathered and presented to Congressmen and Senators from Michigan.

Actively assisting in the campaign in Michigan will be Judge Alfred J. Murphy, legal counsel who is assisting in preparation of data and information relative to the tax situation. The fact that many theater owners in Michigan have had to resort to the buying of cheaper pictures because they were not making enough money to keep their houses open, is a situation that reacts very disadvantageously for the public, and is a matter that must be corrected, the Michigan leaders think.

The final meeting will be the big state convention at Jackson, the second week in October, at which time the whole situation can be laid down for the theater owners. An excellent response is being received from the questionnaires that are being sent out. These are confidential reports, which are handled by Richey alone, and from which a composite survey of the state will be made.

Arrangements are being made to have direct representation in Washington, where all of this information can be supplied, and carried not only to Michigan legislators, but to anyone to whom it will prove valuable information.

Percentage

By S. R. KENT

Director of Distribution, Famous Players-Lasky Corp.

I think this is the time to do the business a lot of good by advocating the only real way to play pictures and give both sides a square deal—that's percentage.

It is the only way to solve the always and ever present question of higher film rentals. Let each and every picture rest on its merit and rise or fall accordingly.

Famous Players have always favored this plan. Four years ago when we first suggested it we were beautifully abused. They said we were trying to get "inside dope" in the exhibitors' box office. How ridiculous! I can clock a theater, and have done so repeatedly for a small sum per week and get as near the actual figures as I want. So that argument to a logical mind doesn't go.

There are two classes who do not want to see percentage.

First: The producer who insists on flat rental and a stiff guarantee because he wants more than his picture is worth and knows it when he sells.

Second: The exhibitor who doesn't want to pay a fair price and knows it when he is buying.

But it's coming just as sure as hell—there's no other way out. Imagine the pinheaded attitude of some on both sides. Many exhibitors are losing the right to play a lot of good pictures because they can't get them for nothing and as a compromise won't play percentage because it will reveal to what extent they have under-paid in the past. But you can't blame a producer who will play percentage and can't for trying to get all he can just to be sure. This is a funny business, but the very fact that it is peculiar places a responsibility on the buyer and seller both.

The very nature of it should demand that each exhibitor pay an equitable price and that the producer sell accordingly, and the producer could if so many of the larger towns were not stacked decks forcing him to get the money where he can. Many producers argue that the exhibitor isn't honest, and therefore percentage is out of the question. More bunk. We've played thousands of them and are doing it today, and haven't lost enough to talk about. There is a method in the works now of checking in through the tax reports that would protect all concerned.

There is an equitable percentage formula that can be set for every theater in America. There is a fair percentage of what each house takes in that should go to the picture and that can be arrived at. Mind you, I'm not advocating it for just any one company, I'm advocating it for the industry, because any one company is at a disadvantage. But when exhibitors play all product on that basis it will be a different story.

Today we are going through an age of hysterical production costs. There are people now making pictures who have no idea of how much a good picture can take in or how little a bad one can take it.

Percentage is the greatest foe of the bad picture.

Sennett Deal Off

Ends Arrangement with Allied Prod. and Dist.—Supplied Two Pictures Under Arrangement

Mack Sennett has amicably arranged with the Allied Prod. and Dist. Corp.—the United Artists' allied company to end the unexpired portion of his contract. Sennett has supplied two pictures to Allied, "Suzanna" and "The Shriek of Araby." It is understood that the future Sennett feature output has been placed with another important distributor.

E. M. Asher, Sennett's Eastern representative in speaking of the settlement yesterday declared that the relations between Sennett and Allied are of the best. "Our relations," he said "are cordial. Allied will continue to distribute "Suzanna" and "The Shriek of Araby" in the United States and Canada. The company also controls the foreign rights."

No one at United Artists claimed to know about the Sennett arrangement yesterday. Hiram Abrams is away in Europe. He is expected back the middle of the month.

You just can't get money that way because the public won't let you. Also, each good production is unaided and who's going out to make mediocre pictures with the thought of using a few strong ones to put them over when he's paid in percentage money?

This whole problem of how much money can be safely spent on a picture can be answered safely through percentage—no other way. People won't throw in money out of all proportion to what they can get in for it if percentage shows them what the limit is to be. Many times you hear salesmen ask tremendous rentals because a picture cost so and so much—not because it's worth so and so much at the box-offices—that argument is shot all to hell with percentage. Cost means nothing except that you won't purposely spend over and over more than percentage will bring you back.

This business is still suffering today from "too little money for good pictures and too much for bad." Today I can go out and spend $600,000 in making a picture. I put out a clever campaign, oil my tongue and go to bat. Long before that picture is released I can get in much more than its cost in contracts. That same production put out on its merit wouldn't bring back $200,000 on percentage. Would I repeat again? Nix.

Both sides can dodge the issue as long as they please, but within the coming two years, in my opinion, it's going to be a reality.

The man who has faith in his product will play that way—the man who wants to give each picture a square deal at his box office will play that way. Those two elements should be the majority in this industry, and if the minority can prevent it we all ought to get out of the business.

Yesterday's testimony was featured by an attempt on the part of the Government to trace the relations between Famous and Georgia Enterprises, Inc. In this connection, L. M. Ash testified that Herman Fichtenberg had owned 200,000 of the company's 500,000 shares. It was testified that Saenger had used as many Paramount pictures before Fichtenberg had sold out to the Georgia Enterprises, Inc., as it had it afterwards. The session was confined to the examination of several witnesses on minor trade matters and developed nothing of unusual nature.

Witnesses before the Federal Trade Commission hearing testified that the Saenger Amusement Co., through the theaters it owned or with which it was affiliated, controlled virtually every town of any importance in Louisiana and Mississippi.

M. W. Osborne, local manager for Vitagraph, testified there was only one first run house in New Orleans to which he could sell a film. He said that his home office had instructed him not to sell to the Saengers for any of their affiliations. "Plenty of theaters want our pictures, but are tied-up with the Saengers as booking agents and will take the pictures only through the Saengers. We don't recognize booking agents," said the witness.

On the other hand it is claimed the Saengers will not buy the Vitagraph pictures unless they can get them for their affiliations. C. R. Hatchler of Meridian, said he was unable to book any of the big companies' productions. "I used to get them all but now I am shut out," he said, but admitted he was booked up to October, and that he did not usually make his contracts until every September. J. E. Pearce, who operates three theaters in New Orleans, testified he had to sell his film exchange because the Saengers dominated virtually all of the big towns. He said 90 per cent of the big features were denied him. He was asked pointed questions concerning his business but steadfastly maintained that he was in good financial shape.

In the party which left town on three different occasions to see the film were Woods, Goldwyn, E. A. Eschmann, R. A. Rowland, H. O. Schwalbe, Floyd Brockell, Archie Selwyn, Miss Strauss of First National, Bob Dexter, Joseph Plunkett, Walter Hays and Harry Reichenbach.

May Sue Over Name

The Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan complaint is expected to point out that considerable confusion has resulted and will result by the use of the name by two companies in the motion picture business, and that a court order should be issued compelling Goldwyn to designate his pictures in another fashion.

No one at Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan, however, would discuss the matter yesterday. Mr. Goldwyn was equally as reticent.

A default judgment for $2,609 has been filed in the Supreme Court against Arthur F. Beck and the Chadwick Pictures in a suit of Ethel D. Baron on a note, of the corporation endorsed by Beck.

The Housman Comedies, Inc., has applied in the Supreme Court for an order directing the Sheriff to sell 12 Charlie Chaplin negatives, including "Floorwalker," "The Count," "Pawnshop," "Easy Street" and "The Fireman," which belonged to the Chaplin Classics, and were attached in a suit of the Housman Comedies, to apply on an unpaid judgment for $19,025 obtained by Housman against the Chaplin Classics. The films are in possession of the Evans Film Mfg. Co. and it is alleged that Housman has a total claim for $45,000 and has been practically put out of business because the money has not been paid.

Douglas M. Black, who was appointed referee in the suit of Eugene Spitz against Ivan Abramson and Graphic Films over the picture, "The Mother Eternal," in which Spitz demanded an accounting from his partner, in a report filed in the Supreme Court finds that Spitz put in $25,000 cash to start the enterprise, and that he has received only $2,000 back. The referee finds that he is liable on notes and that the amount to be repaid him is $16,193. The defendants have received only $7,107 from the picture, the referee says. He orders that the picture and other assets of the corporation be sold and used so far as possible to pay Spitz the $16,193. If the assets will not pay this sum the defendants are liable, the referee says. If there is any excess after Spitz is paid it is to be applied on Abramson's claim for $35,000.

Denies Hidden Motive

Famous Players Declare Presence of Arbuckle in "Hollywood" Carries No Special Significance

Officials of Famous Players deny that the flash of Roscoe Arbuckle in "Hollywood" carries any special significance with it. They declare that the Arbuckle contract with the company has been abrogated and that the fact that he appears in the picture is only "one of those things."

In the reviews of "Hollywood" by the metropolitan newspapers critics, some interesting angles are discussed. Thus, the critic of the Evening Journal said:

"It is just a flash of Arbuckle that is presented. He looks well groomed. He shrugs his shoulders in a hopeless sort of way, as he walks before the camera. Was it a subtle move by friends of Arbuckle to see how the public would receive him again? * * * Or was it to show the public that Hollywood's motion picture people will have no more to do with him in the films? * * *

"This reviewer knows that the motion picture colony, as such needs no defense. But he asked certain Paramount people, after seeing the picture 'Hollywood' why Arbuckle was in it.

"It just happened that he was in Hollywood when the picture was taken, and we took him along with the others," was the explanation."

The Herald said—

"The camera is then moved into a closeup and the audience sees Fatty Arbuckle reading that one word ('closed') over and over again.

There are many, perhaps, who will object to this. Well, let them. We can say that, from our point of view it is a marvelously telling touch. It is done with no semblance of false sentiment; it is not a palpable effort to arouse sympathy. It is nothing more than a remarkably eloquent example of moving pictures."

The Sun said—

"Nothing in the way of direct propaganda for the fair name of the film city is directly traceable to this picture, except a rather obvious attempt to restore Fatty Arbuckle to public favor, which met with the biggest hand of the picture last evening."

The Times said—

"Fatty' Arbuckle is seen for a few brief moments in this film, but his appearance will not whet public desire for his reintroduction to motion picture enthusiasts. He is at the casting director's window, which is slammed down, leaving the obese comedian with naught else to do but walk away with others for whom there is no work. However, none of the interest in this photoplay hinges on this incident, and nothing would be lost by its elimination."

Newspaper Opinions

"Three Ages"—Metro—
Warfield, 'Frisco

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

San Francisco—Newspaper opinions on "Three Ages," the new Keaton film follow:

BULLETIN—"Three Ages" may not be the funniest picture made by Keaton, but is good entertainment from start to finish. The comedian, who has always furnished consolation to the small man, in this picture shows that the small man sometimes won out over might and brawn, even in the stone age.

Keaton has injected plenty of novelty into the comedy.

CALL AND POST—"Three Ages" is indisputably Buster Keaton's funniest comedy. It is not only funny but it sustains that fun through six reels of comic action burlesquing man and his methods of winning his mate.

CHRONICLE—It is just three times as funny as his usual two-reel pictures, because it is three times as long.

Joseph M. Schenck has given the comedy a wonderful production, the big scene in the Coliseum at Rome being one of the largest and most expensive sets ever erected for a picture.

DAILY NEWS—There's no question that the picture is Keaton's best, and also his funniest. His wooing of an Amazon—a knock-down and dragout, done with impassive countenance—is as hilarious as anything in "The Paleface." And the settings are massive enough to pass for the real thing, especially the replica of the huge Roman Coliseum.

EXAMINER—Keaton has never been more seriously funny, and this is the first time that a Keaton comedy has been produced in feature length of six reels.

JOURNAL—"Three Ages" is unquestionably one of the funniest pictures ever filmed. It ranks as high as any of Chaplin's productions—and beyond that all praise is tame. The story keeps the audience in shrieks of laughter; there isn't a ludicrous bit or possibility that has been overlooked.

"Hollywood"—F. P.-L.

AMERICAN—"Hollywood" is a highly enjoyable picture, entertainingly presented and intelligently treated.

There are several genuinely amusing situations; the picture is well cast.

DAILY NEWS—It's a downright, honest-to-goodness comedy, and judging from the shrieks of lookers-on, a truly funny one.

EVENING JOURNAL—It is a well taken picture, with an interesting story of a young girl from Indiana who goes to Hollywood to get into motion pictures.

"Hollywood," as a film production, merits praise.

EVENING WORLD—We see and meet so many movie stars during our daily rounds that they are no longer a novelty to us, but we want to put ourselves on record as having enjoyed "Hollywood" thoroughly; and we think you, if you are at all interested in movies (and about 99 44-100 per cent of us are), will feel the same way about it.

HERALD—"Hollywood" is a picture of amazing originality, daring subtlety, revolutionary satire and 100 per cent entertainment value—a weird, wild, wonderful affair entitled "Hollywood."

MAIL—"Hollywood" tells a delightful story and is amusing entertainment.

The comedy in "Hollywood" is as good as "Merton of the Movies."

The picture is masterfully directed by James Cruze.

"Hollywood" is a film every one will enjoy. It has no pretensions and is good clean fun.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—"Hollywood" for there's no doubt that this film will attract more attention and greater crowds than anything of its sort since Noah told the ship news reporters what had happened in the Ark. All in all, however, "Hollywood" is—all in all, and then some!

SUN—"Hollywood" at times so keenly and deftly satirical is its humor that it appears as if Harry Leon Wilson wrote this too. While Rupert Hughes stole a march by producing "Souls for Sale" for Goldwyn, the current picture is far superior to the Hughes product in that it hardly ever takes itself or its theme seriously—yet Cruze did a very ingratiating jolt with this picture.

TELEGRAM—"Hollywood" sparkles with delicious comedy. It could not be otherwise. Yet it mirrors a real life and mirrors it neatly, cleverly and with an accuracy which several terse critics have remarked rather belatedly the reputation of several of its predecessors.

TIMES—As a smart satire with sparkling wit "Hollywood," James Cruze's latest production, overwhelms all other screen efforts in its line. In this picture, which is to be enjoyed this week at the Rivoli, the director has accomplished that which Rupert Hughes attempted in a lumbering way in his "Souls For Sale."

This is a film which can be seen more than once and still enjoyed.

TRIBUNE—It really is a most entertaining picture and nothing in the least like it ever has been done before.

James Cruze has proved by his direction that he has a rare sense of comedy.

WORLD—"Hollywood" is one of the most interesting films we have ever seen.

The picture is written lightly, with and there a line of satire directed at the various types of screen actors selves, and every one concerned with making of the film seems to have entered into it as a joking matter.

Really, here is a picture that we can see from start to finish!

Open Conference

Scheduled Today By T. O. C. C.—
Block Bookings and Relations
With Goldwyn to Come Up

The T. O. C. C. will hold a special meeting today at the Hotel Astor which there will be held an open discussion. Three main topics, each of them held of the utmost importance by the exhibitor organization will be discussed before representatives of the trade press: The topics are:

1. Block booking to which the organization is opposed.
2. Compulsory play dates.
3. The status of "Enemies of Women" and "Little Old New York" contracts and Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan.

It is the conviction of an important official of the T. O. C. C. whose opinion, it may be safely said, carries a good deal of weight in the councils of that organization, that local exhibitors owe it to their public not to buy pictures in blocks because when the contracts are signed the productions are on paper only. It is his opinion that the falling off in attendance in Greater New York picture houses—and this, he holds, exists nationally—can be traced to the practice of block hearing in that, the exhibitor is compelled to buy productions, sight unseen and therefore without any guidance as to their quality except what the producer and distributor tell him.

Deny Lloyd Report

John Ragland Says Star is Not Dickering with United Artists
As Reported

The report current in New York that Harold Lloyd is contemplating a switch of his distributing affiliation from Pathe to United Artists, after the completion of his present Pathe contract, was definitely nailed as untrue, yesterday when John C. Ragland, Eastern representative for Lloyd, declared that any such report was absolutely "contrary to the facts." Ragland denied the veracity of an article which appeared in a New York publication to that effect. He stated that Lloyd's present contract calls for the delivery to Pathe of three more productions following "Why

Canadian Distributing Merger

Has Support of M. P. T. O.

Organization Had Representative in Toronto Working With Exhibitors on Consolidation of Three Exchange Systems—
Two Hundred Theater Owners Already Interested

The amalgamation of three exchange organizations in Canada as divulged in an exclusive dispatch published in yesterday's issue of THE FILM DAILY, apparently carries more significance than appears on the surface.

It can be stated on the best of authority that the move has the sanction of the Motion Picture Theater Owners of America; that a representative of that organization has been working on it very quietly in Canada and that, despite this, the move is known to some film men in this city and to many in Toronto.

The Cohen organization recently announced it had been invited to form a Canadian division of the M. P. T. O. by exhibitors there and that, for this purpose, a convention would be called in September. When Cohen was asked to comment on the Canadian move yesterday, he replied he had nothing to say.

By those familiar with the situation, there was some discussion as to whether or not this was the first step on the part of the Theater Owners Dist. Corp., with which many M. P. T. O. officials are affiliated, and of which Sydney S. Cohen is the chairman of the board of directors, to start its own releasing organization. There has been considerable speculation among film men relative the future of the company which has maintained a strict silence about its activities. An effort to secure a statement from W. A. True proved unavailing.

The Canadian move includes about 200 exhibitors, many of them members of the Canadian Exhibitors' Ass'n, which may possibly be absorbed when the new M. P. T. O. allied organization there is launched.

The situation so far as "Enemies of Women" and "Little Old New York" is concerned involves a number of contracts between exhibitors and Famous Players, before William Randolph Hearst made his alliance with Goldwyn and when it seemed quite likely that the two pictures would be released by Paramount. Golwyn-Cosmopolitan holds the old contracts are not equitable because they were made on the basis of a production cost that has been vastly exceeded by Cosmopolitan. The T. O. C. C. members, however, are understood to feel that a contract is a contract and that the situation ends there.

A record attendance is expected at today's session. There may be producers or representatives of producers present.

Portsmouth, O.—The new Stanley theater at Sciotoville has reopened after undergoing extensive alterations. The house as it stands now is one of the most attractive in this section.

The more Joseph Plunkett of the Strand laughs at a comedy, the more the salesman will try to charge him in rental, so that he must be conservative. Nevertheless, last Wednesday night he sat and roared through eight reels of the most spontaneous humor and gripping melodramatic situations it has been his pleasure to witness, and after the show, like the frank and honest showman he is, approached the producer and admitted the picture's greatness.

Newspaper Opinions

"Where the North Begins"—Warner Bros.—Loew's State, Los Angeles
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Los Angeles—Newspaper opinions "Where the North Begins," the first of the Warner releases for the fall. Now at the State.

EXAMINER—Chester Franklin did a splendid job. Walter McGrail gives appealing characterization. Story grips and holds you until the final fadeout.

EXPRESS—Rin-tin-tin covers himself with deserved glory. Story moves along smoothly in marvelously beautiful Northern settings. Remarkably reasonable and handled with sympathetic skill.

RECORD—Had anyone but the dog eyed the lead, it would be our duty to miss the picture with a few remarks about the usual, French-Canadian movie romance. The spectators applauded Rin-tin-tin enthusiastically.

TIMES—Rin-tin-tin seemed about as bored good share of the time as we did. Chester Franklin directed and did as well anyone with the story. If anyone could have stolen the picture from Rin-tin-tin, it was Claire Adams.

"Broadway Gold"—Truart Cameo

AMERICAN—"Broadway Gold" makes an interesting picture, because it tells a gripping, melodramatic story, with a mystery that is surprisingly solved in the final reel. The photography is effective, especially in the collisions and killings, which really are exciting.

EVENING WORLD—"Broadway Gold" appears to be a karat mark, but under a jewellers' glass or under an acid test, it looks to us like excellent stuff from which to manufacture door knobs.

MAIL—What is told in six reels could have been portrayed more satisfactorily in three.

In fact, the film is out of harmony with the intimate atmosphere of this charming little use.

"Broadway Gold" is just another ordinary movie with a box office title.

POST—It is a more or less lurid story. It is full of thrilling scenes. There is a well-concealed mystery effectively solved in the end, and some very good photography, especially in the murders and the illusions.

TELEGRAM—There is a good picture at the Cameo. It is a mystery story that holds you until almost the final curtain.

TIMES—"Broadway Gold" is the box-office title of the new film being presented this week at the Cameo. It is a production in which there is plenty of action, good photography and an adequate cast.

TRIBUNE—The picture seems to our practiced eye to have all of the elements of a successful road attraction.

WORLD—"Broadway Gold" it seemed to us pretty good stuff as to theme, yet its treatment is high class in every way. Elaine Hammerstein acts brightly. Elliott, Dexter is handsome and effective hero. The settings are lovely.

"Homeward Bound"—F. P.-L. Rialto

AMERICAN—That storm was the big one in the picture and to a layman's eye was tremendously realistic.

Tom Meighan made a good-looking sailor, and Lila Lee was quite too sweet for anything.

DAILY NEWS—"Homeward Bound" a rather dry film of stormy waters.

EVENING WORLD—"Homeward Bound" to us a mighty enjoyable picture.

Mixed in with Tom's fine personality, his natural, easy screen method and the heroics that are thrown his way, are some thrilling scenes and a corking good story by Peter B. Kyne.

MAIL—What goes before the storm is rather inconsequential, merely certain incidents of scarcely any interest.

"Homeward Bound" has none of the hardy atmosphere of the sea. Tom Meighan, as the mate, is entirely too gentle and polite. Not a marlinpike is in sight through the entire picture.

The storm was so good we are still unable to figure out whether it was one which actually occurred at sea or was made to order in the studio.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—"Homeward Bound" though there is nothing particularly unusual about it, it is given a realistic presentation by an excellent company, and there is sufficient action and sustentation of interest to make it quite worth seeing.

TIMES—Meighan performs in his usual attractive way. Miss Lee adorns herself with the very latest creations, and must be one of the best-dressed girls in the little seaport. Charles Abbe is quite satisfactory as the father and ship owner. This production is a moderate entertainment for the great open spaces.

TRIBUNE—We only know it bored us terrifically, just as sea stories always do. There are some good water shots where the breaking waves dashed high, but they seem to appear over and over again, these same shots. We never knew the ocean to be so consistent.

WORLD—Thomas Meighan and Lila Lee form an excellent basis for any motion picture. When they are supplied with an effective story, combining a stolen yacht, a runaway marriage, a leaky schooner and two of the heaviest gales that ever struck the screen, the results are decidedly entertaining. Such is "Homeward Bound."

"Trilby"—1st Nat'l Strand

AMERICAN—"Trilby" has caught the spirit of the story as successfully as it is possible for it ever to be done.

Andree Lafayette is faithfully cast as Trilby. She is beautiful; she possesses the spontaneous personality needed for the part.

Every detail is brought out with much care. The scenes and costumes seem like reproductions of old etchings.

EVENING JOURNAL—A motion picture of exceptional merit which takes one away from the beaten paths generally trod by film producers is "Trilby."

She (Andree Lafayette) won the hearts of all in the picture. She also won for herself last night a place in the hearts of practically all of the spectators at the Strand.

EVENING WORLD—And a right good offering it is, too.

Andree Lafayette is rather weird at times but decidedly easy to gaze upon.

"Trilby" is one of those films we wouldn't want to have to say we had missed.

DAILY NEWS—As long as the picture lasts, Miss Lafayette is Trilby; she doesn't act her.

If you liked "Trilby" as a book, the motion picture production is just the book come to life. It is no imitation. You'll enjoy it enough to see it again, if you make a practice of reading books more than once. What more can we say?

MAIL—"Trilby" the result they achieved is praiseworthy indeed. Those interested in better films will not fail to place this one on their list.

Andree Lafayette is to be congratulated for her interpretation. She made Trilby a girl of beauty but of small mentality.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—"Trilby" an artistic version of George Du Maurier's famous novel. The period and locale of the story are well portrayed and with an accuracy of detail that would seem to indicate that the makers of the picture know their Paris. However, she (Miss Lafayette) is very pretty in a very French way and her performance, considered as a whole, is excellent.

POST—Many of these possibilities have been realized but how the story drags in spots! And it is just a case of too much film yardage. The episodes are interesting but are worked out in too minute details, with a monotonous number of "close-ups."

TELEGRAM—"Trilby" the leading honors of "Trilby" must go to Mlle. Lafayette. She meets with every requirement called for in the novel of George Du Maurier, which inspired the stage and film play.

TIMES—Andree Lafayette catches the spirit of Du Maurier's fascinating Parisian character.

But whimsical and charming as Mlle. Lafayette is, it is Arthur Edmund Carewe's revelation of Svengali that dominates this production. His make-up is true as steel. It is far ahead of most productions presented on Broadway.

TRIBUNE—Mlle. Lafayette delights us. She is clever, fascinating, and beautifully unusual. It seemed, too, that all of the tremendous moments which we were looking forward to were left out. It was a version of "Trilby" with all of the thrills left out, and there remained just an artificial story with no particular reason for being at all.

WORLD—Messrs. Tully and Young have added and subtracted to and from the Trilby story until their total disagrees radically from Du Maurier's. Though most of their changes are ill-advised, enough remains of the hardy original to make the picture entertaining.

A new actress from France, Andree Lafayette, plays the difficult Trilby role. Her large and rather immobile features seem to us unsuited to cinema success. The fire of Trilby burned low in her playing.

Indiana Organizing

Business Basis, Says Frank Rembusch—Rejoined Because he Saw Vital Need for Action

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Indianapolis—In response to a report from THE FILM DAILY relative to his reasons for rejoining the Indiana M. P. T. O., a Sydney S. ally, Frank J. Rembusch has prepared a long reply giving his reasons for doing so. When it became known that Rembusch had returned to the fold after an absence of three years from active participation in the ranks of exhibitor organizations there was some interest expressed in New York, especially so in view of the fact that Rembusch has been formerly hostile to Cohen.

Admitting that his attitude may be strange, Rembusch says:

"However, I weighed the facts and concluded that my first duty is to my own state. Furthermore, I would be a man of stone if I did not appreciate with all my heart the cordial and friendly invitation by my exhibitors here to come along. They said that they could not have an organization without me, and said that many Indiana exhibitors would not join unless I did. It became then my duty to forget any personal opinions and join 100%."

"I am also particularly gratified that all the circuits in Indiana and big exhibitors were out joined at the same time. I believe this means that we are going to be successful in the strong state organization in America. President Heller and

New Operators' Scale

Calls For Double Shift System—T. O. C. C. Members Dissatisfied With Terms

Moving Picture Machine Operators Local 306 yesterday submitted a new wage scale to the T. O. C. C. in session at the Hotel Astor. The scale submitted covers the period from Sept. 1, 1923 to Sept. 1, 1924.

One of the outstanding features of the new scale so far as its application to a majority of houses is concerned, relates to a so-called "double shift" system, each shift not to exceed an actual operating period of 6 or 7 hours.

Harry Mackler, President of Local 306 issued the following statement on the new wage scale:

"In adopting the new wage scale theater owners are relieved of the double scale payment which has been exacted by operators working the supper periods in place of men who were working on a basis of a ten hour day. I firmly believe this will appeal to the theater owners when considered in connection with the fact that due to the men spending fewer hours pent up in the booth many advantages will result to exhibitors. Among these advantages are better care of equipment and projection, alertness of operators with consequent safeguard of the public who attend these performances."

Ed. A. Schiller of the Loew organization is on his way to the South to visit the theaters in that section. He will return through St. Louis where a State theater is being built and Pittsburgh.

Ask Hays to Cut Group Bookings; T. O. C. C. Intends Suing Goldwyn

Exhibitors Determined Not to Buy Without Previews—Aroused Over Alleged Lack of Faith Concerning "Enemies of Women" and "Little Old New York" Contracts

The result of prolonged discussions held in secret by the Theater Owners Chamber of Commerce bore fruit at a special meeting held at the Astor yesterday, when a resolution that was unanimously carried, pledged that body to ask Will H. Hays to work for the elimination of block bookings. A. H. Schwartz, A. J. Wolf, Harry Traub, Sol Brill, Louis F. Blumenthal, Benjamin Sherman, Max Barr, Louis Schneider and Max Gold constitute a committee of five appointed by Charles L. O'Reilly to confer with Hays.

After that matter had been disposed of, the Goldwyn-

Chamberlains Declare Dividend

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Pottsville, Pa.—The Chamberlain Amusement Co., Inc., has declared a quarterly dividend to all stockholders on record at the close of business on July 1. This is the first dividend of its kind to be declared by the theater company, since its formation, nine years ago.

Cosmopolitan situation was brought up and thoroughly discussed. T. O. C. C. members made no effort to conceal their sentiment on the matter and decided that unless relief of some sort is secured from the company over existing contracts on "Enemies of Women" and "Little Old New York," the matter will be taken into the courts.

The group booking situation has engaged the attention of officials of the T. O. C. C. for some time. As O'Reilly explained in his opening remarks at yesterday's meeting, he blames the falling off in attendance at theaters throughout the country directly on the poor output of pictures, a condition which he says the exhibitor cannot control.

"There has been a tendency," he said yesterday, "to spread, by propaganda or otherwise the idea that more money is being spent on fall production. The fact that over 200 New York theaters have been closed because of insufficient business has evidently been overlooked. Tax reports for the past two years show the drop in theater business. There are more seats, better equipment and finer houses than ever before, yet business has dropped. I believe Will H. Hays is big enough to give the same inquiry and investigation to this problem as he did to the uniform contract."

The arguments, mostly for the passage of the resolutions occupied some time. Billy Brandt traced what he termed the development of the

 Chairman Schmidt have a plan to finance the organization which I feel will succeed, and finances mean everything.
 "The board of directors met this week, and we are now incorporating the Indiana organization, having employed Earl Cox as attorney. We anticipate a business organization. We don't want to take sides in any exhibitor strike, but will work harmoniously with all who have the same accomplishments in view that we have.
 "After hearing what the national organization is trying to do, I felt that all could subscribe to the programme. My only complaint is that we have had too many words but no action."
 Elsewhere in his statement, Rembusch asserts that his attorney is still at work on various claims arising from the Patterson movement and expenses incurred when Rembusch endeavored to interest William Howard Taft in heading a national exhibitor organization.

Newspaper Opinions

"Little Old New York"—Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan—Cosmopolitan Theater

AMERICAN—" * * * there are many fine things about that picture.
 "Little Old New York" is a picture that just had to be acted to achieve success. The restoration of the quaint streets and houses and waterfront of lower Manhattan of a century ago was an achievement of architecture in itself.
 DAILY NEWS—Talking facts now, we enjoyed Marion Davies in her new film more than we ever before. Her picture—well, it's a sweet tale of bygone days and is plumb full of an assortment of happenings, but my, oh, my! how drawn out!
 EVENING JOURNAL—In the difficult role of Patricia O'Day, most of the time called upon to feel and look and act the part of Pat, Miss Davies triumphs. * * *
 EVENING WORLD—The supporting company is excellent throughout. One would be tempted to call it superb if he did not want to save that adjective for the photography and the settings by Joseph Urban. * * * Big New York will enjoy it.
 HERALD—" * * * is as easy to look at as any picture that has come along since "Robin Hood." It falls smoothly on the eye in every foot of its film; from an aesthetic point of view there is not a jarring note in it.
 MAIL—No more ambitious motion picture could have been chosen to christen the new playhouse than "Little Old New York." * * * It was convincing and real and showed plainly that she had given long thought and much study to her role.
 MORNING TELEGRAPH—And what a chance she has in "Little Old New York" to show her ability! In scenes that run the gamut of the broadest comedy, to delicate emotional moments that wring the heart, she stood the test making it difficult to say whether she is better in light comedy or in drama. * * *
 We must not fail to hand Sidney Olcott a few flowers for his historical scenes of early New York, surely the educational as well as the entertaining phase of this, is one of the things that is worthy of special mention and should be told to those who cry for better films. Harrison Ford, * * * does some very excellent work.

 POST—And a mighty good story was chosen for the production which made its debut with the house.
 SUN—"Little Old New York" is a film full of fun and charm, and Marion Davies is excellent as a girl who masquerades as a boy.
 TELEGRAM—There are many other fascinating features in the play, * * *
 It is told with much liveliness against a surging background, which includes all the town of New York in 1807. Pretty little Pat moves through it all with bewitching little graces, sudden moments of drama and episodes of real pathos. Miss Davies acts delightfully always, and if she makes a winning little boy, she is even more winsome in her frills and furbelows as the alluring Miss O'Day. This is the most varied role in which she has appeared, and she is at her best in it.
 TIMES—For costumes and settings and photography "Little Old New York" is one of the most exquisite productions ever thrown upon a screen. * * * The story is sweet and appealing and runs along without a single hurtful halt, and Sidney Olcott, the director, has shown excellent taste in refraining from any of the usual motion picture gymnastics. The acting is quiet and natural and the characterization is good, although Marion Davies is far too feminine ever to be mistaken for a boy.
 TRIBUNE—Miss Davies is so intriguing, and at the same time so satisfying and convincing * * * one of the best actresses on the screen.
 WORLD—And if we know anything about cinema acting and cinema directing and designing, here is one of the loveliest and simplest love stories which have come to the screen in a season, performed almost perfectly from start to finish. * * * she (Marion Davies) is irresistible and positively grand in pantomime. * * * a fine example of what is to be a new order in the cinema play. It is worthy of the attention of every person who loves good acting, and sane, finished presentation.

New Operators' Scale

 "In contrast with these desirable objects the small additional cost of projection proposed to exhibitors, is in my opinion warranted and the operators confidently expect the theater owners will promptly ratify the new wage scale agreement."
 Within the past two years the wages of the operators have suffered a 5% cut, according to Mackler.
 The scale was read by Charles L. O'Reilly at the meeting yesterday. It was referred to a special committee handling that matter. While no open discussion was held concerning the actual terms which, the T. O. C. C. is understood to hold exorbitant and beyond reason, the general undercurrent of talk throughout the room indicated very clearly just what the sentiment was.

block booking system and declared that First National was offering a block of 24, Metro, 33, Famous Players 12, in the first group, Warner Bros., 11 and "even Universal with a block of 11 and this a company that never before did such a thing."

"The system is all wrong," said Brandt. "I asked Marcus Loew, before he sailed for Europe, how many of his fall releases I could see, in the event that I wanted to buy them. I asked him how many he had finished and he replied a few. I asked how many he had in production and he said a couple. I asked how many were in scenario form and he replied he thought there were some, and so far as the rest was concerned he said that he had purchased the stories for them." Then continuing, Brandt said:

Cites Tilt With Goldwyn

"We don't know what they are. I mention the Loew organization only as an example. Salesmen want definite prices on pictures that exist only on paper. Look at the jam we are in with Goldwyn on 'Little Old New York' and 'Enemies of Women.' This would never have happened if the pictures were sold on their merits. But they were sold in advance, a year before they were made. Talk of higher rentals is only a repetition of what we hear every year. A halt is necessary. We must know what we are getting. Now we are only buying a promise."

Arthur Hirsch made the interesting assertion that he understood Famous Players had in preparation the issuance of a statement to New York exhibitors that the local quota on new releases would not be determined until the picture had played at the Broadway first-runs. This statement elicited applause on all sides and many comments were heard that it was "too good to be true." An effort was made to reach Harry H. Buxbaum, New York sales supervisor for Famous Players and other officials at the home office of Paramount in order to verify this, but all of them were attending Adolph Zukor's golf tournament at New City.

O'Reilly made the interesting statement that second and subsequent run exhibitors were hard hit when pictures fell below expectations in quality because by the time the productions reached those theaters, the public knew from the first-run engagements whether or not there was any merit attached to them.

Play Dates Discussed

The second important subject concerned compulsory play dates, insisted upon by the major companies at the time the contracts are signed. Again Brandt took the floor and went into detail on this development.

Text of the Resolutions

The text of the resolutions against block bookings and the purchase of pictures without previews as adopted at the T. O. C. C. meeting yesterday follows:

"Whereas, the motion picture is universally recognized as the greatest medium of visualized expression and is the greatest recreational, entertaining and educational factor in the life of the general public, and

"Whereas, the theater owner and exhibitor of motion pictures is responsible directly to the public for the quality of pictures presented at his theater, and

"Whereas, the exhibitor has never been consulted by the producer of motion pictures, as to the quality, calibre, type, nature or kind of picture he is to exhibit to the public at his theater, and

"Whereas, a majority of the producers under the present system compel the exhibitor to purchase pictures unseen from descriptive titles, while their production is only in contemplation (the quality, nature and type of which is problematic and highly speculative), and furthermore, most of the producers insist upon and compel the purchase of pictures in group form and deny the exhibitor the right to view the product before purchase, or to make selection of the same to conform to the needs of his house or to the taste of his patrons, and

"Whereas, the exhibitor feels a deep sense of responsibility and obligation to the public in his endeavor to furnish them wholesome entertainment, artistic, educational and recreational in value, and to attain that end,

Be it therefore resolved, that the members of the T. O. C. C. go on record as being opposed to the present system of purchasing pictures before they are produced or while the production is only contemplated.

"Originally Famous Players insisted on this new wrinkle," he said. "It was brought into being by them when the 'Super 39' group was sold last year. They insisted on getting play dates at once for all their pictures, irrespective of the fact that later the company failed to deliver some of them to exhibitors as contracted for, particularly in the case of 'Hollywood' and 'Bluebeard's Eighth Wife' which have been held over for this season. This year, the other companies conceived the idea that the Famous Players' twist was a good one for them to practice. They want all play dates at once. I tell you this will close the market tight and keep out independent productions."

Argue On Uniform Contract

This led to a discussion on the terms of the uniform contract and after considerable argument, a committee composed of John Manheimer, Bernard Edelhertz, Joseph Jame, Leo Brecher and Louis F. Blumenthal was appointed to confer with Mr. Hays regarding that clause of the standard contract that deals with play dates. The thought was openly expressed that there was a joker of some kind in it that would react unfavorably toward the exhibitor. At one point Sam Berman vigorously defended the distributor for his anxiety to secure play dates and declared that the exhibitor generally always contracted for more product than he could possibly use.

(2) That they are opposed to the purchase of pictures in group form or any form without the right of selection.

(3) That they are opposed to purchase pictures before an opportunity is given them to review the finished product.

"That the interests of the theater-going public will be best served, fostered and promoted by establishing and maintaining the principles stated above.

"Whereas, the T. O. C. C. recognizing the fact that statistics prove that attendance at motion picture theaters have considerably decreased within the past two years, and believing that this is due to the continued system of forcing theater owners to contract for pictures which they are not given an opportunity to see or have reviewed before buying same, thus forcing the theater owners to contract for pictures which they are not given an opportunity to see or have reviewed before buying same, thus forcing the theater owner to accept many pictures which are far below the standard accepted by the patrons of motion pictures.

"Be it therefore resolved, that the T. O. C. C. urge and request the M. P. Prod. and Dist. of America, Inc., to discontinue the practice of forcing exhibitors to buy what they cannot see, to the end that better pictures may more consistently be presented to the public.

"Be it further resolved, that our Committee on Business Relations are instructed to call upon Will H. Hays, President of the M. P. Prod. and Dist. of America, Inc., and present to him the contention of this body as set forth in this resolution."

The hottest part of the discussion centered around the Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan situation when O'Reilly openly declared James R. Grainger and Sam Eckman, Jr., of the distributing organization had broken their faith with the T. O. C. C.

Charges Goldwyn Broke Promise

As noted, the difficulties exist over "Enemies of Women" and "Little Old New York." O'Reilly declared that the organization has received assurances from Goldwyn that no other exhibitors would be approached on these two pictures until the situation had straightened itself out. O'Reilly charged that, despite this, a contract had been entered upon with the Loew circuit for "Enemies of Women" and that August 25 had been settled upon as a play date. He added that Goldwyn had promised that no one would play the picture before Sept. 16.

O'Reilly made it very clear that the T. O. C. C. would bring a test case against Goldwyn unless something is done to adjust the situation. The committee that is handling it, together with Lee A. Ochs as an additional member will endeavor to confer with Nathan Burkan's office today in an effort to reach a settlement of some kind. It was stated by O'Reilly that he would have nothing more to do with Grainger or Eckman on the matter. In the event that the conference in Burkan's office proves unavailing, O'Reilly will go direct to William Randolph Hearst who he added, would not countenance such tactics on the part of his sales organization.

Agree With T. O. C. C.

Louis Rosenbluh, general manager of the Fox exchange that serves New York City, Westchester County, Northern Jersey and Connecticut yesterday, instructed all of his salesmen to screen any or all of the Fox releases for 1923-1924 for exhibitors, if exhibitors want to see them before buying them.

Whether the order came in anticipation of the meeting of the T. O. C. C. which occurred at the Astor yesterday is not known. It so happens, at any rate, that Rosenbluh's order brings Fox into line as the first company to conform with the wishes of the T. O. C. C. members; that all product be first screened and contracts entered upon later. The T. O. C. C. openly declares that the falling off in theater attendance is due directly to the poor crop of pictures and adds that the exhibitor hasn't any choice because he never knows what he is going to get.

The discussion was a prolonged one. It developed that O'Reilly had seen Nicholas Schenck on the matter and that Schenck had promised not to show the picture in Loew houses where the new contract conflicted with those held for "Enemies" by T. O. C. C. members who had contracted for the picture when it seemed that Famous Players would distribute it. It was quite evident that the Chamber intends carrying this matter out to a finish. O'Reilly, at one point, declared that Grainger and Eckman had instructed the local sales force to attempt intimidation of exhibitors on the ground that Hearst's influence with Mayor Hylan would be brought to bear on exhibitors if they refused to heed the demands of the Goldwyn organization.

T. O. C. C. "Means Business"

As an indication of how the T. O. C. C. feels so far as this is concerned, O'Reilly declared that David Kaiserstein, owner of the Strand, Bayonne, N. J. would be suspended from the body if he insisted on playing "Enemies of Women" under a new Goldwyn contract and to the detriment of a competitor in Bayonne who had signed for the picture with Famous Players. The same thing will be done to Annos of Annos and Palley, operators of the Colonial, Newark and another theater in Bayonne, if he does not heed the wishes of the T. O. C. C.

James R. Grainger is out of town until Monday and in his absence Eckman refused to comment on O'Reilly's charges.

So THIS is "Hollywood"!

Opening at the Rivoli Theatre, New York, last Sunday, a HOT JULY DAY, "Hollywood" equaled the theatre's box-office record, held by "Blood and Sand," and smashed the record of "Manslaughter," the next highest. "Hollywood" is also doing absolute capacity business at the New Orpheum, Chicago.

And the Critics Say:

"'Hollywood' represents the turning point in the life of the silent drama—100 per cent entertainment. A momentous production, and we sincerely trust none of our readers will fail to see it. '—————' left us cold and bitter. 'Hollywood' has restored us to a state of genial warmth."—Robert E. Sherwood in N. Y. Herald.

"A finely genuine picture and the best piece of story-telling that has yet come forth from the world's motion picture capital."—Carl Sandburg in Chicago News.

"It really is a most entertaining picture, and nothing in the least like it has ever been done before."—Harriette Underhill in N. Y. Tribune.

"The director has accomplished that which was attempted in '—————'. This is a film which can be seen more than once and still enjoyed."—Fred Hall in N. Y. Times.

"The comedy in 'Hollywood' is as good as 'Merton of the Movies.' Lem's dream is one of the funniest episodes we have ever seen in the movies. A film everyone will enjoy."—New York Mail.

"Keenly and deftly satirical in its humor. Far superior to '—————'."—N. Y. Sun and Globe.

"Delightful entertainment."—Chicago Post.

"It is the real, wholesome, enterprising and amazingly successful Hollywood that is shown. Romance, yes. But that which is legitimate and fine. And the adventures of the Indiana family in the far West afford thrills, laughter and pathos at times."—Rob Reel in Chicago American.

"Really, here is a picture that we enjoyed from start to finish."—Quinn Martin in New York World.

"'Hollywood' is the best example of showmanship I have yet to see in a motion picture. It is intelligent entertainment. Don't miss it!"—Polly Wood in Chicago Herald and Examiner.

"A highly enjoyable picture, entertainingly presented and intelligently treated. Genuinely amusing situations."—Rose Pelswick in New York American.

"'Hollywood' is sheer joy."—Dorothy Day in New York Telegraph.

"We doubt if there'll be a single soul at all interested in movies who will not revel in the display of reel talent that flits across the screen, for there are 80 honest-to-goodness stars, and, as real stars, they do their bits as though they liked it."—Don Allen in N. Y. Evening World.

"'Hollywood' is very successful in getting chuckles when it wants them and not in the wrong places."—New York Sun and Globe.

Director and Fairbanks Deny and Artists Distribution Deal
—May Get Lubtisch

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Los Angeles—Both Douglas Fairbanks and Cecil B. De Mille deny the director will distribute his productions through United Artists. To a FILM DAILY representative, Fairbanks declared he knows nothing about the report and that he hadn't seen De Mille weeks.

De Mille, when asked about the report, said:

"My contract with Famous Players-Lasky Corp. is still in force. I am not in a position to discuss any other plans until such time as that contract is ended."

Ernest Lubtisch states he has signed no contract with United Artists, it is understood that the deal with him will be closed in a few days and that under the terms of it he will make his own productions probably direct Mary Pickford in pictures yearly.

Star Values

Arthur Kane talking. And when Arthur talks he usually says something. Just before I got away. He was talking about star values. And said he rated a star value as three to one over just a good picture. In other words a good star should bring in three times as much. As the picture would bring without that star. Exceptions, of course. But three to one the average.

Now there will be arguments. Some will agree. Many others won't. But if you've a real argument on this subject, shoot it in.

He found them all tied up in black mourning. Bag and all. And that's how he returned to Boston.

Editor's Note—An interesting sidelight on the block booking situation as discussed at the T. O. C. C. meeting at the Astor on Thursday came to the fore at the Dallas hearing of the Federal Trade Commission, when L. T. Pellerin, a state right buyer said independent product is hard to sell in the Southwest because exhibitors are tied up by block bookings. The Dallas dispatch follows:

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Dallas, Tex.—L. T. Pellerin, president of the R. D. Lewis Film Corp., a state right distributor in the Southwest, testified before the Federal Trade Commission here that he finds it difficult to place independent product in this territory because exhibitors are generally sewed up with block bookings from the old line companies. Pellerin was called as a witness in the proceedings against Famous Players and allied organizations.

his board up to date. And out in Ohio the film folk are happy. And suggest that other governors do the same.

THE PULSE OF THE INDUSTRY

Clever man, Bill Johnson. Of the MP News. Talking one day about pictures and conditions. And voiced this thought; that the 16 year old children give a better idea of the pulse of the industry than any others. They know what is liked. And what isn't. And he's right. It's the 16 year old uns, and their friends, a bit older, perhaps, who make up the great army of picture lovers. And when you overlook them, you overlook your audience. Or the greater part anyway.

KENT'S PERCENTAGE IDEAS

Surely started something. Many will agree that it is well thought out. But a big man in the business. One of the most important. Had this to say about it: "Kent's smart. But you can't work this business on percentage. Because the exhibitor won't let you. That's all there is to it. You'll never get him to agree on what is a fair basis. That to start with. And after you have, then what? How are you going to check him? Are you going to send a man along with every print? Are you going to hire a corps of accountants to follow the print through the territory? Or are you going to believe what the exhibitor sent you as all you are entitled to?"

And when this man was informed that the Columbia Burlesque "wheel" had developed a system which seemed to operate smoothly he said: "Yes, maybe you can do that with a 'wheel' of shows. At the most they have 40. But what are you going to do with a company that has 30 or more releases a season, and 100 prints of each? Tell me."

He hasn't been answered yet.

THE "LOST LEGION"

All ex Fox men. That is, at one time or another, worked for the Wizard of Tenth Avenue. Edgar Lewis; Harry Day; Lloyd Willis; Paul Mooney, Harry Field, Bill Alexander; Jimmy Grainger; Arthur James; Eddie Maxwell; Ralph Proctor; Herman Robbins; Harry Reichenbach. And some more. Every once in a while they get together. And talk of the good old days.

EPIC PICTURES AND GREAT PICTURES

Did you ever stop to think. That all the great pictures. Have been epic pictures. That is; they dealt with matters that were in themselves epic making. Go back a long way—"Quo Vadis." Then Griffith came through with "The Birth." Also an epic. Ingram's "Four Horsemen" dealt with a like subject. So does Jimmy Cruze's "Covered Wagon." And so it goes. Isn't it something for picture makers to think about?

Why doesn't someone make an epic of the more latterly days of this great country? The development of our great fortunes; in our great cities. The kind of men who made them. What they were up against. And that kind of material. The making of Chicago from a wilderness. The development of New York.

Oh, by the way, there is one coming about New York—the Marion Davies production of "Little Old New York."

SOMETHING ABOUT FIRST RUNS

Up here in the mountains. Up New England way. Where Sam Grand. And Harry Asher plan production ideas. And incidentally sell film. And where Bill Gray and Nate Gordon buy for the territory. It's quiet. And kinda lonesome. And except for golf. And rain. There isn't anything. And so you get thinking.

And one of the thoughts that came was this: that scattered over this great country of ours are. And then the question: How many real first run houses?

And when you set down and figure it out what do you get? Well you figure. I have. And all that sort of come to mind are about 460. Not alleged or fictitious first runs. But real honest-to-goodness ones. Now you figure. And shoot in what you find.

DANNY.

Our Opinion

MORAL OF THE PICTURE—None Outstanding.

Elaborate Presentation of Interesting Story Suitable for High-Class Audiences —Strong Human Angle Adopted by Director

The human quality of "Daughters of the Rich," together with the elaborate method of production and the infinite care which has been taken in the arrangement of the trifling details that are so necessary in making the action colorful and convincing, brings the picture into the class which appeals especially to the high-class audience. The production appears to have had a good deal of money spent on it, many of the settings are elaborate, costumes are becoming and beautiful; glimpses of Paris gaiety, including the luxurious apartment of Mlle. Giselle, who incidentally is equipped to answer her telephone while she sits in her bath. Director Gasnier seems to have put forth every effort to make a lifelike visualization of the story, and one of the picture's strong points is the centralization of the main threads of the plot. One of the best portrayals of the picture is that of Count Makakoff by Stuart Holmes. This is an eccentric character which Mr. Holmes plays from a decided comedy angle, and is likely to get a laugh every time he appears on the scene—foppish and scheming and bedecked with an eyeglass. Ethel Shannon is excellent as Mlle. Giselle, a woman living on the bounty of the count. Miriam Cooper is charming as Maud Barhyte, whose romance is cut into by a jealous rival, and Ruth Clifford is splendid as Sally, forced to marry a title, yet loving her friend's sweetheart. Gaston Glass acceptably plays the part of Gerard Welden, the man in the case. The cast, photography and illumination and careful editing contribute largely to the production's good quality.

Putting It Over

Here is how a brother exhibitor put his show over. Send along your ideas. Let the other fellow know how you cleaned up.

Simple But Clever Stunt

Asbury Park, N. J.—For the showing of "Backbone" at the Lyric, in the window of a prominent restaurant was placed a small negro boy armed with a knife and surrounded by several watermelons. The boy was told to eat all he liked, but to eat it slowly. The proprietor of the restaurant put cards in the window reading:

"Good food is the Backbone of good health."

"Good health is the Backbone of enjoyment."

"Enjoyment is the Backbone of entertainment."

"Entertainment is the Backbone of happiness."

"Happiness is the Backbone of life."

At the bottom of each card was a line reading: "See 'Backbone' at the Lyric."

Haug Puts This One Over

Mobile, Ala.—When "Hearts Aflame" played the Crown, C. D. Haug, Metro exploitation man used red paper hearts adjusted over the mouthpieces of public telephones, and had huge red hearts hung in the windows of a number of taxis. At night he sent out a float with six large railroad lanterns on each side and a 24-sheet poster representing a locomotive going through a forest fire. In addition, he had distributed thousands of small envelopes containing candy hearts.

Novel Idea to Stimulate Business

Boston—L. J. Hacking, of Hodkinson, put over a novel idea in getting his product before the attention of local exhibitors. He classified exhibitors on his mailing list according to the product they used. He then made lettered cards, 10" x 6", carrying the message of Hodkinson product that would be of particular interest to that exhibitor. These cards proved attractive enough for the exhibitor to place them upon his desk as a constant reminder of the product released by Hodkinson.

Getting Co-Operation

Los Angeles—Co-operation was what helped Roy Miller of the California and L. W. Barclay, Goldwynner, when the two worked out a stunt to sell "The Ragged Edge" when it played the California.

The Ko-Fan Co., manufacturers and distributors of soft drinks, distributed 2,000 fountain streamers reading "If You Feel on the Ragged Edge, Drink K-Fan, You'll Like it." These were placed on stands throughout the city, which happened to be doing exceptional business because of the warm weather.

FILM DAILY'S INQUIRING REPORTER

QUESTION

Should the exhibitor retain the right to cut features to meet his own needs?

ANSWERS

William Brandt, M. P. T. O. of New York State—"Absolutely. The exhibitor is the custodian of his own screen."

William O. Hurst, production manager—"I think so. At least until the time comes when features reach the proper length to build up a proper program."

Arthur S. Kane, Associated Exhibitors, Inc—"No. The exhibitor cannot expect to be the judge of production. The producer knows best what treatment a story should get. The exhibitors' business is to present the finished product."

Edward L. Klein, exporter—"Yes. The exhibitor must do something to diversify his program. Features are now running too long."

John C. Ragland, Eastern representative for Harold Lloyd—"I should say not. It's entirely outside of his province."

George Weeks, Famous Players—"No. I don't think the exhibitor, by training, is qualified to cut out portions of pictures."

Finds Price Boosts "All Wrong"
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Los Angeles—In commenting on increased admission prices, the editor of "Camera" says:

"Leading exhibitors are again discussing the proposition of increasing theater admission fees. Just what necessity there is for any advance in ticket prices at this time is not clear. Certainly it would be all wrong to make the movies less democratic and accessible by raising the prices beyond the means of the great masses of people from whom most of the support is drawn. Any higher rates as a general industry policy now would tend to check the growth of the universal popularity of moving pictures and since the trend towards new zeniths of patronage is so pronounced throughout the country at present, it would surely be suicidal to make it seem that mercenary motives are transcending all things else among those responsible for cinema entertainment. If the margin of profit is a little too slight, why not be content if such contentment will be instrumental in promoting the size of the patronage?"

Reviews of the Newest Feature.

Hoot Gibson in
"Out of Luck"
 Universal

As a Whole.....PLEASING LIGHT ENTERTAINMENT WITH SOME AMUSING COMEDY BITS THAT HELP PUT IT OVER DESPITE FLIMSY PLOT.

Star...Thoroughly likeable as unwilling sailor and bashful cowpuncher lover. Should more than please his admirers in this one. Gets his comedy stuff over in great shape, but inclined to overdo it just a trifle as the bashful suitor.

Cast.....Laura La Plante looks very good and is a very satisfactory opposite for Gibson. She gives a good performance. Others DeWitt Jennings, Freeman Wood, Howard Truesdell, Elinor Hancock, Jay Morley.

Type of Story.....No very strong situations but a pleasing plot that does not tax the mind and affords light entertainment. Cowpuncher strikes father of girl he loves in self-defense. Thinking he has killed him he runs away and joins the Navy. Learning that the man is not dead, he wishes to leave the Navy but is forced to stay the period of his enlistment. Girl visits rich aunt who turns out to be wife of captain of ship boy is on, and whose life he saves. After several delays boy and girl are reunited.

Box Office Angle....Should be good where star is a favorite or where light entertainment is desired. Build up program with good short reels. Troubles a green "gob" endures in the navy will bring many laughs.

Exploitation.....Feature the star's name and that of Laura La Plante. They are a pleasing combination that should prove attractive to many. The title should be used in conjunction with catchlines to the effect that "Sam was 'out of luck' but he couldn't get out of the navy." or "He wanted to 'resign' from the navy but they told him he was 'Out of Luck.'"

A trailer of any of the bits on board the battleship, showing Gibson leaning over the rail, or trying to board the boat, or his struggle with the hammock will undoubtedly bring them back. These are the funniest bits in the picture, however, and they may expect more than they see if you show the best bits first.

A good advertising stunt might be to have paper sailor caps given away with suitable lettering.

Direction by.....Edward Sedgwick; lets the first part run too long but the comedy bits are well done, and players well-handled.

Author.....Edward Sedgwick Scenario.....George C. Hull
 Cameraman.....Virgil Miller
 Photography.....Very good
 Locale.....A ranch, U. S. Navy, a home in San Francisco.
 Length.....5,518 feet

David Smith Prod.
"The Midnight Alarm"
 Vitagraph

As a Whole...RAPIDLY MOVING MELODRAMA WITH SEVERAL FINE THRILLS. STORY IS ALWAYS OBVIOUS BUT THE PICTURE IS SURE-FIRE ENTERTAINMENT.

Players....Generally satisfactory. No one does anything unusual but the picture depends on its rapid action and not acting to put it over. Leads played by Alice Calhoun, Percy Marmont, Cullen Landis and Joseph Kilgour.

Type of Story....Out-and-out melodrama with all the usual trimmings. There's an auto collision with a train; an open drawbridge and the hero's saving act; and the final punch, a very well done fire sequence. The "papers" cause all the trouble and Joseph Kilgour the heartaches of the hero and heroine.

Box Office Angle....Holds a decided appeal for the general public. There will be the usual well wishes for the hero and her lover and the curses for the villain.

Exploitation....Treat this for what it is: an old-fashioned melodrama such as was in vogue in the "10-20-30" days. If you attempt to use a dignified exploitation campaign on this, you're sunk. It isn't that kind of picture. Ballyhoo it and circus it and you'll get the business.

Tell your patrons just what kind of a picture it is: that virtue and honesty triumph over the dirty machinations of the villain who seeks the girl's fortune. Get confidential and tell them that they know they all want to see the hero win and the deep-dyed villain get his just deserts.

Tie-up with your fire department and arrange special showings for the force. Do the same with newsboys because Alice Calhoun in the picture appears as a "newsgirl." Maybe you can turn part of one day's receipts to the fire department fund for disabled men and in this way arrange a display of some of the apparatus.

Make a lot of noise about the thrills and above all, don't attempt to disguise the character of the picture. It's regulation melodrama with all the punches the director could get into it and play it up as such.

Direction by....David Smith; has done very well; fire sequence a fine piece of photographic work. Permitted action to slow up after the train wreck but the thrills at the end make amends. Some detail occurs conveniently.

Author.....J. W. Harkins
 Scenario.....C. Graham Baker
 Cameraman.....Steve Smith, Jr.
 Photography.....Generally good.
 Locale.....A Western city.
 Length.....7,000 feet.

James Cruze Prod.
"Hollywood"
 Paramount

As A Whole.....LOOKS AS IF IT SHOULD GO BIGGER THAN "SOULS FOR SALE"—AND THAT'S GOING SOME; SURE-FIRE AND WITH A VAST APPEAL.

Players.....Nearly everyone in the movie colony puts in an appearance in the picture; a long list of real stars and all of them given good prominence even though they are not a definite part of the story; those actually taking part in the story are Hope Brown, Luke Cosgrove, G. K. Arthur, Rubie Lafayette and Eleanor Lawson. A few of the celebrities appearing are Mary and Doug. Chaplin, Pola Negri, Turpin, Lila Lee, Lois Wilson, J. Warren Kerrigan, Agnes Ayres, Jacqueline Logan, Nita Naldi, Stuart Holmes, Cecil DeMille, William DeMille, and others too numerous to mention.

Type of Story.....A winner for the box office; all about Hollywood, its people, pictures, studios and whatever else goes with the making of pictures; a lot of interesting, intimate detail that is going to give the fan crowd thrills galore; small town girl goes to Hollywood, to "break into the movies." She is followed by her whole family and they all get in except her. Laughs are numerous and the dream sequence a riot and the best bit of hokum ever done.

Box Office Angle.....Spells success for the exhibitor. "Hollywood" should be a clean-up. And regardless of whether they have seen "Souls for Sale" or not. This is more strictly and more intimately a look into movieland than the other. They'll eat it up.

Exploitation.....Here is one you can afford to get excited about. "Hollywood" will undoubtedly prove one of the biggest money makers of the year unless the dope is way off.

Picture patrons the world over, and in this country particularly, can't find out enough about Hollywood and its people.

The story is there too. Let them know "Hollywood" isn't propaganda even though it may seem so at the start. Promise them a load of laughs,—real ones. There shouldn't be any exploitation diagnosis necessary. You know best how to get them in. Do it. Better install a new electric S. R. O. sign.

Direction by.....James Cruze; he of "The Covered Wagon" fame adds another to his successes; has done a great job on "Hollywood,"—a picture that affords genuine entertainment and looks like sure-fire box office material.

Author.....Frank Condon
 Scenario.....Tom Geraghty
 Cameraman.....Karl Brown
 Photography.....Splendid Locale.....Hollywood
 Length.....8,197 feet

Marion Davies in
"Little Old New York"
 Producer: Cosmopolitan Prod.

Distributor: Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan
 As a Whole.....STAGE PLAY BEAUTIFULLY PICTURED AND GORGEOUSLY PHOTOGRAPHED; WILL PLEASE ESPECIALLY FOR ITS PICTORIAL VALUE AND STAGE FOLLOWING WILL LIKE

Star.....Does some real troupings young Pat O'Day; handles the role in her own style with character originated by Genevieve Tobin on the stage, slightly changed to her personality. Probably her best performance.

Cast...Fine types all the way through Harrison Ford good as Larry Devan; famous personages of old New York portrayed by Sam Hardy, M. Kerrigan, Courtenay Ford, Mahlon Hamilton, Norval Kellwell, Montague Love, Riley Hanley, Louis Wolheim.

Type of Story....A romance of New York in the early days; delightful atmosphere and picturesque settings make up for rather slight story material; picture is much longer and something should be done with anti-climactic ending that is flash-back of early episode.

Box Office Angle....For anyone interested in the early history of New York when Bowling Green was "great white way," so to speak, "Little Old New York" will be a charming entertainment that they'll welcome heartily.

On the other hand the offering will appeal for its pictorial splendor. They have spent a ton of money to make it good to look at and it surely is. Marion Davies probably the most advertised picture star there is and with the wealth of publicity that will have been given "Little Old New York" before it reaches you, your feet should already have heard enough about it to want to see it.

Exploitation....Exhibitors operating houses in and around New York will find it much easier to interest their patrons in this one than they outside, for here is a picture with a story dealing with New York.

A street stunt might consist of tally-ho with the occupants dressed after the fashion of the players in the picture.

The entrance to your theater might represent the garden as seen in the picture, and if you have women ushers, have them dressed in hoop skirts and bonnets.

Direction by....Sidney Olcott; certainly gone the limit to make the picture beautiful; has injected many fine touches and handled story with historical bits afforded unusually interesting touches attractively.

Author.....Rida Johnson Young
 Scenario.....Luther R. Brown
 Cameraman.....Ira H. Moran
 Photography.....Beautiful
 Locale.....Early days of New York
 Length.....About 10,000 feet

Jack Holt in
"A Gentleman of Leisure"
Paramount

As a Whole..... FAIRLY GOOD CROOK COMEDY THAT OFFERS SOME AMUSEMENT IN SPITE OF AGE OLD FORMULA WITH THE EVER POPULAR AND MUCH SOUGHT AFTER PEARLS.

Director..... Will please his admirers and makes the most of the opportunities afforded by role that doesn't quite measure up to his requirements.

Cast..... Sigrid Holmquist, a pretty head; others Casson Ferguson, Alec Francis, Adele Farrington, Frank Nelson, Alfred Allen, Nadeen Paul and Alice Queensberry.

Type of Story..... Adaptation of John Stapleton and P. G. Wodehouse stage play makes average entertainment; a good summer number that will amuse sufficiently to get it over; has to do with wager of rich fellow that he will win a certain girl as his bride; the plan includes his turning crook and becoming involved with gang really scheming to steal some famous pearls.

Box Office Angle..... The majority will enjoy this one. The story isn't strong nor do the situations get very far from the beaten track of crook stories, but the comedy business saves it most of the time. All right for most audiences.

Exploitation..... Use the star's name prominently. If he has many admirers among your regulars, appeal to them especially in his behalf and promise them he will entertain them with his adventures as an amateur crook in "A Gentleman of Leisure."

In connection with the title you might give the town a laugh and exploit the picture at the same time by having a man togged out as the proverbial "weary willy," going about town with a sandwich sign reading: "I'm not a hobo, just 'A Gentleman of Leisure.' I'll be at the blank theater on (date.)"

In contrast to the above, have a fashionably attired gentleman drive about in a sport car, which a local dealer might be glad to provide, and displaying signs reading "Meet me at the blank theater on (date.) Signed 'A Gentleman of Leisure.'"

Paramount has some attractive ads that can be used prominently, particularly one headed "Chasing the Blues Away," showing Jack Holt running away from an officer and safeguarding the much coveted picture of the girl he wagers to marry.

Direction by..... Joseph Henabery; appears to have gotten the most out of the story and manipulation of comedy business has helped to cover up shortcomings of story.

Authors..... John Stapleton and P. G. Wodehouse.

Scenario..... Jack Cunningham and Anthony Coldeway.

Cameraman..... Faxon Dean

Photography..... Good

Locale..... Long Island country home

Length..... 5,096 feet

Roy Stewart in
"The Love Brand"
Universal

As a Whole.... A PLEASING PROGRAM PICTURE THAT WILL SATISFY THE AVERAGE AUDIENCE; COMBINES WESTERN STUFF WITH PLENTY OF ROMANCE. TYPES WELL SELECTED THROUGHOUT.

Star.... Well suited to part of ranch owner. Exhibits some good horsemanship and is entirely adequate otherwise.

Cast.... Has been very well chosen as to types. Margaret Landis opposite Stewart; others Wilfred North, Arthur Hull, Sydney De Grey, Marie Wells.

Type of Story.... Contains pleasing romantic incidents with beautiful backgrounds of cattle ranch in southern California. Story deals with three Easterners who plan to get possession of the ranch knowing there is oil on it. The girl, however, really falls in love with the owner and when he is informed of the plot afoot, brands herself to prove her love.

Box Office Angle.... Should prove suitable for the average theater either in combination with another feature or with good selection of short reels; especially suitable for audiences who like westerns.

Exploitation.... Feature the star's name in conjunction with the title, which is a fairly attractive one, and if you have played his last picture "Burning Words" and it went well, you might tell them this has the same star and director.

Play up the fact that the locations are extremely beautiful, showing the large expanses of the cattle country in Southern California. The Spanish hacienda looks like the real thing and not like one constructed for a picture. A lobby display of scenes from the film should attract, as should a trailer showing either the shot of the cattle rustling or a bit of the chase after the thieves, or the scene in the cabin where the girl is ordered to cook for the first time in her life.

You might also use catchlines to this effect: "Do women love men who order them around?" See "The Love Brand"—the story of a society girl who branded herself to prove her love."

Should you care to boost it any further you might use as a stunt a man in cowboy get-up, having him either ride or walk through the streets with a banner on his back which reads: "I am looking for the girl who branded herself for love. Have you seen her? If not, see 'The Love Brand' at the blank theater."

Direction by.... Stuart Paton; usually entirely satisfactory. Girl's entrance in ballroom scene not as well done as it might have been.

Author..... Raymond L. Schrock

Scenario..... Adrian Johnson

Cameraman..... William Thornley

Photography..... Extremely good.

Locale..... A ranch in Lower California.

Length..... 4,832 feet.

"Mignon"

As a Whole... PICTURIZED FOREIGN VERSION OF THE OPERA WITH TITLES TAKEN FROM THE LIBRETTO; PICTORIAL BEAUTY ITS BEST FEATURE

Players.... A title designates that the film was "made abroad with internationally known stars of stage and opera," but no names are given nor faces recognized. The girl in the title role gives a pretty fair performance but overworks her eyelashes in registering emotions. The gypsy types are excellent, and the rest of the cast equally well-chosen.

Type of Story.... A combination of tragedy and drama written by Goethe, with the music by Ambrose Thomas. Deals with troubles of a girl whose parents commit suicide upon learning they are half brother and sister. The girl is stolen by gypsies in her childhood, but after many years is at last happy with man she loves. The period is in the eighteenth century.

Box Office Angle..... Taken in the Swiss Alps and on the Riviera. You can promise really exquisite natural settings and a theme that is acknowledgedly a classic, so this ought to appeal to a so-called "highbrow" clientele, although to uneducated audiences it may prove boring.

Exploitation.... The complete musical score of the opera has been prepared and used in conjunction with the picture will afford a treat to music lovers, who probably will find the most enjoyment in the picture.

If you decide to play "Mignon," get after the folks in your neighborhood who are lovers of the opera by advertising the fact that this is the picturized version of Goethe's masterpiece, gaining in charm by having been taken on location given in the story. Proper exploitation should get your crowd interested. If there are any "better film" movements in your town by all means perfect a tie-up.

A phonograph in your lobby with records from the opera should attract attention, and you could have a girl dressed as a gypsy to change the records.

A woman dressed in a powdered wig and hoop-skirts of the eighteenth century going about distributing librettos of the opera might also serve to attract attention to your theater.

Direction by.... Not credited. Continuity might be smoother, and titles taken from the librettos are confusing.

Author..... Goethe

Scenario by..... Not credited

Cameraman..... L. Kutzleb

Photography..... Very good

Locale..... The Swiss Alps and the Riviera.

Length..... About 8,000 feet

Short Subjects

"Dipping in the Deep"—Howe-Hodge-Podge—Educational
An Entertaining Magazine

Type of production...1 reel magazine
Always novel and entertaining this issue of Lyman-Howe's "Hodge-Podge" offers cooling scenes taken in many places. Among these are scenes of folks in swimming in different pools and lakes, some exquisite shots of Glacier Falls in the Rocky Mountains, and some views of Iceberg Lake taken in July, which shows small icebergs floating all over its waters. Another interesting bit is called miniature movies, and consists of about a half-dozen tiny bits of film all moving at the same time. The finishing subject consists of some trick-motion camerawork, on the streets of Washington, D. C.

"Nip and Tuck"—Sennett—Pathe
Has Some Good Laughs

Type of production...2 reel comedy
This is the first of a series of Sennett two-reel comedies directed by Roy Del Ruth, under the supervision of F. Richard Jones, to be released by Pathe. In addition to a cast that includes Harry Gribbon, Kewpie Morgan, Alberta Vaughn, Mildred June and Billy Bevan, is a dog called Cameo that runs away with most of the laughs in the picture. He is one of the brightest pups in the business. There is a poker game sequence with the dog sitting between two of the players who are both cheating. One of these men is the dog's master and Cameo sees to it that he gets the best of the deal every time. If your folks want to see a really clever dog perform in a most enjoyable way, they will like this one immensely. There is also a funny bit of business when the three gamblers who are running away with the bag of money get in front of a lot of policemen who are running a race. The gamblers think they are being chased by the cops and a good laugh ensues.

"Oranges and Lemons"—Hal Roach
Pathe

Usual Knock-About Stuff
Type of production...1 reel comedy
Stan Laurel's latest shows that industrious young man at work on an orange grove. The usual knock-about stuff ensues with Laurel being chased all over the lot and the factory by the irate boss of the packing squad. Innumerable oranges are squashed and thrown around, but it is done in a lively manner with the punches coming in quick succession, and those who enjoy seeing men being punched in the stomach and hit in the eye, etc.—and it really is done in a ludicrous way—will find a good measure of entertainment in "Oranges and Lemons."

"The Pearl Divers"—Aesop Fable—Pathe
A Pleasing Cartoon

Type of production...1 reel animated cartoon
The moral of this fable is "You can't keep a good man down," and it means in this case—down at the bottom of the sea. Mr. Mouse is sent to Davy Jones' locker in a diver's suit by Tommy Cat, who remains on shore to pump down the necessary oxygen. Mr. Mouse finds the oysters all sleeping peacefully in little white beds, and he hates to wake them up to get the pearls he knows lurks beneath their shells, so after many adventures he just takes them, beds and all and returns to the upper regions, much to the surprise of Tommy Cat, who thought he would never see him again. There is plenty of good humor in this one.

"Felix Calms His Conscience"—Pat Sullivan—Winkler
An Entirely Pleasing Cartoon

Type of production...1 reel animated cartoon
This latest cartoon from the pen of Pat Sullivan is a thoroughly entertaining number. It unfolds its little story of Felix and his troublesome conscience in a sprightly and amusing fashion that has a note of freshness in its handling. Particularly cute is the little "tough" cat from the Bowery, who spits with gusto and hitches up his belt before approaching his lady-love. Felix is most human in his cat-like emotions and will be liked anywhere.

In the Courts

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Detroit—Edward C. Beatty has filed action in the circuit court asking that the lease of the Desmond theater given by the Port Huron Theater Co., to C. E. Cady, W. McLaren, H. L. Weil, H. E. Lip and Glenn Croos, be declared void and also asks for an injunction restrain the officers of the Port Huron organization from making further arrangements under the lease.

Beatty, who is connected with the Butterfield interests and the Bijou Theater Co., charges that the defendant carried on negotiations with the Bijou company for a lease of the Desmond. The Bijou company, he claims was to pay the Desmond owners an annual rental and also a third of the profits. Instead of leasing the Desmond to the Bijou, which had been negotiating for the house, it is alleged the president and secretary of the Port Huron organization leased the house to the Cady interests for higher rental but with no provision for a part of profits.

Ind'p'ts Have Trouble

Pellerin testified that pictures can't make money without key city showings. In particular, he declared he found that theaters using the First National product in the key cities are hard to sell because there is little open time. He claimed he had to get higher prices from the small town were denied, while, on the contrary, small town exhibitors wanted key town exploitation and when they didn't get, demanded lower rentals on independent product in order to make good some of the losses met through booking pictures in groups. Pellerin testified as an independent distributor and a former employee of E. H. Hulsey. He testified that in the fall of 1919, the advances in prices for the Paramount output was so greatly increased that Hulsey refused to meet them and was joined in this action by Tom Boland, P. L. Levy, Saul Harris, and W. J. Lytle, all of them operating first-run theaters in key cities in Arkansas, Oklahoma, and Texas. Hulsey and his associates at that time owned the Metro and First National Pictures franchise. They then bought independent productions for distribution through Metro to fill the breach made by the loss of the Paramount output.

Pellerin in describing some of his troubles as a distributor, stated that he sold his pictures in 1920 to Southern Enterprises, Inc., and that $5,000 worth was never played or paid for without any reason given by William Saal, Southern's booker. Pellerin claimed that this caused him to lose additional revenue through the loss of subsequent runs. In 1921, he said, a large number of sales was made, of which $2,500 in bookings were never collected. He said his serial, "Cap'n Kidd," was sold for San Antonio and only the first episode used. This was about 60 days ago. Pellerin admitted that Al E. Fair, director of theaters for Southern Enterprises, Inc., in this section and Rocky Newton were much more fair than the former administration. He testified that Saal would hold pictures for extra days, play them in additional houses and then refuse additional compensation, saying,

"You can cancel if that isn't satisfactory."

Fair was the next witness. He testified that next season's product, or a large portion of it is now being bought in New York and that he himself would purchase independent product locally when he could not so through any central headquarters in New York. He was asked if he knew the details of the purchases already made, but declared he did not, except that he knew the pictures already bought totaled about 50 for all of the towns in the circuit. Fair declared that under this buying system dates and names of theaters that were to use the product were to be filled in at the Dallas headquarters. Here Examiner Fuller for the Government brought forth a special form of contract used by Southern Enterprises, which lists all theaters in all towns with the subject or series written above the towns and theaters that were to use them. Fuller asked Fair how Dallas could select dates and pictures, if this kind of a contract was being used.

Fair then explained that before product is purchased two conventions are held, one covering Oklahoma and Arkansas and another for Texas. At each, he said, all house managers are present to give opinions on the kind of product desired. Then a general convention is held in New York, Fair continued, of which Harold B. Franklin, head of the theater department of Famous Players was in charge. Franklin considered all of the various opinions and then based his buying policy on that information. In this way, according to Fair, the buying was done with the full knowledge and co-operation of the field force. Fuller was trying to establish that it was more advisable for a local manager to select pictures for his audience than a manager in Dallas or one in New York. Fair declared that all contracts were flexible and that adjustments are always made by co-operating with the exchanges.

While on the stand, he produced a statistical memorandum covering theater operations. He declared that the best pictures were selected for the Palace, Dallas and for the other theaters, according to the product's availability. He showed that the Palace, in a 59 weeks' period and using one picture a week had shown 42 Paramounts and 17 outside pictures selected from United Artists, Metro, Universal and the Warners; that the Old Mill, Dallas had used 70 pictures in a 59 weeks' period and of that number, there were 25 Paramounts, and 45 outside pictures. In Fort Smith, Ark., where there are two competitive theaters, 36 outside pictures were used. Fair declared there was no attempt to exclude all product but Paramount from the Southern Enterprises' houses but said the selections were made according to merit as judged by the buying committee.

American Films Abroad

The Department of Commerce states that only 10% of the entire films shown in Esthonia were made in America, while 85% were filmed in Germany. There are 51 theaters in Esthonia. However, in Japan the situation is totally different. American films are well liked in this country with all the larger distributors well represented in Tokyo, three of them maintaining offices in the capitol city. It was announced a few weeks ago from a different source that motion pictures rank second in the list of best liked recreations in the country, the public story teller getting first honors. More American films are shown in Italy than any other kind, 40% comes from this country, 20% from Germany and 15% from France. The amount of pictures shown in Italy can be estimated by the fact that there are 2,200 houses in the country and 4,000 private halls where films are occasionally shown.

Critics Endorse Thomas Dixon's first!

"THE MARK OF THE BEAST"

MORNING TELEGRAPH: "There's nothing in the world," says Oscar Wilde in "Lady Windermere's Fan" "like the devotion of a married woman. It's a thing no married man knows anything about." Just so, there's nothing in the world more enjoyable than good acting; it's a thing no picture-goer seems to know anything about. Our best actors, when they start at all, never star very successfully. There is no featured player in "The Mark of the Beast" by Thomas Dixon. The result is that the players work for collective excellence instead of individual distinction. The performance is one of the things which makes the film worth seeing.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD: A picture that while it will interest higher class of patrons from its psychological side has plenty of thrills and punch scenes to hold its own with the average audience. The entertainment qualities of the picture are enhanced by an excellent cast. In fact good showmanship is evident throughout.

EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW: "The Mark of the Beast" is a film that has, and noticeably shows, concentrated action into an agreeable number of feet with the result that the picture moves swiftly along and rapidly rises to a brilliant climax. He has not sought to play up any particular stars or favorites, but has accomplished a remarkably good all-around production.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS: It is built like a play that sweeps forward with a real crescendo of events which culminate in a tense climax. The characters are sharply drawn. The scenes carry much suspense and it is compact with interesting sequences.

EXHIBITORS HERALD: "The Mark of the Beast" will be found good entertainment. The atmosphere inclines to be tense and tragic—with a mystery involving the death of the crook of the piece near the end—and the whole is acted in a sincere manner by a well chosen cast. The climax, where the crook is mysteriously stabbed and the doctor is called upon to save his life, after the crook has maltreated his bride, makes the popular appeal where tense drama is sought.

THE FILM DAILY: Very unusual story with development containing one mystery after another; has fine dramatic acting and action. Contains splendidly sustained interest and you never know from one minute to the other what will happen next.

Thomas Dixon's picture is certainly entitled to be termed unusual, for it is all of that. The picture is decidedly out of the ordinary, and if you know that is what your patrons want you can go to it on this one.

HARRISON'S REPORTS: It is seldom that a producer has the courage to get away from the regular picture-hokum path, and explore new fields. In "The Mark of the Beast," Mr. Dixon has shown such a courage; he has written the story with the idea of appealing to man's intellect and in an equal measure to his emotions, rather than to his emotions alone. And he has succeeded, for through the character of Ann Page he has given us an insight into woman's psychology such as no other author has given us up to the present time. He has been able to show convincingly that the strange actions of a woman who has been fascinated by a man unworthy of her were caused by her subconscious mind.

Holds the interest undiminished from the beginning to the end, is thrilling, and appeals to the emotions of pathos.

SCREEN OPINIONS: "THE MARK OF THE BEAST"
(Class A-a) 100%

High mark in screencraft attained by Thomas Dixon in production of thoughtful and sensational elements.

One of the most remarkable screen productions that has been made is "The Mark of the Beast," written and directed by Thomas Dixon, author of "The Clansman," on which "The Birth of a Nation" was based. Mr. Dixon's effort in combined motion picture authorship and direction is clearly the result of much intelligent thought on the subject, and it is to be hoped that this is only the forerunner of more pictures of the same calibre from the same source.

This picture may be used as a special by billing it as something new and sensational in moving picture production.

Scaramouche—Metro Plans to Turn Picture Over to Regular First-Runs by January

Metro organization is making to launch 23 road shows for "Scaramouche," the new Rex Ingram production on which a large sum of money has been spent. Generally speaking, the special engagements will be launched in September with the New York premiere, scheduled, at the 44th St. theater. It is expected that the legitimate first runs will extend over a greater period than from September to February and that by the first of the year, the regular first-run picture accounts will secure the production.

In Garrick, Philadelphia?
Special to THE FILM DAILY

Philadelphia—It is reported here that "Scaramouche" will open at the Garrick or Chestnut St. Opera House early in September at $2 top, which it will be road-showed in large cities at the same price.

"Ashes" Opens Tonight

Anna Talmadge's new production, "Ashes of Vengeance" will open at the Garrick tonight for an indefinite period. The picture was produced to give a full evening's entertainment.

De Mille to Make "Beaucaire"
Special to THE FILM DAILY

Los Angeles—In all likelihood, Cecil De Mille will direct "Beaucaire" which Famous has purchased from Douglas Fairbanks.

Increases Capital
Special to THE FILM DAILY

Los Angeles—The Paramount Amusement Co., of New York, chartered a capital of $10,000, has increased this to $100,000.

Illinois Town Drops "Blues"
Special to THE FILM DAILY

Chicago, Ill.—The town of Sandwich, Ill., here has repealed its Sunday closing law by a vote of 490 to 296. The theater ran a month there before village officials discovered the law prohibited it.

Sees a Fight in Michigan

Every well known film man who has been watching legislative activity in various states expressed the opinion on Saturday that the situation in Ludington, Mich., will even develop into a state-wide fight at a state over the "blue" law question.

Again Percentage

BY JOE RICKARDS
Rickards and Nace, Phoenix, Ariz.

I surely will answer your submitted Aronson story for it requires discussion from the other end of the business to counteract such a proposition which is basically wrong from every standpoint of the exhibitor.

First—What chance would the exhibitor have to check the negative cost of a picture? Would he not be compelled to accept the estimate cost of such a product and would not past experience prove that the padded cost of pictures is one of the greatest reasons of producer failures?

Second—What equitable basis could there possibly be for a producer to determine what each individual exhibitor should be allowed for his individual ability to put over a picture?

Right there is the stumbling block of the Aronson scheme as it occurs to me. I trust that you will not temper my observation on this with the thought that ego enters into this explanation.

I want to ask you to look this one over. I am citing our own experience as it is correct and really happened. We bought on the open market—being a closed town—as he terms the brand, a picture. It was a feature on a well known program. It started by playing the "key" city of the district and took what might be rightly called a flop. It did not get nearly as much money on its first run as its owners and the first run theater managers thought it should gross.

Now we thought we saw in the picture possibilities overlooked by the first run people and bought it. Paid a legitimate price for it without haggling. The exchange was more than satisfied. We, as I, say saw in the picture a value that they did not seem to discern. We put behind it a campaign of publicity of our own conception. We were the only account in the entire district which did the business to warrant the price asked by the exchange. Not only that but we did a splendid business with it, in fact a phenomenal business. So big did the picture gross that a salesman handling the product asked permission of our firm to use intact the publicity campaign in a neighboring city.

Now get this one. The exchange sold the neighbor the picture for $250 guarantee. Then they were to share at 50-50 over a gross of $1,000 and the neighboring exhibitor told us and told the exchange man that there was not a chance to go over that amount as his house exploited under his own plan could not gross that much.

The salesman, a bright young fellow handled the publicity campaign taken without a change from our own city and the result was the gross was big enough to turn a net rental of $630 to the exchange where the house manager with his past performance under his own method of exploitation was cock-sure that $1000 would cover the best gross that the picture could do.

Am I making my point plain to you when I ask why should my firm have been compelled to give the exchange any part over a fair rental of the excellent business of that picture. The first run account failed to get it over. No other exhibitor as it happens in this particular case did get the picture over with the possible exception of us and what would have occurred had we been tied up on percentage arrangement such as Mr. Aronson suggests.

We would have been penalized for our own ability to exploit it. You could not dope it any other way. If we had have lost money with the picture would that same exchange have gone down into their pockets and shared the loss with us? Not a chance. They would have resorted to that oft repeated excuse "you did not get behind it. You had the goods but you did not sell them." In this case we did sell them. Sold them big. But we did not get a particle of help from the exchange. In fact the

Allied Will Disband

United Artists Going Back to Original Policy—Will, However, Annex Box-Office Names

It is only a matter of time before the Allied Producers and Distributor Corp., the subsidiary company of United Artists will disband. In certain distributing quarters, this fact has been known for some little time and it was because of this that THE FILM DAILY, through its West Coast representative sought confirmation of the reports.

Douglas Fairbanks is the authority for the statement that Allied will not assume any more outside product and that the subsidiary company will be permitted to gradually fall into the discard when the present releases and contracted product finish out their release life.

Continuing Mr. Fairbanks stated in Los Angeles that United Artists will still keep the door open for big stars or producers with recognized box-office value to join the company on the same basis as the original

And What He Thinks of Them—Montague Glass Presents a Few Thoughts

Montague Glass in the current issue of "Life" has some interesting things to say about authors and motion pictures. Here are his thoughts:

"Somehow or another, the recent moving picture convention held under the joint auspices of the Author's League and Miss Fannie Hurst, leaves one with the impression that the operation of a well-known author selling a manuscript to a moving picture manufacturer has points of resemblance to the usual operation for appendicitis. That is to say, the patient—I mean the author—is strapped down to a stretcher, an ether cone is pressed over his mouth and nose, and after anesthesia is complete, an appropriate incision is made in the region of his bank account and twenty thousand dollars is inserted.

organizers, Pickford, Fairbanks, Griffith and Chaplin. This is understood to mean that each additional member if there are any will become financially interested in the distributing company.

As a matter of fact, it would not come as any great surprise if the contracts entered upon by Allied for product be turned over to other distributors and the disintegration of the company occur faster than Fairbanks indicated. When Allied was formed, the popular reason attributed to the organization of the company was the fact that Charlie Chaplin did not want what he termed mediocre stars placed in the same category as the original "Big Four." To placate him, then, the subsidiary company was formed. It is now understood that Chaplin is again dissatisfied with the kind of pictures that have gone out through Allied.

It will be recalled that Mack Sennett has arranged his releases with Allied. This was done on the coast with Pickford and Fairbanks and yet under the original agreement, Sennett was to work on a running arrangement without any stipulation as to the number of pictures he was to make for Allied. Whether his release bears any weight on the general situation remains to be seen.

It is a matter of the exhibitor in so many cases that they are without number. Recently an exchange man in Los Angeles said to me personally.

"Our quota calls for more money in many cases than the individual spot can possibly pay. In others the quota is far under what is right but 'New York says.'"

And there you have it. New York a 1000 miles from the seat and perhaps four thousand in this case says Dokesville must pay us $300 for "Joe Bush the Pinhead" our new picture—New York says it. The swivel chair Solomon who knows only where Dokesville is, by the red tack in the sales map, without a chance to dope local conditions or sight at local happenings of the time says it must be so. The exchange man, hired for his intelligence but not permitted to use it must exact from Peter to pay Paul and there you have the reason for Mr. Aronson's attempt to find a solution for the most perplexing problem of the industry.

You cannot measure the ability of an exhibitor by a percentage proposition equitable to all alike. Let's take a real case right out of last year's business. In some manner known only to the trade the gross of any percentage picture played at this time becomes the common property of all the exchanges.

Last winter in the good season in our best house we played a fine picture. It had been exploited in the key city in a superb manner. It had been served with a pretentious prologue. It had been run for several months at $1.65 top. Its fame had spread to every center. We guaranteed that picture a fat rental and agreed by reason of the public demand in our baliwick to view it, a fifty-fifty split. We exceeded the guarantee by over $1000 and naturally gave the exchange a mighty fat rental. We were more than satisfied. The picture had the earning value. We and the exchange made morny. Now in the course of a few weeks another concern is sending out from New York fervid wires on the success of their picture. It has not had its local key city first run. It is to open in a house in the key city at the same prices that we ask for our regular admission not advanced prices and when I go to make a bid for the picture I am confronted with the gross of the picture from the other exchange. Not only that but I have a fat chance with the "hop" telegrams in front of the exchange man to convince him that His picture will not start to gross half or in this case even one-third of what the picture he holds up my gross on did for me. There you have your percentage plan. That exchange manager was almost inclined to become good and sore at me. But despite the fact that his picture eventually opened at the key city house selected and lasted two weeks instead of six months as did the one I played at $1.10 top in my outside city, he is still of the opinion that I am holding out on him when I refuse to fall for the inspiration he obtained from the hop wires from his sales manager in New York.

No, Mr. Aronson who wrote a mighty fine story on waste in the studios if I recall it right, is off at logger heads with the exhibitor in his plan for percentage. You cannot bring the exhibitor to a percentage level. He is or is not a go getter. If he takes what the other fellow failed on and cashes he must not be made to pay for the failure of his fellow exhibitor any more than one clothing merchant who out sells and out thinks his competitor must be penalized for the ability to think.

Percentage is not the angle. In the days when the legitimate stage launched a production the public refused to buy it because it did not belong. Mr. Legitimate Manager put it into the storehouse and produced another one. If the picture producer makes a flivver his sales force starts out to choke it down the necks of the exhibitor and he will lie like a gas meter to plant it.

The reason for the closed town is too apparent in the forcing of exhibitors to play on a program bought sight-un-seen the dead failures. Is it any wonder that exhibitors finding themselves surfeited with duds on a program they cannot duck get together and try to bargain for the sure-fire stuff when there is plenty to supply them and when they know that by picking the cream they can and will make money.

It will take more than Percentage to stop the bad leak in this business.

Authors

"Certainly no writer of reputation, free from ether and in his full senses, would entrust his delicate works of art to a moving picture manufacturer, when the entire writing world has record notice, as the lawyers say, that a story written for limited circulation must of necessity be altered if it is to be exhibited to an audience of thirty million people. It is, therefore, charitable to believe that neither Miss Fannie Hurst nor Mr. Basil King ever consciously negotiated with a moving picture manufacturer for the sale of a story, and since at the convention they so roundly denounced moving picture manufacturers, it necessarily follows that they will never sell another story to a moving picture manufacturer for any consideration, which of course leaves the entire moving picture industry static and gasping for air."

Shut Down Friday

Industry, Particularly in New York, to Honor Harding's Memory—Theaters Closed Until 6 P. M.

As a token of respect to the memory of the late President Harding, movie and picture houses in New York will be closed on Friday until six o'clock. This was decided upon yesterday at a meeting in the office of Augustus Thomas which Will H. Hays of the M. P. T. O. and Charles L. O'Reilly of T. O. C. C. were present.

Most businesses will be suspended that day, which while not declared a holiday will witness a general cessation of commercial activities in honor of the dead President. All of the important film companies will be down. Famous Players will be down all of its branches, not only in this country but in Canada and in other foreign lands as well. The Paramount theaters everywhere will be closed from one to five o'clock in the afternoon. There is a possibility that the exchanges of some of the companies will be open to take care of shipments but it is certain that the most urgent kind of business will be handled.

No action, so far as can be learned, has been decided upon so far as the exchanges in general are concerned. It is an assured fact that a good many exhibitors, acting as individuals, will keep closed all or at least part of the funeral day. Sydney S. Lichtman of the M. P. T. O. is now in Atlantic City conferring with his executive committee. THE FILM DAILY telegraphed him to learn

Southern Enterprises Under Fire

By Exhibitors in the Southwest

Tactics Assailed at Dallas Hearing—Alleged Operations of "Wrecking Crew" Described—Showmen Declare They Had No Choice in Booking "Super 39" Series

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Dallas, Tex.—Testimony by exhibitors in the Southwest against Southern Enterprises, Inc., as developed at the hearing of the Federal Trade Commission here was in the main damaging to the Paramount subsidiary.

The celebrated, alleged "wrecking crew" of Southern Enterprises was injected into the record at frequent intervals despite the protest of Robert Swaine, of counsel for Famous Players, who called the existence of such a body mere gossip and the term one of opprobrium. C. J. Musselman of Paris, Tex.; H. S. Cole of Ranger, Tex., and F. R. Newman, of Greenville, Tex., all testified that they knew of the activities of such a group of men and several of them named its personnel as follows: W. R. Lynch, Louis L. Dent, Al Russel and Charles G. Branham. Its functions were described as efforts to destroy the morale of theater owners and its policy one of rule or ruin.

The testimony revealed the fact that efforts were made to buy Musselman, Cole and Newman on threats that Southern Enterprises, Inc., would build opposition houses and take Paramount service away from these exhibitors in their various towns. It was testified that in Ranger and in Greenville, this threat was actually carried out and that Cole's unfinished contract was cancelled. After advanced prices had been agreed to and Newman could not renew, the testimony showed, Musselman in Sherman, Cole in Ranger and Newman in Greenville then waged an admission price war. Newman claimed that he was prosperous until Southern Enterprises entered Greenville and when they retired, he said he was ready to quit.

Ed Foy, owner of neighborhood theaters in Dallas, testified that he cut his admission prices and was refused a new Paramount contract unless he restored prices to the former scale. The evidence shows that the Queen, a downtown theater maintained by the Enterprises is showing Paramount pictures second run for a dime.

Theodore Polmanakos testified that he had leased the opera house in Greenville on the promise of Harry Owens, branch manager that he

FILM DAILY'S INQUIRING REPORTER

QUESTION

Should the length of the average feature be confined to five reels?

ANSWERS

Joe Brandt, C. B. C. Film Sales Corp.—Five, in the main, but never more than six. If pictures are longer, there won't be a sufficient turnover at the box-office.

Earl W. Hammons, Educational Films Exchanges, Inc.—"It depends on the subject. It is true, however, that probably one time out of a hundred does it warrant greater footage."

Irving M. Lesser, Principal Pictures Corp.—"Certainly. So that the exhibitor can diversify his program. The absolute limit should be six reels, for in that footage any story can be told and told well."

Gerritt J. Lloyd, D. W. Griffith, Inc.—"Impossible. The characters cannot be delineated properly. At the risk of some boredom to the public, the feature should be longer. When the climax arises, the characters will then mean something."

Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld—Rialto, Rivoli and Criterion Theaters—"No. A good story with sufficient plot complications cannot be told in five reels. While I admit that many features are padded, it is wrong to set an absolute limit of five reels."

J. D. Williams, Ritz-Carlton Pictures, Inc.—"Yes. The public is getting tired of five reels of the same personality in the same kind of story. There should be room for a weekly and a scenic so that if the feature isn't liked, something else is.

Supreme Court Justice Mullan has appointed Samuel W. Levine receiver of the films, "Ngunba" and "The Red Trail," in a suit of the John Hagenbeck Films of Berlin, against the Acron Sales Corp. and he will have control of the releasing of the films in the future. The suit was brought on the ground that the Acron company agreed to pay $5,500 for the films, and paid only $1,374. When a note for $458 became due Acron refused to pay but later gave $200 more. The complaint also named as defendants a number of agencies throughout the country which had received prints, including S. P. Film Exchange, Harthill Pictures, Supreme Film, Progress Pictures, Standard Film and S. & S. Film Co.

Supreme Court Justice Tierney has signed a judgment in a suit brought by the Vivian Martin Pictures, Inc., against J. F. & M. B. Construction Co. owner of the plant leased by Vivian Martin Pictures at 75 Mills St., Astoria. The complaint alleged that in order to induce the plaintiff to execute a lease on the property from June 1, 1920, to March 31, at $22,500, the defendant paid $1,000 to the plaintiff's then general manager, Thomas F. Walker "with fraudulent design to influence his conduct." The complaint alleged that the $22,500 was paid and that the actual value of the lease was only $11,250. The plaintiff sued for the difference. The court found that the $1,000 had been paid to Walker, and for that reason held that the lease was invalid and the plaintiff was entitled to the return of the money. The court also found, however, that the value of the premises for the period was $22,499, and directed the defendant to pay plaintiff $1 and costs of the suit.

T. O. C. C.

COMMONWEALTH FILM CORPORATION congratulates the THEATRE OWNERS CHAMBER OF COMMERCE on the resolution condemning the booking of pictures "sight unseen"; pictures on paper only.

Your resolution was exactly right—and will be so considered by any motion picture business man who views the interests of the industry in a broad sense, and not in a selfish sense.

Our trade practice conforms now and always has conformed to the spirit of your resolution.

We are mailing this week a catalogue of our 1923-1924 pictures. We are now offering the first 12. Ten of these are in our offices and no exhibitor need sign a contract without viewing them. In fact, we urge screen examination.

The other 2 in the first 12 will be ready for viewing in 30 days. No exhibitor need sign for them now in order to obtain the other 10.

We don't want to shout "I told you so," but it is a fact that we have for years advised our customers to buy only on screen examination, and we are happy that the T. O. C. C., representing the best class of theatre owners in this territory have confirmed our opinion.

Hearing Ends in Dallas

could have Paramount pictures. He declared that he never got them and finally sold the theater to Southern Enterprises taking a loss of $1800 on a year's operation. He claimed that the "wrecking crew" had approached his landlord.

Boss Matter Up Again

Barney Resnick, of McAlester, Okla., then took the stand and described his relations with J. C. Boss and Southern Enterprises, Inc. He said Boss had turned over his theater to a man named Adams and that Adams has gotten out owing some rent. Then Boss, according to Resnick endeavored to raise funds to protect his equity in the equipment. W. R. Lynch then visited Resnick and sent him to Dallas to see E. H. Hulsey. It then developed that a lease was made, Resnick continued, upon a consideration of $750 paid to Resnick and then released back to him on the understanding that the house was not to be used as a theater. The theater was thus removed as a competition house, Resnick testified.

Santikos of San Antonio claimed that Paramount practiced unfair advertising against him. He also claimed that his contracts in Waco were endangered when Southern Enterprises secured a theater there and then sought to break the agreement with him.

Apparently, Government counsel turned his attack along different lines and attempted to show that exhibitors do not exercise a choice of selection in booking from Paramount. Testimony of H. B. Robb of the R. and R. Circuit; Cole of Ranger, Newman of Greenville, Tom Boland of Oklahoma City, and John Paxton of Paris, Tex., showed that they had to book all or none from Paramount. They all declared that they would have rejected from ten to twenty-five per cent had they a choice in the matter. Robb said he would have bought only twenty-five per cent of the "Super 39." He said he considered Paramount's releases had a higher average than those of any other organization for first class theaters. He added that he would get "Hollywood" on his "39" contract and at the price agreed upon and added that he considered Paramount fair except in the matter of block bookings.

Tom Boland, the Oklahoma city theater owner was the next witness. He told of a meeting in Dallas at which were present P. C. Levy, of Ft. Worth; W. J. Lytle of San Antonio; Saul Harris of Little Rock, and E. H. Hulsey of Dallas. These men formed the United Amusement Co. to protect themselves, but, Boland declared, he was not clear on the purposes and plans of the organization and so secured a refund on his stock subscription. Boland testified that he had used Paramounts solid in Oklahoma City from the beginning up to 1919 and then found he couldn't pay the prices asked.

Local Exchangemen Called

A number of local exchange managers were then called to the stand. P. K. Johnston, Fox manager testified that he sold in block and in series to the Enterprises. He declared that twenty-five per cent of his current contracts, had been played and that he expected all of the pictures contracted for to be played before the season ended. He said he has had trouble in getting play dates from exhibitors but that he can get good revenue from pictures as old as 18 months. All exchanges, in his mind, suffer from the exhibitor evil of over buying. He said he can sell pictures of merit without finding it necessary to go to Southern Enterprises.

L. E. Harrington, former Fox manager described his experiences in selling pictures to Hulsey and Stuart of Southern Enterprises and his business dealings with William Saal on play dates. Of the 1921-1922 product he said about a ratio of six out of every ten pictures had been played and the others not paid for. He said the Fox account in Galveston was A. B. Mendel who is in opposition to Southern Enterprises. He said Saal had wanted the product for Galveston but that he refused to book it for other towns unless he got Galveston as well.

H. J. Bayley, testified as manager of Vitagraph. On "Dead Men Tell No Tales," Bayley said Saal, the Enterprises booker wanted all the towns or none. When he left Vitagraph in 1922, Bayley said four or five subjects still remained to be played. On cross-examination, Bayley admitted there was trouble with all exhibitors in getting play dates. It was brought out that the Palace and Rialto were first-runs in San Antonio and opposition to each other as well.

R. L. Brown then took the stand as Select manager for 1918-1922. He said he couldn't get any first-runs, one reason because there was no open time. He said he had sold most of the product to Southern Enterprises through Saal and that part of the pictures had been played. He estimated that there were from 14 to 20 productions unplayed over the whole circuit. Brown said he needed the key city runs to make his quota on the various pictures and admitted that it was true a small percentage of his product at that time did not warrant a first-run.

J. E. Huey, present Vitagraph manager, testified that he had been made a number of percentage offers for his product, but that he had refused them all because the terms were not satisfactory. He wanted a flat rental basis for that reason. Despite that, Huey said he had secured new contracts in key cities and sold only one picture to Southern Enterprises. He went into detail relative to this situation and said both parties had not gotten together partly because they could not agree on the value of the product. He said that the loss of the key city runs and the exploitation attendant thereupon defeated business in the outlying sections when the picture got into distribution. Huey said he thought there were not enough theaters to show the industry's output and for that reason, where a distributor owned a theater he had an advantage over his competitor.

Fair Again on Stand

Al E. Fair, director of Southwest theaters for the Enterprises, was then re-examined. He said his company owned fifty per cent of the stock of the San Antonio Amusement Co., of which W. J. Lytle is general manager and the owner of the remaining stock interest. Contrary to the common understanding in film circles here, this arrangement does not include all of the Lytle theaters but only four, the Empire, the Princess, Royal and Grand. Lytle is in full charge of operations, under the arrangement and has the power to book all attractions or reject any contract made on his behalf. The general office of Southern Enterprises merely co-operates with him.

The final witness of the hearing was L. B. Remy, Goldwyn manager, who testified that at a dinner at the Adolphus in Dallas, at which Samuel Goldwyn, Hiram Abrams, Oscar Price, E. H. Hulsey and he (Remy) were present the conversation turned to United Artists releases with Hulsey asking Abrams why he had sold the Pickford pictures and others to S. A. Lynch when Lynch didn't have any theaters in this territory. The answer was, according to Remy,

"We are selling our pictures where we can get the most money."

Then, according to Remy, Hulsey's comment followed:

"If that's to be the attitude of the distributors, I might as well sell my theaters to Lynch."

The witness testified that he heard the next day that announcement was made of the Lynch-Hulsey merger. The hearing has been brought to a close here to re-open in Boston on August 20.

Charges Intimidation

Summit, N. J. Exhibitor Says First Nat'l of Jersey Exercises Unfair Business Tactics

S. Kleinfeld, of the Lyric theater,
Summit N. J., has written Charles L. O'Reilly of the T. O. C. C. a letter in which he charges First National of New Jersey with "insidious practices and constant intimidation."
Kleinfeld has asked the T. O. C. C. to secure relief for him. The matter has been turned over to the business relations committee of the organization.

The Jersey exhibitor in his letter refers to the "insidious practice and constant intimidation by the First National Exchange of New Jersey on every occasion the exchange cannot get together with me on the question of price pictures. On each of these occasions, Mr. Fabian of the exchange threatens to build another theater in my town, if I do not pay him the price he is asking for his pictures or else threatens to place his product in a local church to be shown there in direct competition with my theater."

Kleinfeld's stand is that Summit has a population of over 9,000 and cannot support another theater. S. H.
Fabian of the First National when asked about the Kleinfeld matter denied yesterday that he had ever made any such statements as attributed to him by Kleinfeld. He said he had never made any threats or attempted to intimidate Kleinfeld as charged and added that he had never gotten together with him because of a lack of understanding on price.

ON THE SCREEN AT LAST

A FIRST NATIONAL PICTURE

Newspaper Opinions

"Ashes of Vengeance"—1st Nat'l—Apollo

AMERICAN—Miss Talmadge is very effective in

There is much dramatic and emotional action in "Ashes of Vengeance," and the re-productions of court scenes and dresses are magnificent. High ceilinged halls, beautiful backgrounds and splendid settings are lavishly presented, but dominating it all is Miss Talmadge herself. The production is lavishly presented, and nothing in the way of research has been spared to make of it a spectacular sensation.

DAILY NEWS—"Ashes of Vengeance" is in the full sense of the word a masterpiece of film production. The settings are magnificent, the costumes gorgeous, the players sincerely capable—well, it seems hardly sufficient to say that the picture is marvelous.

EVENING JOURNAL—Miss Talmadge went through all of the emotions that could come to an actress on the screen. She was radiant in all the scenes. Regardless of cost, Joseph M. Schenck, the producer, deserves praise, for the picture is a masterpiece.

EVENING WORLD—Here is the best in virtually everything the films so far have to offer. In recommending it, we make not a single reservation. This romance is quite the equal of any film Broadway has ever seen.

Miss Talmadge, as fine as she is, carries off, however, only her share of the acting honors. Frank Lloyd, who directed the picture, did a great piece of work.

HERALD—"Ashes of Vengeance" possesses a good story, and a wealth of legitimate drama, but its pictorial qualities are regrettably unimpressive.

The settings, which are intended to reflect French architecture in the sixteenth century, look very much like the "Au Quatrieme" department at Wanamaker's. What is more, they are all phoney.

Although Miss Talmadge does well, it must be admitted that Rupert, as played by the reliable Conway Tearle, strides off with the honors.

MAIL—A moving picture of beauty seldom seen on the screen is "Ashes of Vengeance."

It combines a marvelous spectacle of France in the sixteenth century and a love story of delicate charm executed in a thoroughly entertaining manner.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—The picture is filled with beautiful scenes and gorgeous costumes. You don't stop to consider the intrinsic value of the materials concerned, however, as the stirring story keeps one busy, and Miss Talmadge demands all the attention when she is present.

"Ashes of Vengeance" will no doubt enjoy a prosperous run on Broadway, for it contains all the elements so dear to the heart of the motion picture public.

POST—There is a real screen actress! Dignity, sympathy, sincerity, intelligence, and beauty are all present in high degree. Without doubt, Miss Talmadge is one of the very few really good actresses on the screen today.

This photodrama is an interesting tale which holds the interest to the end even if it does not live up to its many possibilities.

SUN—Norma Talmadge is that rare woman who sways the hearts of men with the same grace and ease she moves her feathered fan.

The photograph was notably beautiful. The scenes had a richness and depth quite out of the ordinary. Many of them were exquisitely set, down to the finest detail.

Practically the entire cast was worthy of the picture.

TELEGRAM—In this new and notably superb picture play Miss Talmadge joins the front ranks of romantic players who have been appearing in big spectacular films with a stirring story set against a vivid historical background. "Ashes of Vengeance" is one of the best of these big historical film plays.

TIMES—The film, an ambitious one—the last word in gigantic and picturesque settings

duction shows an interior of the Louvre thronged with dancers in beautiful costumes. The production is artistically staged, but the story, in spite of sword duels, is very slow in movement. Aside from the performance of Miss Talmadge, the acting honors are captured by Beery, the malignant villain.

TRIBUNE—"Ashes of Vengeance" is much too sweet a story to have such a melodramatic name. and never before has Miss Talmadge been so convincing and so lovable. The story is fascinating.

WORLD—The producers of "Ashes of Vengeance" have set a simple story amid the massive Gothic castles, the beautiful Palace of the Louvre, the ornate jewelry and the gorgeous costumes of the France of Catherine de Medici. The settings are carried out with accuracy, voluminous detail and unflinching taste. Though the story is effective it is this magnificent background or architecture, costume and spectacle that makes the production primarily worth while. As a whole, "Ashes of Vengeance" is a notable mountain among the myriad molehills of the cinema.

"Circus Days"—1st Nat'l—Strand

AMERICAN—"Circus Days" is filled with fun and sentiment, and is rather more interesting in itself than most of the films in which the little star has appeared.

Come to think it all over, "Circus Days" is nearly the best thing the boy has done.

EVENING WORLD—He's really a great actor, who all alone makes "Circus Days" something you ought not to miss.

DAILY NEWS—Get ye all to the Strand this week, folks, if you want to see diminutive, adorable Jackie Coogan in the latest, sturdiest, most human and all around best picture of his screen career. In plain talk, "Circus Days" is a perfect scream and delight from beginning to end, and it ended all too soon.

MAIL—Unlike any of his former pictures, there are scenes in which the boy seemed to be mimicking players he had seen in similar situations. There is less of his own delightful, childish originality.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—His art seems to grow almost as you watch him, and in "Circus Days," at the Strand, he excels as Toby Tyler.

POST—It is the second ridiculous plot cooked for the very young Mr. Coogan and at such a pace, he will not have much chance to grow older on the screen.

SUN—The unfeigned and refreshing sense of reality about his work, combined with his unspoiled mimicry, his sly humor and his eerie sense of pathos, make this one of his best pictures to date—as entertaining as a barrelful of monkeys.

TIMES—Although "Circus Day," endowed with a very sketchy story, the presence in it of that eight-year-old screen prodigy, Jackie Coogan, helps to make this production a fairly good entertainment.

TELEGRAM—The acting ability of Jackie Coogan is not to be questioned.

Young Coogan is the ideal boy for the part of the homeless lad.

TRIBUNE—It is no better and no worse than Master Coogan's previous pictures have been. If you enjoy seeing Jackie doing cute things, go to see "Circus Days;" if you don't, stay away. We refuse to offer any advice.

WORLD—Jackie Coogan is not a subject for journalistic commentary. Discussion of his work requires the rabid abandon and full throated enthusiasm of a cheer leader.

Unfortunately, there is a little too much circus in the film and not enough Jackie. Yet the experience of Jackie's face under the stimulus of his first kiss should be sufficient to secure the success of the picture with anyone.

"The Spoilers"—Goldwyn—Cosmopolitan—Capitol

EVENING JOURNAL—One of the most realistic screen fights ever shown. The film version is also excellent and for the new generation that has grown since the book came out this picture is something new.

HERALD—"The Spoilers" is unquestionably old fashioned, and tainted considerably with fang; but it is thrilling, it is interesting as a picture of the gold rush days in Alaska, and it packs a greater wallop than any of its multitudinous imitators.

In fewer words, it's grand entertainment. MAIL—Those who see "The Spoilers" will remember it for the fight which Milton Sills and Noah Beery fought as a climax to many scenes of action. It is rattling good entertainment while it lasts, but when it is over it is soon forgotten with one exception—the Sills Beery fight.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—it is a graphic and melodramatically interesting version of the well-known book of the same title by Rex Beach.

POST—Action is the thing. It starts with a fight and a dash for Alaska which leaves you breathless—and you never quite catch up to your breath again.

SUN—it serves to perpetuate a rattling good story and to give Lambert Hillyer a chance to turn the name of the original into mud. The director has done this strikingly in better and more unflinching continuity and in much more realistic atmosphere, so that the sets and the action never smelt of the studio. The battle between the hero and the villain, which made this the first of the great "fight pictures on the silver sheet, has been done with masterly variety of detail and a wealth of blows

TIMES—"The Spoilers" is a splendid fighting film, in which there are tense and gripping situations that will undoubtedly stir the battle is so well acted that it never palls.

TELEGRAM—"The Spoilers" in its new form is a cinema masterpiece.

Its pictorial value is of the highest. Its dramatic quality equals the best. There are plenty of punches in the play—literal punches—in the big fight scene between Milton Sills as Glemister and Noah Beery as McNamara.

TRIBUNE—there was altogether too much acting done by nearly everybody, with the exception of Anna Q. Nilsson and Roekliffe Fellowes.

WORLD—As pictures of this type go, "The Spoilers" is well above the average.

Nothing is omitted, from the crooked faro dealer to the dynamited dam.

his production of "The Battle," nor has a better attired British Officer ever commanded Indian troops than Harry Morey, who was sent to us by Distinctive Pictures for their "Green Goddess" picture.

Corrine Griffith when ordering her "Black Oxen" gowns said: "Your designs are the most unusual and fascinating I have ever seen."

Our designers will originate exclusive models for your stars and submit colored sketches covering entire requirements. When next in New York be sure your stars visit our establishment so as to leave their measurements with us. It is easy then to order by mail at any time.

FILM DAILY'S INQUIRING REPORTER

QUESTION

Should admission prices be increased?

ANSWERS

W. E. Atkinson, Metro.—"Yes. production costs have gone up. Exhibitors want big pictures and producers can't make them if they have to sell them under cost. It's an exhibitor demand, not one producers have created."

Louis F. Blumenthal, Haring and Blumenthal—"It would be detrimental to the business if prices were increased. Prices are as high now as people will pay. An increase would result in a falling attendance."

Harold B. Franklin, Famous Players-Lasky Corp.—"Local conditions influence this. It is true that exhibitors are willing to pay more money for big pictures. Speaking economically, I feel prices at this time should not be raised."

W. Ray Johnson, Arrow Film Corp.—"No. General commercial conditions do not warrant it. The people won't countenance it."

Joseph Plunkett, Strand Theater.—"No. The popularity of this business was established because its prices were cheap. They should remain that way."

John E. Storey, Pathe Exchange, Inc.—"It's a question of merchandising. If the exhibitor books a picture at advanced prices because he thinks it's a good attraction, he has the right to boost his admissions."

T. O. C. C. Members Have Not Interviewed Burkan or Hearst on Dual Picture Contracts

The T. O. C. C. committee named last week to take up the matter of the "Enemies of Women" and "Little Old New York" bookings, has not yet conferred with Nathan Burkan's office or with William Randolph Hearst regarding them.

C. officials has not changed in any respect. They still feel that their contracts are binding and that Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan should observe them.

Newspaper Opinions

"Bluebeard's Eighth Wife"—F. P.-L. —Rialto

AMERICAN—All the mannerisms needed to put over a sophisticated farce like this one are at Gloria's command. The story is amusing and skilfully treated, and Huntley Gordon in the role of Bluebeard is well groomed.

MAIL—Although "Bluebeard's 8th Wife," * * * is done in the usual lavish movie style, it differs from other films of that nature in that it does not sacrifice story interest for expensive gowns and sets. * * * There is a delightfully refreshing note predominating.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—* * * is still excellent entertainment of the Franco-American brand. Probably Mr. Savior would not recognize the work, as it has undergone some change just since leaving the Broadway stage, but is one of the best of the lighter pictures that we have had lately.

POST—* * * the film is only mildly amusing. Gloria Swanson is good to look upon as the eighth wife, and wears some gorgeous gowns, and Bobby Agnew is amusing as the young lover.

TELEGRAM—Miss Gloria Swanson has an ideal role as the worldly wise heroine of "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife" * * * Miss Swanson's display of amazing gowns would serve to make the film a sensation.

TIMES—* * * is not only an amusing picture, but one which is ably directed and beautifully staged. * * * there is never a dull moment in the film, nor any time when one does not look forward to what is coming next. It is one of those productions that one does not like to get up and leave before it is ended, even to catch a train.

TRIBUNE—* * * is much better screen entertainment than we had dared to hope.

WORLD—Some elaborate scenes, some humor that saves risqué situations, also help to make the picture rather more interesting than can always be said of Gloria's starring vehicles.

"Loyal Lives"—Vitagraph—Central

AMERICAN—And, too, although the cast boasts several excellent actors, even they cannot redeem a play which is at once stupid and commonplace and a plot that was old "when Kirby died."

MORNING TELEGRAPH—The simple domestic existence of an elderly Hibernian letter carrier is not very good dramatic material.

The only bits of action in the six reels are the attempt on the mail train and the capture of the thieves in the post office, and the whole affair moves along most languorously.

POST—There were the mortgage on the old home, the robbery, and the poverty-stricken family with troubles on every side and little joy for anybody, and the only redeeming feature was Mary Carr.

SUN—The picture would be noteworthy if only for the public service it renders in giving homage to this public servant, but in addition it has been directed so well by Charles Giblyn that it would prove interesting even if the spectator never received a letter in his life.

TELEGRAM—It is a melodrama and parts of it are thrilling. * * *

WORLD—* * * described in the folders which serve in lieu of programs as "a smashing, crashing drama of the postal service." As a matter of fact, it is neither smashing, crashing, nor yet is it drama.

In opinion of Dave Bershon, manager of the West Coast, the article "Equitable" by Alexander S. Aronson, published in THE FILM DAILY with truth and fortified with submitted a copy to him before invited to "reply" to the fact that Mr. Bershon's own experience fitted him to speak with measurable authority on the subject. He has been for us in the intricate and tangled affairs of "booking" at coast theaters, while I, of late, am too busy with Principal productions in general to be intimately conversant with the subject as an art and an "equitable" business.

The Associated Booking Corp., a local exhibitors' group, many of them members of the T. O. C. C., formed the important theater circuit by securing first-run attractions. It has surprised many of the "wisecracks" in film circles and stage a real success.

It is true that the A. B. C. has been inactive of late, but it is also true that meetings are being held and

Beating the Heat

By CROCKETT BROWN

Unique Theater, Nashwauk, Minn.

(Editor's Note—Crockett Brown operates a small theater in Minnesota. He is a "go-getter." Seventeen years ago he met with a severe accident which rendered him a cripple. Refusing to be thwarted by this, he opened a confectionery store and pool parlor and in 1908 became interested in films. The article below is reprinted by permission of "Greater Amusement" of Minneapolis, who describes Brown as this kind of a chap:

"When he found he couldn't get sufficient electric current (to operate his house) he bought and operated a gas making outfit; when the theater, eating up all receipts, began to make demands on the capital, he bought out his partners at their request and set about to prove that a theater could be operated successfully. For 15 years he has worked to prove he was right and has gone on proving it year after year."

This year, as in the past, there has been a great deal said both pro and con (mostly con) regarding staying open during the heat of summer. My experience this summer, while possibly too late to be of any use in case any of the boys care to consider it, is offered for what it's worth. I have never been one of those fellows who try to get by in summer using junk or cheap pictures. Last summer, I did reduce my running time by laying off one program per week, but kept up the quality, avoiding putting on any real big ones during the hot weather of June and July, however. This year I went at it in an entirely different way.

When summer approached, I bought a barrel of paint, not a gallon or two, and I went over the place thoroughly, inside and out. I added more and better lights to the front, secured some very attractive hanging bas-

Los Angeles—In response to a query from THE FILM DAILY representative regarding the status of the "protective alliance" formed here in February by important coast stars including the Talmadge sisters, Harold Lloyd, Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, and D. W. Griffith, Joseph M. Schenck states that the "alliance" is doing nothing until next month.

The so-called "protective alliance" of coast stars will, in all likelihood, fail to develop along the lines originally laid out in February of this year when, at an early morning meeting, the individuals named above decided to band together to fight "certain combinations and groups of persons or corporations formed in the motion picture business which will dwarf the artistic growth of the motion picture business."

If Mr. Bershon be right, the present mode of picture distribution is lacking in "equity" in every direction. Whether the theater which is booking pictures be a member of a chain or the single enterprise of an unattached exhibitor, the latter—the exhibitor—gets the worst of it. The game is played according to rules laid down by the producer who has the power to change the rules whenever it suits his interests to do so.

If this be true, it is manifestly wrong, but I gravely question the value of Mr. Aronson's remedy.

Mr. Aronson points out the wrongs assailing the exhibitor's financial well-being and does it with logic and force. But the remedy he would apply would relieve the exhibitor only at the expense of the producer, and, an outsider might say, the injustices would not be corrected—they would only be shifted.

If I understand Mr. Aronson correctly, he would so arrange rentals that, first, the costs of the exhibitor booking a picture would be taken care of. He would assign a disinterested and honorable committee to the task of determining the cost involved in the operation of the theater. This cost would include everything—the entire overhead. That being determined, the sum of those costs would first be taken out of the receipts at the box-office during the engagement of the picture in question and given to the exhibitor. Afterwards, the receipts would be divided 50-50 between the exhibitor and the distributor, who, in turn, presumably, would "take care" of the producer.

As it stands now, according to Mr. Aronson and Mr. Bershon, the entire "gamble" is taken by the exhibitor. The producer is secured no matter whether he makes a good picture or a bad one. As the case would stand under the proposed "equitable" arrangement, the entire "gamble" would be taken by the producer. The exhibitor would be secured no matter how he runs his house!

The variable earning capacity of the same picture in different communities is a matter of daily illustration. A picture in one community will be a "knock out," while in another community of similar character, it will be a "flop." Why? Perhaps the exhibitor is to blame for the "flop."

According to the terms of the proposed "equitable rentals," every hazard of ordinary business and every risk of ordinary investment is removed from the exhibitor. He is sure to "get his," no matter what happens. He and his investment are underwritten by the producer, who shoulders all the risk, assumes all the blame, carries all the responsibility and sustains all the losses. Whether his producing genius be great or small, the producer takes the risk; whether his showmanship is great or small, the exhibitor is protected.

I submit that this is precisely the condition that is gravely menacing and commerce, the producer takes the risk—I mean the farmer. He is the fount, the center, the creator of the wealth of the country, yet he is the first to "go broke" when markets are manipulated. His product is priced by others, distributed by others, appraised by others, and he takes what he can get. In Mr. Aronson's scheme the producer is placed in precisely that position. No matter what happens to his investment, he must stand aside until the investment of the exhibitor is protected. I do not assert that the present is an equitable arrangement. Indeed, I believe that it is not; but every element of injustice that can be identified now as a menace to the exhibitor would, in Mr. Aronson's adjustments, merely be moved from the exhibitor's investments and levelled against the producer's. The remedy would cure the patient but kill his neighbor! By all means let us have equitable rentals, but let them be equitable.

As to the operation of chain theaters, which is the subject of Mr. Aronson's adverse comment, Mr. Bershon points out some pertinent facts. The welfare of everybody in the industry is contingent upon the theater-going habit of the people of this great country. Populations drift, remove from place to place, but habits acquired in one town survive in another when folk move. Chain theaters are the greatest of theater-habit creators.

Take the activities of the West Coast, for instance. In every town in California where we are represented, stands a playhouse of sumptuous beauty, safe in construction, comfortable in appointments, luxurious and artistic in furnishing and settings. In almost every instance, such a theater replaced one of cheap construction, unsanitary equipment and tawdry appointments. By guaranteeing long contracts, vaudeville and musical numbers of quality fortify the pictures and the quality of the latter is improved for the same reason. In no case has anybody been "edged out," but resident exhibitors have been invited to participate in the newer theater and join with us in making the enterprise a local and an enduring success. Mr. Bershon is authority for the statement that in not one of the cities to which we have brought a new, modern, commodious theater has there been thing but the most cordial, conservative and progressive relations the town's activities, while in theaters of large accommodation larger crowds and smaller prices tribute to the formation of the going habits, thus conserving promoting the good of product distributors and exhibitors in a community.

Chain theaters, I venture to are here for good. They can do country and the industry a maximum of advantage if they are equitably operated and honestly managed. movement is in a direction concurrent with modern progress and approved by modern experience. We cannot ignore inevitable tendencies, but wiser to acknowledge them, cooperate with them, modify them to the public's best good, and support them in every issue where their reciprocal relations with the great and the public can be promoted to the benefit that the greatest good to the greatest number is achieved.

kets with real flowers and vines, and hung them around the canopy. In the lobby I placed pot plants, screened every opening, including doors and windows, against mosquitoes. All this was done to make the house at least ten degrees cooler than the street, and devoid of any flies, bugs or mosquitoes. I lined up the very best pictures I could possibly get. The following are a few of those I booked, which will give an idea of the caliber of pictures I decided upon: "Robin Hood," four days; "Way Down East," "Dr. Jack," "Smilin' Through," "Safety Last," "Ninety and Nine," "Sure-Fire Flint," and "Reported Missing" (old but good). There were many others and for the balance of the summer, I have contracted for the very best obtainable.

With the perfect roads we now have, and with automobiles as thick as mosquitoes in New Jersey, I just figured that the same roads that take so many people out of town, would bring others in if I could make the proper appeal and lived up to my advertising. Hundreds own cottages at nearby lakes at which they spend the entire summer.

Accordingly, I carried my advertising right into the summer cottages and in this way have increased attendance wonderfully. Can you imagine people being contented sitting around the lake fighting mosquitoes with Harold Lloyd in "Safety Last" playing only ten minutes' ride away? Not much. I have given comedies and comedy dramas preference this summer, as I find this type of entertainment is just what patrons want in summer, or any other time for that matter.

I have kept open every night, going after business as I never did before. The result has been most gratifying and I have played to a profit with each and every program. This is one year that I have beat the heat, if I never see the back of my neck. As one lady remarked the other evening as she went into the theatre, "Mr. Brown, it's just like going into a park, your lobby and front are so nice."

Boys, there still is some business to be had, but you have to go after it, don't wait for it to come in like it did in the days of '18 and '19—that time never will come back again.

ture," as the Associated Press published their "declaration of independence."

The organization was formed to assure the stars that they would receive the revenue befitting their drawing power from certain territories where exhibitors were in such control of the theater situation that they offered the distributors for these box-office powers what prices they willed. It was the plan to build legitimate theaters, if necessary, to combat this situation. At the organization meeting in February, all parties involved pledged substantial amounts to meet the expected cost of operations but unless every indication is wrong, this same money will or already has found its way back back to the individual's treasuries. It will be recalled that it was this organization that Jules E. Mastbaum of the Stanley Company was reported the head of.

Repeal of Federal Tax Levies

An Issue Clouded With Doubt

Reed, Smoot and Gov't Officials Concerned With Revenue Intake Oppose Tax Reduction of Any Kind—Treasury Now Gets $70,000,000 Yearly on Admissions

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Washington—There appears to be little likelihood that the present administration will look favorably upon the repeal of the admission or seating capacity taxes in the near future, and indications are that if that question comes up during the next session of Congress, leaders in both the House and Senate will oppose any legislation which would tend to deprive the Government of the revenue now obtained from the theatrical industry.

At the present time, Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, whose duties include the collection of revenues and the recommendation of changes in the revenue laws, is in Europe and lesser officials of the Treasury Department, in the absence of their chief and the naturally confused situation which has arisen through the death of President Harding, are reluctant to give any opinion as to the desirability of a change of this character.

At the same time, it is pointed out that the admission tax today is one of the chief sources of revenue, something like $70,000,000 a year being collected from admissions to places of amusement. The seating capacity tax is of less importance, the annual collections running well under $250,000 but it is considered of some importance as it enables the Government to keep a check upon the capacity of the theaters for the purpose of computing admission taxes when suspicion arises that a theater is "holding out" on the Government.

While the Treasury Department, at the close of the last fiscal year, reported a surplus of some $300,000,000, this was, in a way, a paper surplus, since internal debts still accrued and many expenses which might have been charged to that year were, as is usual, carried over to the current fiscal year. In addition, it is confidently expected that the expenses of the Government during the current year will be considerably greater than last year, but there is not expected a similar increase in revenues, although, due to the new tariff law, customs collections will probably be greater than for any year in the past.

In view of these conditions, the Budget Bureau, Senator Smoot and others who are primarily responsible

QUESTION

Is the outlook for the fall better now than at this time last year?

ANSWERS

E. A. Eschmann, Associated First National—"Certainly. Pictures are getting better and with better pictures, it means better business. When your product is good, your sales will be good."

Bobby North, Apollo Trading Corp.—"I think so. A sure sign that business will be better is the better output of production. Exhibitors want better pictures. That means box-office receipts will increase."

S. L. Rothafel ("Roxy"), Capitol Theater—"Yes. Pictures will be better. Conditions are better. The fall looks encouraging. As a matter of fact, at the moment we are ahead of last year's business."

William Thomas, Manager, Sumner Theater, 269 Sumner Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.—"Business has been off for the past eight or nine months. The outlook for the fall depends solely on the output of new pictures. Good pictures will help the whole industry."

Harry D. Wilson, Principal Pictures Corp.—"The coming season is going to bring some of the biggest pictures ever produced—bigger this fall by far than this time last year. The screens of the world will relish these productions as will the countless millions of theater patrons."

Adolph Zukor—"Both in quality and production and in the spirit of co-operation throughout the industry, the outlook for the new season is better now than it was at the same time last year. Reports indicate that this season's pictures will be better than ever before. In fact, there are so many good pictures that exhibitors should have a better opportunity than ever before to study the actual box-office merits of pictures before booking them."

Newspaper Opinions

"Little Johnny Jones"—Warner Bros.—Strand

AMERICAN—The good old English Der with all its exciting accessories, its quaint characters, and its deep-dyed plots and subplots, is realistically shown in "Little Johnny Jones" at the Strand. It occurs at the end of the picture and is worth waiting for.

DAILY NEWS—A quick moving tale of horse cheats and hearts and flowers play a goodly part as you'll see if you see the picture) is the latest film credited to Johnny Hines, master funny-face maker.

EVENING JOURNAL—At any rate, it is a rattling melodrama, with several dramatic elements.

EVENING WORLD—"Little Johnny Jones" retains the musical comedy flavor of George M. Cohan play from which it is done, and Johnny Hines, * * * succeeds well in putting on the screen some of the antics which audiences appreciated so much from Mr. Cohan. * * * the young of the genre will enjoy "Little Johnny Jones."

MAIL—Its action is jerky and there is a little more coherence to the plot than ordinary musical comedy. But despite these faults it was liked. Those who saw the picture yesterday afternoon regarded it as a pure and simple and then went ahead and enjoyed it.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—* * * very good entertainment. George Cohan's story * * * lends itself well to a pictorial version. * * * This race is about as good as any we have ever seen, either on the screen or off.

WORLD—The picture is reeled off to the tune of George M.'s own recipe—lots of speed, * * * makes a rattling good entertainment if you throw logic to the winds and knock your mind at the door.

TELEGRAM—Putting aside personalities for the moment and considering only the merits employed in the art of histrionic exhibition, it may be said that the nearest approach to the Cohanesque style has been achieved by the latter comedian.

TRIBUNE—* * * it is not the plot of "Little Johnny Jones" to which we object, but the lack of it. If there had been more coherence the spectators would not have been obliged to look upon three reels of the cheap-tawdriness comedy imaginable.

WORLD—What's wrong with this picture is the plot, aged and inexpensive comedy; an overdose of the "old mother," an ineffective star.

What's worth while.—A trained bulldog named Brownie.

WIMES—* * * the film absurdity produced by the Warner Brothers * * *. The acting in this production is about on a level with the story.

Omaha—Sam Goldflam, formerly with Fox is now selling for Pathe in this territory.

Tax Repeal Doubtful

for the financial conduct of the Government, have issued statements warning against a hasty revision of the tax laws, while the annual report of the Secretary of the Treasury, to be presented to Congress next December, will recommend the adoption of a constitutional amendment making taxable those securities now held tax-exempt, new legislation regarding inheritance and estate taxes, so as to increase the yield from those sources, and, possibly, the re-adoption, on a modified scale, of the excess profits tax.

Should enough of this proposed legislation be adopted to provide a decided increase in the tax receipts, it is probable that some action would be taken to relieve the public of some of the burden of these direct taxes, but it is apparently the intention of the Government to go slow on tax revision until the way is clear for the settlement of that part of the national debt now owing to us by foreign countries and assurance is given that the ordinary receipts of the Government will be sufficient for all expenses.

The Goldwyn "Enemies" Novelty

The exploitation supplement issued by Goldwyn for "Enemies of Women" is now being forwarded to the trade and is being met with great approval by exhibitors, who find the affair a great aid in putting-over the picture.

In it can be found any number of effective stunts, inexpensively prepared, although efficient showmanshiplike. This new idea will in time prove popular with distributors, inasmuch as it saves the exorbitant prices laid out yearly for press books, etc.

An Effective Exploitation Stunt

A replica of a railroad ticket from "Centerville, Ia.," to "Hollywood" is being distributed by the Rivoli as an exploitation stunt for "Hollywood," now playing at that house. The ticket contains 18 stubs, each stub containing some kind of film "chatter."

"Jingle Contest Used"

Seattle—The Colonial added a novel "jingle" contest to a newspaper tie-up in exploiting "Safety Last." Local merchants took liberal space for the contest and the theater furnished free tickets as prizes to the winners.

The Buster Brown Shoe space read something like this:

"'Safety Last' may be all right with Harold Lloyd, but Safety First should be your motto when buying children's shoes. The best jingle containing the words, 'Safety Last,' 'Harold Lloyd, and 'Buster Brown Shoes,' will win two tickets to the Colonial for Harold Lloyd's 'Safety Last.'"

Getty Book Shop, the Sayles Motor Co., the United Bakery, and Florence Oil Cook Stoves, tied up with "Safety Last" in the same way.

Koerpel Says He Won't Resign

J. A. Koerpel, Central Western division manager for Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan in a letter to this publication denies that he has resigned to join United States Steel as reported. Koerpel admits that he was made the offer but declares that he intends continuing his present affiliation.

Changes in Selznick Forces

The Selznick offices announce the following changes in the sales force: Irving Gumberg succeeds Anthony Ricci as salesman in the Jersey territory; J. D. Jameson is selling in South Brooklyn, the territory formerly handled by Seymour Schussel, the latter having been made assistant to Lester Adler. Schussel is also handling part of Upper New York.

Assets Purchased

West Coast Theaters' Interest in Principal Pictures Acquired by Lesser and Associates—Deal On

The holdings held by West Coast Theaters, Inc. in Principal Pictures have been purchased from that company and as a result, Principal Pictures are now controlled entirely by Irving M. Lesser and Mike Rosenberg.

It is said that a cash consideration of about $750,000 was made to West Coast Theaters for their interest in the production company and assets valued at $2,000,000 in studio property rights, completed productions and the like have now been turned over to the three individuals mentioned above. The arrangement will have no bearing on the group's activities in West Coast Theaters, Inc. Sol Lesser continues as vice-president and Irving and Rosenberg still hold large blocks of stock. The money formerly placed in Principal Pictures in West Coast Theaters will be used to build new theaters on the coast.

Sol Lesser is due in New York on Monday. There is some speculation in film circles relative to the distribution of the future Principal output. The first group, the "Super Five" is now state righted but the remainder, which includes the Harold Bell Wright stories, the Harry Langdon comedies, the Louis Tolhurst educational series, and "The Meanest Man in the World" will not be sold in any way. As a matter of fact, an important distributor is now dickering for the productions with the possibility that the transaction will be closed before Lesser leaves for Europe early in September. When he returns abroad, he will establish foreign connections not only for his own production but for that of other productions as well.

Many Attend Harris Opening

Many attended the opening of "The Green Goddess" at the Sam Harris theater last night. An elaborate prologue is part of the program.

No Visitors at Coast Studios

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Los Angeles—Effective today all important studios will be closed to visitors, according to an order issued by the M. P. Producer's Ass'n. The order has been issued because a San Francisco woman, after being shown every courtesy at the studio, is now stirring against "the vice and depravity" she discovered.

Loew Gets Tivoli

Pays Record Price for New London Theater—Many Companies Were After It

(By Radio To THE FILM DAILY)

London—Marcus Loew has secured the lease on the new Tivoli theater here. While the exact terms have not been made public, it is understood he has paid a record figure for it.

The only other theater the Loew interests had here was the Palace in which "The Four Horsemen" and other Metro pictures were shown.

The new Tivoli in London has been sought by a number of film companies as a London home for important productions. It has been reported that both Famous Players and Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan were dickering for it.

Loew will return from abroad in about three weeks.

J. D. Hampton Here

Jesse D. Hampton is in town from the coast to confer with Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan on the exploitation of "The Spoilers." Hampton's next production will probably be another Rex Beach story.

Yearsley Heads Special Dep't

C. L. Yearsley who has been director of publicity and advertising for First National for six years—since the inception of the company—has resigned to head a specially created poster department for the same organization. He will confine his activities to lithographs exclusively. Robert Dexter who has been filling Yearsley's post in the latter's absence in the country will remain in that post permanently.

Brandt Closes Mid-West Deal

Joe Brandt of C. B. C., returned from a Middle Western trip yesterday, on which he sold the following pictures to Harry Charnas, of Standard Film Service for Kentucky, Ohio, Western Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Michigan:

"Forgive and Forget," now in production; "Pal O'Mine" and "Innocence," all of them in the "Box Office Winner" series; "Yesterday's Wife," "The Marriage Market," "Discontented Husbands" and "Traffic in Hearts," which are part of the Columbia group and the 1923-1924 Screen Snapshots.

Exploitation (?)

When a distributor feels he is compelled to resort to exploitation methods such as are being used by the New York distributor of "For You My Boy!" it's time to cry quit.

The little white box and its illegal contents are a disgrace to this industry.

DANNY.

Theatrical Insurance Company Discussed—Purely in Conference Stage as Yet

A number of important film and theatrical organizations have been discussing the advisability of forming an insurance company to place their own insurance and endeavor to reduce the premium rates on risks of that kind.

This was admitted yesterday at the offices of the International Theatrical Ass'n where it was declared that, while such a move had been discussed, it had been broached as something entirely separate from the activities of the association to which many theaters and many influential amusement enterprises belong.

Contrary to the story published in yesterday morning's World, it has not been decided to carry out the plan. The World declared that a $25,000,000 company was planned; that $12,500,000 of the capital stock was to be outstanding and the remainder was to be held in reserve. Lee Boda, active head of the International Theatrical Ass'n, is said to have been investigating the situation since early June. He could not be reached yesterday for a statement. At the office of Wilmer and Vincent, it was discovered that Walter Vincent was away until next week. As chairman of the board of directors of the association, he is understood to be fully acquainted with the progress of the matter.

Internat'l M. P. T. O.

Is Plan of Sydney S. Cohen—Going Abroad in Fall—Has Representative There Now

While refusing to go into any great detail, Sydney S. Cohen yesterday verified the report republished in THE FILM DAILY of yesterday from The Cinema of London, that he was going abroad in the fall. He declared his trip would have to do with the organization of an international exhibitor organization to take in England and the countries of Continental Europe.

Cohen added that a representative of the M. P. T. O. is now abroad in this connection, but declined to mention his name. He also declined to state when he intended sailing.

Expected Abroad

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Paris—Mabel Normand and Ethel Clayton are expected here in the fall to produce.

Mack Sennett is understood to have a picture planned for Miss Normand that will take her abroad. How far her recent accident will interfere with this plan is doubtful at the moment. Ethel Clayton is under contract with F. B. O., where nothing was known of the Paris report yesterday.

Looks Like War

T. O. C. C. Calls Special Session on Operators' Situation—May Raise War Chest for Fight

The chief discussion at the regular meeting of the T. O. C. C. yesterday was the situation with Local 306—the operators' union. All indications yesterday pointed to a battle.

A special meeting of T. O. C. C. members has been called for Friday morning at the Astor at which it seems likely a war chest will be created to fight the operators. Each theater owner may be assessed from $250 to $500. The claim is advanced by the theater owners that the present officers of Local 306 were elected on a platform which pledged them to fight for an increase in wages, and that each operator had been assessed a week's salary to raise the necessary funds to wage a battle. The exhibitors assert this is an indication of an open fight, and that they are ready for it.

Harry Mackler, president of the union, had no comment to make regarding the above yesterday, but declared that a meeting will be held today at which action of some kind may be taken.

The film people directly interested, according to the World, are William Fox, Adolph Zukor, Walter Vincent and Marcus Loew and others, the Shuberts, A. L. Erlanger, E. F. Albee, John Ringling, Sam H. Harris and Al H. Woods.

At the office of Adolph Zukor, it was declared yesterday that the whole matter was entirely new, so far as the Zukor end of it was concerned. In the absence of Mr. Loew in Europe, no one in his organization cared to discuss it. Those interested in general theatrical insurance were included to discount the whole matter.

It is with great pleasure that I give you the daily receipts of the first week's gross of your great picture, "Human Wreckage", which played at the Royal Theatre.

Sunday, July	22
Monday	23	$1606.70
Tuesday	24	1811.47
Wednesday	25	1869.37
Thursday	26	1920.95
Friday	27	1945.78
Saturday	28	1909.92
		1904.69
		$12959.88

When you stop to consider that the seating capacity of the Royal is only 850 and the net admission price was 45¢, you had a remarkable box office attraction to get that much money in one week.

The best part of it all is that it pleased one hundred per cent--the picture has been town talk, and its opening on the second week looks exceptionally promising.

With kindest personal regards, I am Sincerely,

Frank L. Newman

"Marriage Morals"—Weber & North
—Central

AMERICAN—To cap the climax, after having sat through the obvious, and stodgy matter, we were confronted by the acute fact that it was all a dream! * * *

It was precisely the sort of stuff we used to get when the "industry was in its infancy." DAILY NEWS—"Marriage Morals" gloomy until unexpected ending.

EVE. JOURNAL—It has many thrilling moments, several love scenes and some interesting pictures of jazz halls. * * * All play their part remarkably well.

EVENING WORLD—We couldn't figure out why the picture was named that, but you might have better luck.

In the cast in addition to Mr. Moore are Ann Forrest, Edmund Breese, Harry Morey and John Goldsworthy, and under the circumstances all do as well as can be expected.

MAIL—* * * comes to Broadway as a reminder that hokum still has its grip upon the screen. * * * "Marriage Morals" does not entertain or make one think.

SUN—* * * handles its theme well, in spite of the fact that it has been handled dozens of times before.

TELEGRAM—Except for Tom Moore's portrayal of the role of an habitual roysterer there is little to be said about the merits of "Marriage Morals." * * * The story has become commonplace, on the screen.

TIMES—It is a silly story of the unimaginative type, done in a very crude way, and if one of the enemies of motion pictures ever saw it, he would pooh-pooh the idea of any improvement in films in the last ten years.

Kennedy Leaves Thursday

Tom Kennedy, formerly of the Exhibitors' Trade Review has joined Pathe and will leave for the coast Thursday to assume charge of publicity for the Roach units.

Regarding Arbuckle

The following communication has been received:

"I wonder if you are fearless—If so, you will publish this protest (which for political reasons must be anonymous) against the appearance of Arbuckle in the Hollywood film.

"The writer is no longer connected with the film business but was for many years and is now a "fan" of the first magnitude.

"Where were the brains of the producers and of Will Hays and above all of our brave Board of Censors who ruthlessly destroy many a good picture and who failed utterly to see anything objectionable about this picture of Arbuckle which was so obviously produced with an eye to public opinion and the release of those other pictures now on the shelves—which was also obviously arranged for elimination—if necessary—without hurting the continuity.

"I hope you will publish this—but I am afraid you won't.

N. Y. For Harmony

Billy Brandt in Open Letter Says "There are no Politics"—Ready to Progress

Billy Brandt, president of the M. P. T. O. of New York State yesterday issued an open letter addressed to the entire industry. In it he pointed out that the New York organization was ready to follow any "competent, sincere leadership" that would help remove the Federal admission tax.

He urged the abandonment of idle talk and the necessity for action. He said his organization will be willing to be found in the last rank if necessary to bring about co-operation. The letter follows:

"Immediately after the convention of the New York State M. P. T. O. held in the City of Syracuse on June 19th, 20th and 21st, and pursuant to a mandate therefrom, I, as president of that organization, wrote to

Plan a M. P. Day

M. P. T. O. Sets Aside November 19—Will Strengthen Condition of National Treasury

The M. P. T. O. directors have set aside November 19 as National Motion Picture Theater Day on which 25 per cent of the receipts will be turned over by the members of the exhibitor organization to the national treasury.

The money thus accruing will be used by the national organization to wage a fight for the repeal of the admission and seating taxes in Washington. The plan was suggested by William Bender of South Bend at the recent meeting of the board in Atlantic City. Already the directors have pledged $20,000 to get the campaign under way. A committee of 26 has been appointed by Sydney S. Cohen to work on the matter. Indiana, Ohio, New Jersey and Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware have already approved of the plan. The executive boards of the Nebraska, Maryland, Connecticut and New York units have also pledged support.

several exhibitors with whom I am acquainted throughout the country, calling their attention to the decision of the New York State organization to leave no stone unturned in an effort to eliminate the burdensome admission tax.

"This subject matter was emphasized in a speech by one of our guests, the Honorable Clarence MacGregor, representing one of the Congressional Districts of Buffalo, N. Y., who, it will be remembered, introduced into the last Congress a bill providing for the repeal of this above mentioned admission tax.

"The responses from those with whom I have communicated only served to reiterate the admonition of Congressman MacGregor that failure last year was the result of lack of unanimity amongst the exhibitors throughout the country. That this is deplorable is obvious, but equally important is my apprehension that my communications might have been misunderstood, and so I feel obliged at this time to make very plain the attitude of the recent New York State Convention.

"New York knows no politics in the presence of this necessity, and only asks an opportunity to follow any competent, sincere leadership, which must be unanimous, in a progressive march that will carry the banner of thorough and complete co-operation. And, behind that banner, New York simply desires to take a humble, modest place; in the very last rank, if need be. All that we want is to put behind this movement all the support, all the influence and all the force of which the New York State Organization is humanly capable.

"Time is of the essence. Action—not words are the necessity of the movement.

"Scattered mobs were never convincing. For the good of our investments, for the sake of our families and the hope of our children, for God's sake, let's do something for ourselves in an unselfish manner."

ters under lease at rentals which are ridiculously low, and in such a case it would be unfair for the producer to share in the profits to which the theater owner is legitimately entitled by reason of having made an exceptionally good deal on his rental. On the other hand, where the theater owner is paying an exorbitant rent there is no logical reason why the producer should be forced to assume a part of that loss which greatly interferes with the method outlined in section one for a rating board to determine the overhead.

The only way an overhead can be successfully determined is by the producer and the theater owner sitting down and amicably agreeing upon a schedule of overhead taking into consideration all of the various conditions, rental values, etc., and after they have once mutually agreed upon that basic figure, then from that point Mr. Aronson's scheme might profitably be worked out in many instances.

Even though they get together on that, there will always be the arguing about the production cost unless the amount of production cost assigned to the theater is reasonably low and the rating fair.

In my own instance, I have a contract for Paramount pictures which, I think, is eminently fair for both parties. The Paramount productions, I presume, average a certain overhead cost and, under the terms of my contract with them, I pay a set advance on each picture, the advance on one being the same as the other, i. e., I would pay as much for a Dorothy Dalton as a Thomas Meighan, but after we both take out our overhead then the popularity of the picture determines the profit for each of us.

I agree with Mr. Aronson that if the picture business can ever be placed upon a percentage basis along reasonable lines and the exhibitor each year is not asked to increase his percentage to the producer which was done more or less in the dramatic houses, that the returns to both parties will be more equitably apportioned.

Anderson Distributor

Carl Anderson, well remembered for his former connection with the old Lasky company, and later with Educational, has completed arrangements for a new distributing concern which will bear his name and will start functioning for the coming season. Commenting on his plans Anderson says:

"I realize that there is not room for just another distributing company; it must have something to offer the exhibitor and producer. Just wherein we will differ from the ordinary run will be shown as we make public our plans. We will specialize in pictures of definite exploitation merit, to which we will give intensive selling, wide distribution, with certified accounting to the producer and 'cards on the table' policy. The national quota on features will be arranged on a sound business value and not on motion picture figures."

Newspaper Opinions
"Green Goddess"—Distinctive—Goldwyn

Harris Theater
AMERICAN—Thrills, beauty, drama and appeal predominate in "The Green Goddess." * * * It is a magnificent production of the sort that is at its best on the screen. * * * The absolute perfection of intelligent direction and the gorgeous make of it a vital, gripping play that no one can miss.

LY NEWS—A motion picture production outdoing by far anything that had before in the screen careers of both George Arliss, the inimitable, and Alice Joyce, the beautiful * * * is "The Green Goddess." The fascinating splendor of the settings, the characterization of the mobs, the mystery of the tale, the excellent acting of the artists—all these things serve to hold its audience in a grip as firm as steel.

MOVING JOURNAL—"The Green Goddess" is a film that might be called an epic of the screen. * * * Every scene had its thrill. The moment of the presentation was tense. Mr. Arliss proves in this screen production that he well deserves the praise which has been lavished upon his acting before the camera.

MOVING WORLD—George Arliss's deft acting in "The Green Goddess," * * * has made it a thrill to watch the original production had with the additional production to produce excitement that the movie industry has never before conveyed better than the limits of a screen permit. "The Green Goddess," * * * still offers an evening full of entertainment.

MOVING PICTURE—Halsey has done an excellent job of directing William Archer's play. Sidney's direction is well-nigh perfect and the production * * * has maintained the high standard it has set for films in which Mr. Arliss has appeared for it.

MOVING PICTURE—Mr. Arliss is represented now in shadowy form, to be sure, but the work has been perfect—and his imitation of that suave, sly, sinister prince, Rajah of Rukh, is reproduced in all its details on the screen. * * * Indeed, the defect of "The Green Goddess," as a motion picture, lies in its meticulous adaptation to the form of the original play. * * * is one glorious moment * * * and this is sufficient to make the picture a great success. It comes * * * when a British plane * * * rescue the captives. * * * Mr. Olcott has achieved a beautiful unusual shot of these airplanes, and one which is calculated to pull the audience out of its seats whenever "The Green Goddess" is shown.

MAIL—In its film form "The Green Goddess" deserves all the success it had while on the stage.

George Arliss, who created the role of the Rajah of Rukh, once more gave a finished performance.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—The production is a highly artistic one, showing rare fidelity to detail, and the cast is so excellent that the familiar play has become one of the most thoroughly worth while pictures that has been given to us this year.

POST—It is a delight to watch him, for even though there really are a few good actors before the camera today, George Arliss easily tops them all; * * *

And then the melodrama begins—with every advantage of excellent acting, beautiful staging, exotic costuming, and exceptional photography.

SUN—George Arliss has moments of great effectiveness * * * At other times he seems a bit wearisome and old maidish. * * *

As for the picture itself it is an interesting one—nothing more. * * *

TELEGRAM—The George Arliss of the picture play is, of course, the George Arliss of the spoken play, except that he is possibly a little "more so," because the background is so magnificently intensive and all inclusive. * * * Visualized on the present occasion, the Rajah—correct, cold, conventional—is a much finer conception than the same actor's Disraeli. * * * Miss Joyce, Mr. Morey, Mr. Powell and Mr. Simpson all give fine performances of the four characters who throw that of the evil genius of the piece into high relief.

TIMES—It is not only beautifully staged, but the acting is excellent and the direction faultless. It is not often that one can ascend to such panygerics about a film, but in work of a most conscientious actor coupled with that of a skilled and altruistic director. It is the best film that Mr. Arliss has ever made. * * * The suspense of this production is carried out with exceptional skill. * * *

Every player in the cast * * * has done his bit to make this the best photoplay of its kind that has ever been produced. Here is a photoplay that shows the dawn a new era in the motion picture world.

TRIBUNE—"The Green Goddess" on the screen is much more effective, it seems to us, than ever it was on the stage.

In the first place, either the continuity is perfect or the presence of Mr. Arliss blinds one to its shortcomings, if any. Then we found the direction without a flaw; * * *

The story flows as swiftly and as smoothly as it ever did on the stage or in the pages of a book. The cast is perfect. * * *

WORLD—What's Wrong With This Picture—A few dull spots that can be cut. A papier mache cliff, the unnecessary introduction of a harem.

What's Worth While—A strong and well sustained story; beauty and detail in background; George Arliss and the entire cast.

theater owners of America were strong enough to insist and live by the above resolution, it would cost them hundreds and hundreds of thousands of dollars, necessitating such an enormous selling expense that it would be terrific.

"You of course realize the very great cost now of selling 'in block.' Now, multiply that by individual pictures and you can readily imagine the enormous cost. Also, if the theater owners were strong enough to insist that their members live up rigidly to a contract and not compel the distributing companies to resell and resell to them and could eliminate the cost of constantly trying to get play dates, it would be an enormous saving to the Theater Owners Chamber of Commerce. Naturally, the opposite means that they eventually have to pay for this unsound condition of business.

QUESTION

Will the theaters of the country be able to absorb all of the big productions promised for this fall and winter?

ANSWERS

E. M. Asher, Mack Sennett Prod.—"Yes. There will never be an overflow of really big productions. Those that look big in the making sometimes never turn out that way."

Edward J. Bowes, Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan.—"Yes, and more. We have absorbed the bad ones previously, why not the good ones. We need so many pictures; the good ones will get booked and the little apples will stay in the bottom of the barrel."

W. C. J. Doolittle, Selznick Distributing Corp.—"Some producers are going to look sick in six months. My sympathy is with the producer, because theaters won't be able to pay the prices asked."

W. W. Hodkinson.—"Yes, if they are all productions big in human interest. No, if they are simply lavish in expenditure and big in pre-natural promises."

Charles L. O'Reilly, the T. O. C. C.—"Exhibitors will never absorb the prices asked by producers for fall product. We have been disappointed on promises too often and so cannot tell whether the so-called 'Big' pictures will be really big until we see them. Theaters are always ready and anxious to absorb pictures that are really big."

Joe Unger, N. Y. manager, First National.—"All pictures that live up to their promised box-office merits will find exhibitors waiting for them in every locality throughout the country."

War On Taxes

Led by F. McWilliams, of Madison, president of the organization, and Joseph Rhode, veteran Kenosha exhibitor, the showmen voiced their protests against these so-called obnoxious taxes in informal discussions which preceded adoption of the resolutions.

Attendance at the opening session was disappointing, less than 100 exhibitors being registered although 200 had been expected by Walter F. Baumann, executive secretary. A housewarming at the new offices of the Universal exchange here attracted many exhibitors. The exhibitors spent Tuesday at Universal as the guests of George Levine, manager.

However, exhibitors and exchange men in great numbers joined hands Tuesday night at a "get-together" dinner and dance staged as part of the convention.

Election of officers and establishment of the plan whereby exhibitors will be able to save from 25 to 50 per cent through purchase of all forms of insurance through their association are scheduled on Wednesday's program. Since McWilliams announced that he will not be a candidate for re-election, Fred Seegret, of the Regent, Milwaukee, is being prominently mentioned for the presidency.

Seegret, a national committeeman has been one of the most active members since the formation of the state organization.

The insurance plan is to be explained by Rhode, who heads a committee which has made a thorough study of the matter, and by the representatives of several nationally known risk companies. It is hoped that an arrangement can be reached whereby one such company will form a special theater branch, selling the various forms of insurance through the association. Later, if it is found practical the entire theatrical insurance business in the state is to be turned over to the association.

Investigating

Hal Roach to Secure Exhibitor Ideas and Opinions Regarding Product—Starts Today on Trip

Hal Roach, one of the leading producers of short subjects, and who, incidentally, is starting making features as well, leaves town today on a short motor tour up-State. He will be away about a week and while on the road will stop at many picture houses in an effort to determine from the exhibitor his views on the situation, product and what, in his opinion, his people want to see.

This will be the first of a number of such trips that Roach will make while East. When he starts West he will make inquiries of exhibitors in the country through which he is passing, and by the time he returns to the Coast he anticipates having a definite idea of just "what's what."

Not for many years has a producer of the size and importance of Roach made such a trip. Exhibitors ideas are usually secured from salesmen or special representatives. But Roach is inclined to the belief that personal contact will secure him a mass of information which might be difficult to obtain otherwise.

Milwaukee—Fred Seegert, of the Regent, Milwaukee, was elected president of the M. P. T. O. of Wisconsin at the closing session of the two day convention. Election of Seegert, a veteran member of the organization, followed the refusal of F. J. McWilliams, of Madison to run for re-election because of the press of private duties.

Other officers chosen were: F. J. McWilliams, New Madison, Madison, vice president; Ernest Langemack, Colonial, Milwaukee, treasurer and W. VanNorman, Parkway, Milwaukee.

Reaction From Probe

Seen in J. C. Boss's Suit Against Famous Players—Hearing Reopens in Boston Monday

A number of film men yesterday expressed the opinion that the suit for $529,575 damages filed against Famous Players-Lasky Corp. by J. C. Boss, former exhibitor of McAlester, Okla., was the first direct reaction of the Federal Trade Commission probe into the affairs of Famous and allied organizations.

Boss occupied the stand for several days during the New York hearing in the Engineers' Societies Bldg. when he described his business relations with Southern Enterprises, Inc. The action filed in the U. S. District Court alleges that Famous exercises a monopoly in restraint of trade and used unfair methods to force weaker competitors out of business.

The corporation is declared in the complaint to have attained a com-

40 From Selznick

And Perhaps More—Assert Producer's Trust Fund Will Assure Payments When Due

Selznick expects to distribute 40 pictures during the 1923-1924 season and perhaps more. There will be series from Maurice Campbell, J. Searle Dawley and Birton King in that group.

W. C. J. Doolittle, president of the company in talking about the fall yesterday placed considerable stress on the so-called producer's trust fund, which is a part of the Selznick distributing plan. Doolittle explained that under this arrangement, rentals are placed in trust in a bank agreed by the producer and the distributor and that, in this way, the money is always on hand when the payment dates arrive. Part of the contract form used by Selznick with producers carries space for the insertion of the name of a bank in which the funds are to be held in trust.

"Greater Films" Boost

Planned in New York—Other Cities to Follow—Paramount Working Independently Here

Beginning August 26, the Rialto, Rivoli and Criterion will inaugurate a "Greater Movies Season" in New York with a two-fold purpose in mind:

1. To show that pictures are better this year than last.

2. To focus the attention of the public on the part the motion pictures play in the life of the community.

Just as florists have a National Flower day, so it is planned to show the advance made in the industry by setting aside several weeks a year and boost the plan through extensive advertising and all sort of exploitation. The scheme is understood to have originated over at Famous Players and will be handled, of course, in a manner that will reflect favorably upon the activities of that organization. It would not come as a surprise if other Broadway theaters are brought into line in order to make the movement as widespread as possible. Special souvenirs and special booklets manding position in the industry in 1919 when it became the largest theater owner in the world, owning or controlling more than 400 houses in the United States and Canada.

After telling how the reputed monopoly was created the complaint asserts that the defendant corporation and its directors have arbitrarily and oppressively used the power to force out of business weaker competitors among the small independent exhibitors. The complaint further says that the defendants used the power resulting from the mergers and combinations to coerce small exhibitors into a sale to or union with them or their subsidiaries, and thus secured a monopoly which has put an undue and unreasonable restraint upon the industry, and restricted competition to the lasting injury of the plaintiff.

Boss in the complaint says that after he opened the Folosho in 1919 the defendants raised the price of films to him several hundred per cent and opened a rival theater, the Palace. He was forced out of business, he says, in November, 1921.

The directors of Famous named as defendants in Boss's complaint, are Adolph Zukor, Jesse L. Lasky, Jules E. Brulatour, Frank A. Garbutt, Cecil B. De Mille, Daniel Frohman, Emil E. Shaner, Eugene Zukor, Sidney R. Kent, W. H. English, Fred G. Lee, Maurice Wertheim, G. G. Domenic, Felix E. Kahn and Theodore F. Whitmark.

No one at Famous Players yesterday cared to discuss the suit. Inquiries were directed to Cravath and Henderson who are attorneys for the company in the Government investigation but those in a position to discuss the matter were reported out of town.

The next session of the investigation opens in Boston next Monday where the hearing is expected to be brief.

Philadelphia—The Woodlawn Ave. Business Men's Association tendered Marcus Benn a dinner here Wednesday night in appreciation of his efforts in the development of the Woodlawn Ave. section. Benn is completing a big house which cost $500,00 in that section and which will open soon. The Stanley Co. of America is interested in the Benn theater. One of the marked tributes to Benn, who was overcome by the compliments tendered, was the presence of two clergymen, who praised him for what he had done for the neighborhood.

Later Benn and the members of the Association witnessed a private showing of Samuel Goldwyn's "Potash & Perlmutter" at the Carlton.

will be distributed to patrons at the Riesenfeld houses that week.

The Rialto will show "To the Last Man" the week of the 26th and the Rivoli, Pola Negri in "The Cheat." "The Covered Wagon" will continue at the Criterion.

Efforts will be made to make the idea national in scope. It is understood that in Minneapolis and St. Paul, all of the theaters and exchanges are combining in one big effort. The season there will start on August 25 while in Atlanta, several weeks will also be set aside to put over the same idea.

Locally, there will probably be tie-ups with important figures in city life, and speakers at the theaters. One feature being worked out now is a complete reel starting with scenes from the old Bernhardt film, "Queen Elizabeth" and continuing down the line to important pictures produced by Paramount.

kec, secretary. Although from the viewpoint of numbers the convention was considered below standard, those present feel that in accomplishments it rivals gatherings which attracted greater crowds. Chief among the steps taken on the last day were the following:

Establishment of an arbitration committee to work with a committee of exchangemen in settling disputes.

Decision to proceed with investigation of scheme for sale of theater insurance through the exhibitors association at a great saving to the members.

Movement furthered to obtain cleaner and better pictures and more refined exploitation.

The arbitration committee consists of the following:

Max Krofta, the Idle Hour; Steve Bauer, the Venus; Jack Stillman, the Downer; Eugene Phelan, the West Allis; and William Jacobs all of Milwaukee.

The matter of insurance was threshed out thoroughly in discussions led by Joseph Rhode, of the Kenosha Orpheum Theater, who has made a thorough study of the question and at whose suggestion the heads of several insurance companies appeared before the convention. The speakers explained how, by establishing special branches to handle theatrical insurance of all forms, risk firms could save members of the association from 25 to 50 percent on premiums. Eventually, sale of such insurance is to be transferred to the association. The board of directors was commissioned to go into further details of the scheme.

Although it had been hoped that a solution of the music tax problem would be offered exhibitors instead were advised to pay the assessments and to center their efforts at present upon attempts to get as good individual adjustments as possible. It was pointed out that it is futile to attempt to escape payment of the tax under the present circumstances, especially in view of the recent court decisions which have even legalized levying taxes for the broadcasting of copyright music by radio.

Elfelt is going to the coast tomorrow, accompanied by W. A. Bowman, his production manager. # Other People's Opinions of the New Paramount Pictures

"HOLLYWOOD"

Space is too limited to print the reviews. Suffice to say not one critic failed to praise this production. As for business, "Hollywood" has been doing enormous business at the Rivoli, New York (three weeks), and New Orpheum, Chicago, and that, too, in the muggiest weeks of the summer, both places.

William A. Johnston of Motion Picture News, adds: "What we predicted about Paramount's 'Hollywood,' is bearing fruit at the New York Rivoli. The S. R. O. sign is up, and the doorman is having a difficult time keeping the customers in line. This exceptional picture will create box-office records everywhere.

"The whimsical story, the humor, the title, and the long list of stars and celebrities—these combined will stimulate deep interest in any community that harbors a film theatre. Get it quick, boys!"

"BLUEBEARD'S 8th WIFE"

This picture did two capacity weeks at the Rialto, in opposition to mid-summer, "Hollywood" and "The Covered Wagon." The newspaper critics all said it is Gloria Swanson's best, and Motion Picture News added:

"'Bluebeard's 8th Wife' is a box-office picture. It has the ingredients that appeal to modern picture-goers—pep, pretty girls, lavish sets, romance. Will probably be one of the biggest money makers of the new season.

"THE CHEAT"

"The Cheat" hasn't played anywhere yet, but exhibitors who have seen it at exchanges will agree with the Motion Picture News reviewer when he says:

"'The Cheat' marks the 'comeback' of Pola Negri. One hundred per cent. better than 'Bella Donna' and the best thing the Polish actress has done since 'Passion.' Staged in elaborate manner. Trial scene is a revelation. A real Pola Negri American production. A credit to any screen."

"HOMEWARD BOUND"

In opposition to "Hollywood," "Homeward Bound" played to S. R. O. at the Rialto, New York, all week. Big business both because of Meighan, the star, and because it's a darn good picture.

From George Rea, Washington, O. exhibitor, comes this telegram: "'Homeward Bound' turning them away every performance. Pleasing 100 per cent. By far the greatest sea picture ever filmed. Immense business. Many thanks."

Motion Picture News says: "As neat a romance as has flashed across the screen in some time. Will pack 'em in anywhere." Moving Picture World: "Excellent production. Will immensely please the Meighan following and should provide satisfactory entertainment." Exhibitors Trade Review: "Another pronounced hit for Thomas Meighan. Storm scenes could not be surpassed for genuine thrills."

And there isn't a newspaper reviewer who hasn't added his bit to the chorus of praise.

"LAWFUL LARCENY"

Chicago liked this picture immensely. In New York the added attraction of Gilda Gray prevented a fair idea of the picture's pulling power. Variety's showman critic said:

"Here is a whale of a picture for entertainment purposes. Sure-fire for any type of audience. Featuring of Hope Hampton, Nita Naldi, Lew Cody and Conrad Nagel gives more power at the box-office." Harrison's Reports say: "100 per cent. satisfaction."

"TO THE LAST MAN"

When Jesse L. Lasky saw the first finished print of this production, he wired to Mr. Zukor:

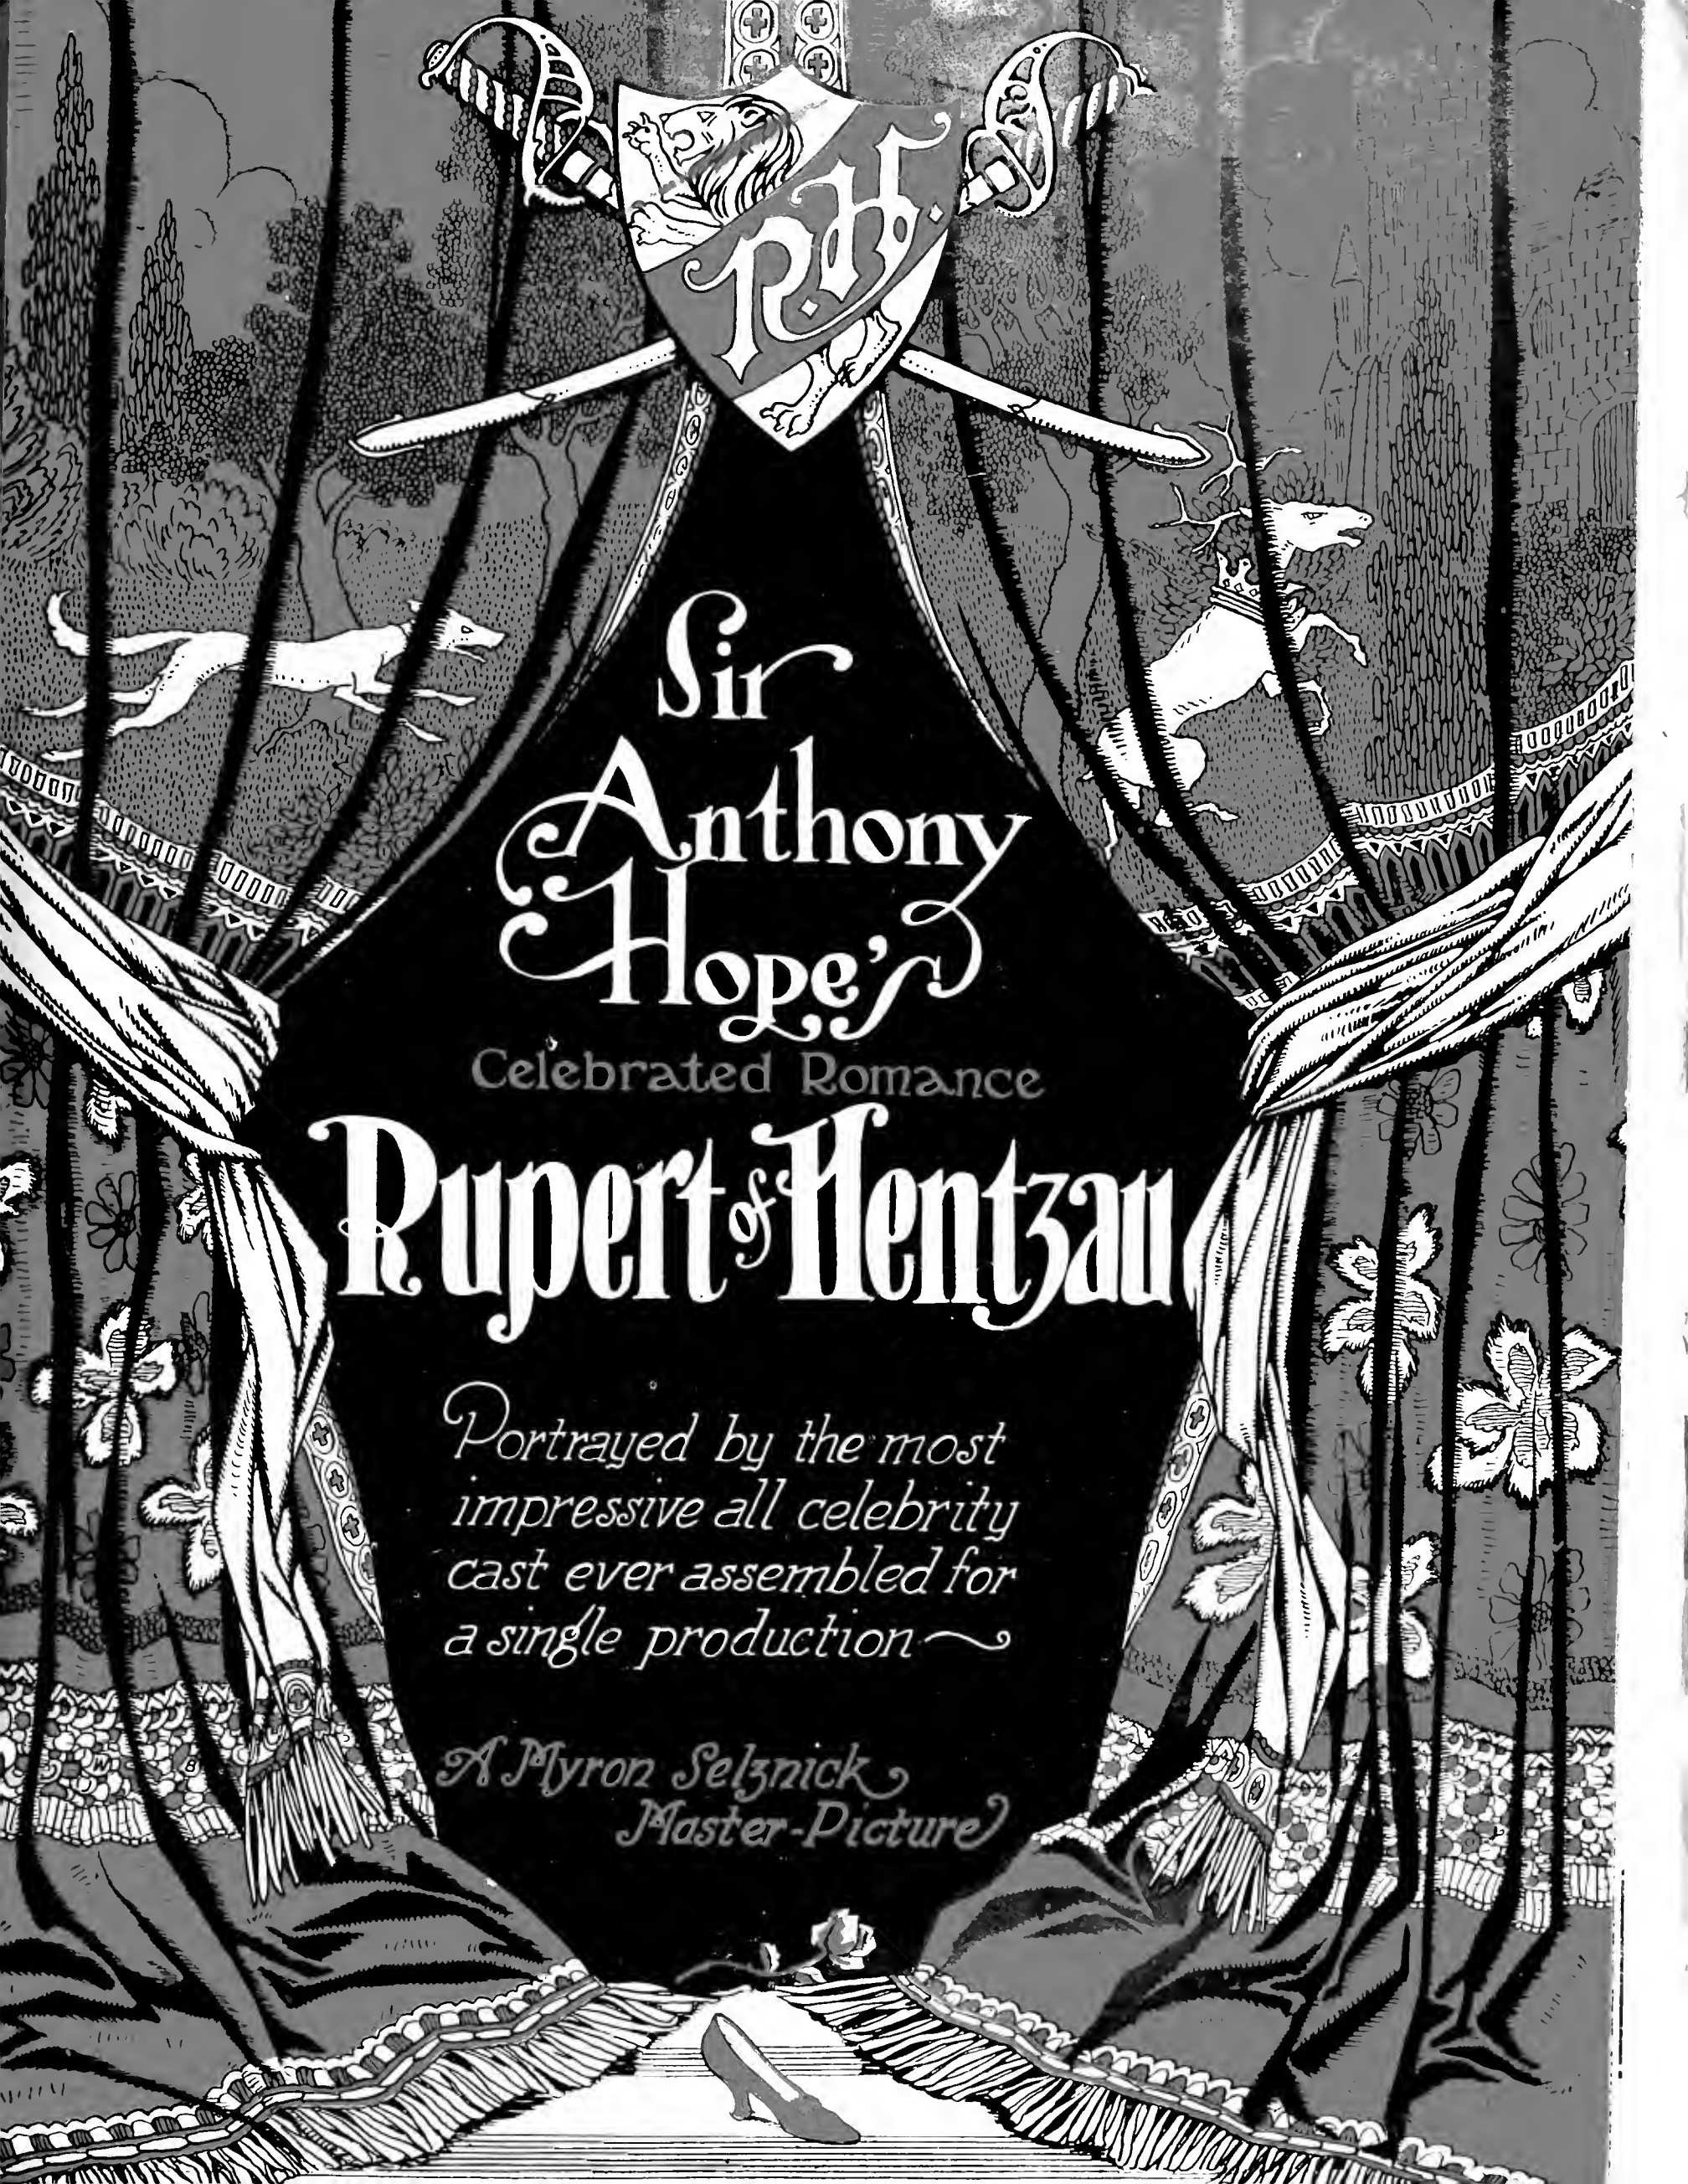

"Am proud to advise you our first Zane Grey picture, 'To the Last Man,' ranks beyond shadow of doubt as greatest outdoor western. Backgrounds of Tonto Basin, Arizona, are indescribable. Packed full of thrills. Audiences from small boys to grandfathers will simply love this picture. Tried it out on mixed audience last night and enthusiasm was tremendous."

May Extend Runs

Offered to End Difficulties between T. O. C. C. and Goldwyn on Two Cosmopolitan Features

It is understood that exhibitors holding contract for "Enemies of Men" and "Little Old New York" may extend their runs on these two pictures and in this way, the difficulties existing between the T. O. C. C. and Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan will be lightened out.

This suggestion has been made but nothing will be done until William Randolph Hearst returns from California in a few days. There is some trouble over these two pictures existing in other sections of the country as well as in New York and there is strong possibility that the extended solution will be adopted. This would serve to give exhibitors the pictures under their Paramount contracts and enable Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan to secure more revenue from the productions.

The Millenium

Is it here? Or is this a dream? It don't seem to be true. It's too good to be true. It's hard to accept it. But doggone it, it's here. The day that we've been yelping about—noising about—kicking about, for something like five years. What? You don't know?

Seeing pictures before you book 'em.

And both sides are yelling for it—exhibitors as well as producers and distributors.

Get to it, the harder the better. This business will step out in a real way when this seeing of pictures becomes the habit rather than the exception. Then there will be no excuse on the part of the exhibitor. No alibi. He can't say—as some have said to me—"well, it seemed to do all right on Broadway"—and then flopped on him. Every exhibitor knows—or should—what his people like. And if he books anything they don't, that's his mistake.

Of course block booking, block buying, is the easy way. If a glib salesman says "you know what our other pictures have been" or "you know what Soandso's pictures are" it's easy to nod approval and sign on the dotted line. And then you have a lot more time to play pinochle, or go fishing. But that isn't the way to run your business. It's all right to buy Ivory soap that way, Arrow collars or any other standard merchandise. But no two pictures of any star, or series, have been identically alike. They may be in theme—the Western's for instance. But as a rule

Music Tax Truce

M. P. T. O. and American Society at Work on Basis of Settlement—Controversy a Bitter One

The M. P. T. O. and the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers are understood to have declared an armistice on the music tax situation that is expected to eventually straighten out the entire matter. Sydney S. Cohen, for the M. P. T. O. and E. C. Mills, advisor to the executive committee of the American Society are conferring in this connection. It is understood that one of the important provisions of the agreement which is yet to be ratified by both sides is a clause that will make it binding upon the American Society not to institute suits against M. P. T. O. members without first informing Cohen so that the latter can have

Cohen in Line

Says M. P. T. O. Is Ready to Work With "Every Organization" Interested in Tax Repeal

According to Sydney S. Cohen, the M. P. T. O. stands ready to co-operate with "every organization and individual interested in the removal of the admission and the seat taxes for the purpose of accomplishing the object at which we are all aiming."

This statement appears in a long message sent by Cohen to the M. P. T. O. members urging them to get in touch with their congressmen and get them interested in the repeal of the Federal measures. Cohen asks for information relative to the attitude of the legislators for tabulation when the board of directors holds another meeting in the Middle West in October.

The controversy between the M. P. T. O. and the American Society has been waging for a long time. It was only recently that the Society stated that it was willing to meet the M. P. T. O. and possibly arrange the financial terms of the music license so that the small exhibitor would not have to pay the same money as the man who operated a large-sized theater. It is understood that the working arrangement was entered upon at the recent M. P. T. O. directors' meeting in Atlantic City when Mills made a special trip down there.

Reviews of the Newest Features

Johnny Hines in "Little Johnny Jones"

Warner Bros.—State Rights
Whole...COMEDY BUSINESS MAY GET IT OVER HERE AGE OLD "THROW THE RACE" PLOT WON'T; THING ESPECIALLY BIG THIS ONE.

His comedy antics are fairly good and usually register although it is given too much slap-stick to do.

A clever and well trained Hines is Hines' most important support and by far the most interesting in the picture; Molly Malone suffices for meagre heroine requirements while others are Edith Standing, Margaret McDon, Robert Prior.

Type of Story....Conventional race track meller but shy on the latter end. It's mostly comedy out of the straight sequence in which villain and his crowd try to keep hero from winning the Engle-derby. The story is an adaptation of the George M. Cohan stage play and hasn't proven very suitable screen material. The recognized Cohan patriotic touches haven't been omitted and they have been fit to give Hart, Schaffner and a bit of publicity in a close-up of one of their labels.

Box Office Angle....Probably a satisfactory attraction for many exhibitors. You know best whether your patrons still fall for the hero-winning-race-and-the-girl stories. If they want it, give it to them and they'll be pleased. The commercial business is a good asset in this

Exploitation....You have something to work on here if you want to get them interested. They're all familiar with George M. Cohan's name. Let them know that Warner Brothers latest is an adaptation of his stage play, "Little Johnny Jones," with Johnny Hines as the

The picture can be readily advertised by having a jockey on horseback riding about with proper announcements of the showing prominently displayed. An elaborate dress and the jockey in a brightly-colored suit would easily attract considerable attention.

The old, but popular stunt, of having the soda shops advertise "Johnny Jones Sundaes" might also be used to good advantage.

Your theater entrance decorated with various colored bunting and made to represent the entrance to a race track might prove inviting.

Direction by....Arthur Rosson; kept very moving along a good pace and generally satisfactory; occasionally overdoes the comedy stunts. Cast....From the Cohan stage play. Scenario...Raymond Schrock Cameraman...Charles Gilson Photography...All right. Locale...In and around a race track Length...6,800 feet.

"Mothers-in-Law"

Preferred Pictures Corp.

As a Whole...AN ELABORATELY PRODUCED PICTURE WITH GREAT PICTORIAL APPEAL; STORY VERY COMMON-PLACE AND DRAGGY BUT MOTHER LOVE ANGLE SAVES IT SOMEWHAT

Players....Edith Yorke carries away the acting honors in mother role that she does particularly well even though her tolerance at times seems almost unnatural; Gaston Glass good as her son and Ruth Clifford makes a gay butterfly wife. Josef Swickard usually overacts the father role; others are Crauford Kent and Vola Vale; also a cute baby.

Type of Story....Eternal triangle with a lot fussing and trimmings, elaborately staged and splendidly photographed but with a limited appeal for all that; there is seldom any sympathy for the actions of the characters and not much conviction in the things they take so long to do; the development is draggy although trimming will possibly serve to speed it up and the heart interest touches, especially scenes between the mother and her son's baby, are pleasing.

Box Office Angles....Unfortunately "Mothers-in-Law," in spite of the gorgeous mounting and wealth of display, will probably not have a universal appeal due to the conventional, unconvincing story the sole good feature of which is the occasional mother love angle.

Exploitation....In this you have a good title to advertise. If you think it suitable for your particular clientele, getting them in should not be difficult. Let them know about the lavish production, using plenty of stills in the lobby showing the various parties staged, especially the elaborate Burmese affair. You can promise plenty of pictorial appeal and where they like extravagant productions, you may feel sure they'll be satisfied.

Since the theme aims, in a way, to correct the impression that a mother-in-law is chiefly a person of interference, you might start a controversy on the subject.

Local women's clubs might be sufficiently interested to help you exploit the film and a variety of street stunts are suggested in detail in Preferred's press book.

Direction by....Gasnier; always tends toward the extravagant with production figures apparently running pretty well up; has handled story rather well but should have speeded up development; it's occasionally very slow moving.

Authors....Frank Dazey and Agnes Christine Johnston
Scenario...Olga Printzlaw
Cameraman...Karl Struss
Photography...Excellent
Locale....A farm and a gorgeous city
Length...6,725 feet

George Arliss in

"The Green Goddess"

Producer: Distinctive Pictures Corp.
Distributor: Goldwyn

As a Whole...MIGHTY FINE ENTERTAINMENT. YOU'LL HAVE TO GET BACK OF IT, BUT IT WILL HOLD THEM ONCE YOU GET THEM IN. FINE MELODRAMA; LOTS OF LAUGHS, EXCELLENT CAST; SPLENDID PRODUCTION. ANOTHER BIG ONE.

Star....Does best work of his screen career. Gives a 100 per cent performance.

Cast....Excellent. Harry Morey splendid. Alice Joyce very good. David Powell doesn't look the part. Ivan Simpson almost steals the picture and if producers are wise they'll take a look at the work of a newcomer, Jetta Goudal, who is an eyeful. Others unimportant in story development.

Type of Story....Pure melodrama but has enough ironic expressions from Arliss to bring many laughs. Tells of how imprisoned English army folks are rescued from the hands of a devilish Raja in the Himalayas with the British army planes coming to the rescue.

Box Office Angle....Much in it to please; story particularly. Fans always love good meller and the background is unusual enough to satisfy. Many good names to play up.

Exploitation....You'll have to get back of this one. Arliss, while a great actor has never proven a great box office attraction, but center everything on the unusual melodramatic story. Talk of the rescue. Use a trailer showing the aeroplane stuff, some of it is fine. Also of the torture chamber. If the right kind of a trailer is made up it should insure getting them back when your play dates come due.

Talk of the cast. Alice Joyce is an old favorite. So is Harry Morey. Say Morey does the best of his recent work. Tell them the play ran almost for two years in New York and the picture is better than the play.

Use your mailing list to its fullest advantage. You'll have to work to get them in, but once they see it they'll like it and it will prove a boost for your coming attractions as well. It's really a fine picture.

Direction by....Sidney Oleott; has done excellent work. Rescue sequence too brief however. If built up better by aeroplane stuff would doubtless prove tremendously better. Green Goddess in torture chamber might easily have been tinted.

Author...William Archer
Scenario...Forrest Halsey
Cameraman...Harry A. Fishbeck
Photography...Excellent
Locale....Mythical kingdom in Himalaya mountains
Length...9,600 feet; but will go out in about eight reels.

Norma Talmadge in

"Ashes of Vengeance"

Presented by Joseph M. Schenck
Distributors: First National

As a Whole...A GORGEOUS PRODUCTION THAT BOASTS OF UNUSUALLY LUXURIOUS SETTINGS, QUAINLY BEAUTIFUL COSTUMES AND NORMA TALMADGE AT TIMES VERY BEAUTIFUL IN THE ROLE OF YOELAND.

Star....Has something very out of the ordinary for her and is refreshing and charming in the costumes of old France; makes an appealing heroine.

Cast....Conway Tearle successful in his portrayal of the lover, Rupert; Tearle's acting very fine although he is occasionally too strenuous in his facial expressions; others in a uniformly good cast are Wallace Beery, Josephine Crowell, Betty Francisco, Claire McDowell, Courtney Foote.

Type of Story....Billed as "a romance of old France" the picture is not without dramatic moments whose occasional climaxes provide thrills of a more or less hair-raising variety; the romance is uppermost, however, and always charmingly portrayed against a background of unusual beauty.

Theme deals with old feud in which a de Vrieac is forced to become a servant of his enemy, a de la Roche, but the feud is lost in de Vrieac's love for la Roche's sister.

Box Office Angle....In spite of the remarkable beauty and lavish production "Ashes of Vengeance" may not fulfill box office expectations, that is to the extent that it should in lieu of the money expended upon it. It depends largely upon whether or not your folks take to costume dramas. But if you can get them interested, "Ashes of Vengeance" should send them out convinced that it was worth their while coming in.

Exploitation....By all means do your utmost to interest them in this latest Norma Talmadge production. It is decidedly the most important thing which the star has attempted so far and her effort is certainly worthy of consideration. Use her name prominently and let her admirers know that they will see her in a picture very different from anything she has appeared in previously.

Direction by....Frank Lloyd; hasn't spared anything to make this a beautiful spectacle; it is pictorially perfect; the story unfolds evenly and with a well sustained interest which can be improved but cutting that will eliminate some rather slow moving stretches.

Author...H. B. Somerville
Scenario...Frank Lloyd
Cameraman...Tony Gaudio
Photography...The very best
Locale...France in the sixteenth century.
Length...10,000 feet

In the Courts

A judgment for $541 has been filed in the Supreme Court against the Freeport Theater Corp. by the Independent Movie Supply Co. for a balance due on account.

Two default judgments have been filed in the Supreme Court against the Second National Pictures Corp. One is by the Motion Picture News for $3,001 and one by the Chalmers Pub. Co. for $2,059.

The suit of Arthur Butler Graham against Rudolph Valentino for an alleged balance due for legal services has been withdrawn from the equity term of the Supreme Court. Graham claimed his legal services were worth $65,000 of which he admitted payment of $20,500.

In the application by the Apfel Prod. Inc. against Commercial Traders Cinema Co. for an injunction restraining the sale of the prints and negatives of "The Trail of the Law," "The Man Who Paid," and "The Wolf's Fangs," the papers allege that the notice by Commercial Traders Cinema of the proposed sale of the film does not comply with the lien law.

Thomas W. Lamb, architect, has brought suit against the Newark Rialto Theater Corp. The amount sued for and the defense is not stated in the only paper on file, which is an application by Lamb to strike out the defense on the ground that it is insufficient in law.

George H. Callaghan, broker, has obtained an attachment in the Supreme Court against the property of Leon Lee and James Aubrey on the ground that both are residents of Los Angeles. He asks $1,200 on the ground that he got a contract for the defendants with the Chadwick Pictures by which the latter agreed to distribute 12 two-reel Aubrey comedies for the defendants, and pay them $6,000 each. Callaghan says he was to get 10 per cent and that the defendants have collected or are about to collect on two films delivered.

Judge Francis A. Winslow in the U. S. District Court has granted a motion to restrain the Housman Comedies, Inc., from disposing of 12 Charlie Chaplin negatives alleged to be the property of C. C. Pictures, Inc., the defendant in the equity suit brought by Harold C. Cornelius. C. C. Pictures, Inc., formerly known as Chaplin Classics, Inc., is in the hands of receivers. The negatives until recently were in the possession of the Evans Film Manufacturing Co., which made prints from them for C. C. They are subject to a judgment of $19,025.73 obtained by the Housman Comedies, Inc., in an action against the Chaplin Classics, Inc.

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Los Angeles—Antonio Moreno has dropped his long-pending suit against the Vitagraph and accepted a cash settlement of $22,500.

FILM DAILY'S INQUIRING REPORTER

QUESTION

Do you believe in percentage bookings?

ANSWERS

A. K. Emmet, Manager, Loew's State.—"It depends entirely on the house. No two theaters operate under the same conditions. There should not be a definite system for the selling of pictures on flat rentals, any more than there should be one on a percentage basis."

Jesse J. Goldberg, Independent Pictures Corp.—"Yes, because it compels a true spirit of exploitation co-operation between the exchange and theater and is equitable because it gives the exchange a compensation based truly on the drawing power, merits and worth of the attraction itself."

James R. Grainger, Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan—"Yes, provided the exhibitor gives a fair percentage arrangement and has enough confidence that the pictures are big enough to get his 100% co-operation. The great danger in percentage bookings is the fact that the exhibitor is never sure that his picture is big league."

Al Lichtman, Preferred Pictures Corp.—"It can't be answered either yes or no at this time."

Elmer R. Pearson, Pathe Exchange, Inc.—"Yes, on extraordinarily big pictures only, largely because box-office returns cannot always be ascertained in advance to permit the distributor and the exhibitor to arrive at a flat price. There should be a guarantee and if the picture does unusually well, some method of proportioning the returns should be made."

Charles R. Rogers, Resolute Film Sales Co.—"It is the only way that is the equitable way for producer, distributor and exhibitor. It will encourage the producer to make better pictures because when his product is good, he knows he will get the maximum in money for it."

William Russell in
"Alias the Night Wind"

Fox

As a Whole... CONVENTIONAL LOT THAT HAS RATHER LOW DEVELOPMENT AND LITTLE ACTION; MAY SATISFY ADMIRERS OF STAR.

Does good work in role that doesn't require a great deal of him and doesn't give him much opportunity to put over any spectacular stunts with one or two possible exceptions in fist encounters that are of short duration.

Suitable types and fulfill requirements adequately; Maude Mayne opposite star; others Chas. French, Wade Boteler, Jack Miller, Donald McDonald.

Type of Story... Not very much out of the ordinary; has a fairly commonplace plot and development doesn't keep it from being very obvious; you know pretty well ahead of time what is going to happen; there isn't very much of a mystery about any of it in spite of the suspense the director has attempted to inject.

Trusted stock broker eludes capture when falsely accused of stealing from his firm; lady detective captures him finally but only to win him his freedom by also presenting evidence against the real crooks.

Office Angle... An average picture that will probably get over without much comment one way or the other; the star's following will probably be satisfied with it. A good selection of accompanying short subjects will help it along.

Exploitation... There isn't a great deal in connection with this one that you can use for exploitation purposes other than the star's name and the title so concentrate on both in your announcements.

Where Russell is popular use his name prominently and let them know that in "Alias the Night Wind" he is an elusive young man who refuses to be arrested for a crime he did not commit.

If you care to use stunt advertising for the picture, one idea might be to have a person made up as a witch, going about the streets, straddling a broom and carrying a sign, "I am the mysterious night wind." Follow the stunt advertisements of the picture and they'll readily associate the name with the showing.

A reference to the story, as contained in the Fox press sheet might interest them. It reads: "The story of a mysterious lady, a mod-ern mercury, and a gun-toting hood."

Direction by... Joseph Vance; has done about the best he could with the material.

Cameras... Varich Vanardy
Cameraman... Robert M. Lee
Cameraman... Ernest Miller
Photography... All right.
Scene... Mostly interiors and one or two street scenes.
Length... 4,145 feet.

Hollywood Previews

As productions are invariably cut after previewing, a general idea of each picture only is given, rather than a complete analysis. The usual review will appear when the picture is shown in New York.

"In the Palace of the King"

Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan

From every angle this shapes up as one of the big pictures of the year—big from both the standpoint of magnificent staging and box office appeal.

Goldwyn expended plenty of dough on "In the Palace of the King," and every dollar stands out. The sets are exceptional, and although everyone will marvel at the beauty and splendor of the picture, the action and story dominates the backgrounds at all times.

The story contains a wealth of drama, romance and intrigue.

Direction by Emmett Flynn is masterful. Story development and continuity by June Mathis adds another success to her list.

Players—Shows us Blanche Sweet as never before. Edmund Lowe excellent and bound to go over for his work. Hobart Bosworth, Aileen Pringle, Pauline Starke, and William Mong ideally cast and put characters over convincingly.

Photography — Exceptional with many beautiful shots.

Box Office Angle—This looks like one of the big money-makers of the season. It is a costume play, the story revolving around an old Spanish castle; but the story is the main thing—and it carries a romance that will get over with every class of audience.

Hoot Gibson in
"The Ramblin' Kid"

Universal

Altogether a satisfactory picture for Hoot Gibson as star. The story has the time-worn theme of the Eastern girl visiting her uncle's ranch, but there are several new twists introduced and Gibson puts over his characterization in good style.

One of the outstanding punches is a thrilling horse race at a western rodeo, that has been assembled very cleverly and which is bound to keep everyone on edge.

The direction by Ed Sedgwick is acceptable, and the story moves along at a swift pace, with plenty of romance and drama interwoven.

"The Ramblin' Kid" will prove satisfactory entertainment for those houses that like Gibson, or where stories with a western atmosphere are popular.

"Wheels of the Pioneers"

Denver Dixon—No Release Set

Although the title is not applicable to the story, the picture can be classified as a western with the usual amount of action necessary for that type. It is far from a first-run offering, but still it will get the usual play from houses catering to audiences that demand westerns.

Short Subjects

"Pat's Patent"—Charles C. Burr
Hodkinson
Too Silly to be Comical

Type of production... 2 reel comedy

Slap-stick can be silly and yet you'll find something to laugh at but in "Pat's Patent" the comedy business gets by the place where it could draw laughs. The patent part of the picture doesn't mean a thing. There is a fairly good sequence in which Charlie Murray "rolls the bones" in a novel way. He plays at his window (friend wife won't let him out) and his pal plays at his window. Field glasses show the plays. This is fairly amusing but it is the only possible comedy situation—hardly enough to put over the rest of the number.

Pathe Review No. 34
Has Interesting Bits

Type of production... 1 reel magazine

This number presents views of Old Windsor, home of British royalty; Pathecolor views along the Spanish-French border; a "lens liar" series called "Mixed Traffic," "The Sculptor and the Monkey," cooperating in the Zoological Park, Washington, and a nature special.

"Live Wires"—Paul Parrott Comedy
Pathe

Not a Good Comedy

Type of production... 2 reel comedy

Maybe someone somewhere will find something to laugh at in "Live Wires," but it's a prize puzzle to find it. Paul Parrott, in this an uncomical comedian, gets all mixed up in a mass of telephone wires, bores a million holes, more or less, through the walls of a newlywed's bungalow, and otherwise does a lot of nonsensical stuff that is tedious and never funny. Parrott himself fails to evoke a laugh nor are his stunts capable of making him funny.

"The Mysteries of Yucatan"—Fox
Educational

Contains Many Interesting Views

Type of production 1 reel educational

This latest Fox educational presents numerous intimate and interesting views of Yucatan, showing the various ruins and pictures of the unusual looking edifices, such as the temples, nunnery, etc. The number is brief but it serves as a good educational number that will fit nicely on any program.

Katherine MacDonald in
"Refuge"

Producer: B. P. Schulberg
Distributor: First National

As a Whole... STAR HAS A BETTER STORY IN THIS THAN SHE HAS HAD IN SOME TIME; CONTAINS SOME GOOD DRAMATIC MOMENTS AND SUSPENSE THAT SHOULD MAKE IT RATHER APPEALING.

Star... Has something to work on this time; well suited and makes the most of the role; attractive in some close-ups.

Cast... Hugh Thompson has a fighting time of it as the hero; others Gunnis Davis and J. Gordon Russell, in parts that are nicely played and with a sense of humor; Arthur Edmund Carewe, Eric Mayne, Mathilde Brundage, Victor Potel, Grace Morse.

Type of Story... Of a popular formula variety—that of a mythical foreign kingdom, but it serves for some fairly good dramatic situations that have been satisfactorily handled. Intermittent comedy of two war buddies supplies a good humorous strain.

Countess, searching for rightful heir to throne, unknowingly marries him but learns his true identity after he saves her life. This leads up to the usual happy-ever-after ending.

Box Office Angle... Stands an even chance of satisfying and if the star happens to be a favorite you can let them know she has a better story in "Refuge" than in some of her recent productions.

Exploitation... Here is a good brief title that might be used to good advantage in teaser form. Post the town with sheets reading: "Are you seeking Refuge? Watch this space if you would know where to find it." Follow this with sheets reading: "Refuge" can be found at the blank theater on (date). Katherine MacDonald is the star." The title lends itself admirably to exploitation, especially on a teaser campaign.

A woman dressed to represent the Countess played by Katherine MacDonald, in the picture, might be driven about town with notices reading: "She seeks 'Refuge' in the protection of a husband. Volunteers apply at the blank theater."

Let your folks know that the picture has some good dramatic moments and a trailer of the scene in which Hugh Thompson battles with Arthur Carewe, or that in which the star threatens to jump from a high window, will arouse their interest.

Direction by... Victor Schertzinger, has given story an ample production and maintained pretty even interest.

Author... Lois Zellner
Scenario... Florence Hein
Cameraman... Joseph Brotherton
Photography... Usually good
Locale... Mythical kingdom of Moravia.
Length... 5,985 feet.

"Col. Heeza Liar in the African Jungle"—Bray-Hodkinson
Fair Cartoon Number

Type of production...1 reel cartoon

Here is a fair cartoon offering that will prove interesting more for the drawing itself than for the manoeuvres of Col. Heeza Liar. The drawing is clever and especially well done. The antics of the colonel are a bit funny especially when he gets into the Jungle and fools around with jungle beasts. The offering will suffice for variation on most any bill.

"July Days"—Our Gang Comedy—
Pathe

Always Good Entertainment

Type of production...2 reel comedy

You can always rely on the Our Gang comedies for genuinely amusing entertainment. "July Days," is another of these Hal Roach pictures with an irresistible juvenile cast. The youngsters are likely to create considerable envy within the hearts of some kiddies who see the picture. They'll all want street scooters with sails such as those used by the "gang." There are a lot of laughs with Mickey Daniels and the amusing colored boys up to tricks that furnish first rate amusement. The number should be popular and where they know the Our Gang comedies you need only to announce that you have another to show them.

"The Strike of the Rattler"—
Universal

Will Please Action Lovers

Type of production...2 reel western

The admirers of westerns will favor this one decidedly. The story is a condensed version of a formula that has already served for numerous feature westerns, but is far more interesting and satisfying in two reels. There is the usual villain, the sheriff-hero, and the girl with the customary procedure of fights, rescues, thrills, spills and stunts with the inevitable outcome, the marriage of hero and heroine, and the punishment of the villain. Pete Morrison is a likeable hero. Jay Marchant directed.

French Taxes 266,000,000 Francs

A special dispatch to the Times from Paris, reprinted with permission states that figures issued for 1922 show the net receipts produced by the tax on amusements in France on behalf of the Poor Law Administration were 266,000,000 francs. Of this sum the theaters provided 105,000,000, picture houses 82,000,000, concerts and vaudeville shows 70,000,000 and public dance halls 9,500,000.

Paris provided very nearly 30,000,000 francs. The amount of this tax varies from 7 to 25 per cent, according to the standard of the shows. It is levied solely for endowing hospitals and other charitable institutions with funds.

"So Long Buddy"
Century Comedy—Universal
Fine For Juvenile

Type of production...2 reel comedy

If you're looking for a wholesome, clean and amusing comedy, here it is. One of the Buddy Messinger Century comedies. And if you cater to a family trade, you'll find this one particularly well suited. The comedy is good, the gags original and the plot, simple but plausible and consistently amusing. The laughs are nicely distributed and young Messinger is at his best in the role of the dreaming fisher lad. While fishing in a lake where a "no fishing here" sign is prominent, Buddy falls asleep and dreams the game warden comes after him. There follows a series of events in which Buddy gets into all kinds of scrapes including a trip to the woodshed, a round of thrills in which two comical looking negro lads furnish a lot of laughs, and ends with Buddy waking up and falling into the lake.

"The Pencil Pusher"—Universal
Offers Good Amusement

Type of production...2 reel comedy

Maybe the idea isn't altogether new but there are still a good number of laughs in the effort of the comedian, Chuck Reisner, also author and director of "The Pencil Pusher," to land himself in jail. The offering isn't riotously funny, but it will amuse the majority. Reisner has thought up some fairly original gags and his series of attempts to get into jail through arrest, in order to secure a news story, is rather comical. He breaks a window in the sheriff's headquarters, but the blame goes to a youngster playing with stones outside. All his tricks and crimes fail and finally when he's about to give up the idea, a cop comes along and informs him that he's breaking the law by standing on the grass and takes him off to the lock up.

by

A stirring story splendidly told, where love is the potent factor. It hearkens back to the period of 1870, known and recognized as one of the most fascinating periods of fashion that we have had. Written by Edith Wharton, recently voted as one of the ten greatest women in America, “The Age of Innocence” goes far to prove that there never was and never will be an “age of innocence.” The story has a strong sex appeal, beautifully colored, dramatically told.

"Babbitt" is a searching, dignified and important picture of American life today, and is bigger—if possible—than Mr. Lewis' "Main Street."

Mrs. Keating, in her story of "An Unloved Wife," deals with the psychological reaction of a marriage of convenience, a marriage that entails the cementing of two large business interests. It is not strange that the normal woman should rebel against the veiled slavery that the condition enforced, yet she found it impossible to break through the barrier and remain true to self in her sacrifice to conditions, when the sweetheart of her youth falls in love with her own daughter. It is a most unusual story, told in the most impressive way.

"Marriage Morals"

Lawrence Weber and Bobby North—State Rights

As a Whole.....AN AVERAGE ATTRACTION; WILL APPEAL TO THOSE WHO LIKE STORIES OF LIFE ALONG BROADWAY. PICTURE SUFFERS FROM THEATRICAL SITUATIONS AND ILLOGICAL DEVELOPMENT. TOO LONG.

Stars.....Ann Forrest, Tom Moore, Harry T. Morey, John Goldsworthy, Edmund Breese, Florence Billings and Russell Griffin in principal roles. Their work satisfactory—just that. Miss Forrest not photographed to the best advantage.

Type of Story.....Quite theatrical and at times very unconvincing. The time-worn story of poor girl who marries the rich man's son and then has a hard time keeping him from running wild. It may carry appeal to certain types of audiences. More careful attention and less convenient detail would have helped considerably. Has some pictorial appeal.

Box Office Angle.....While the story is not marked by the most careful handling, and while it is true that the situations in themselves are not all new, it may get by nicely in certain types of houses. See it before booking.

Exploitation.....This picture has a box-office title and the experienced showman knows how that will help. There is an opportunity to build up a very effective teaser campaign playing on the title. Exercise some caution on how you play with it in order that you don't offend some of your patrons. Perhaps you can get some local people of importance to comment on the general theme. Recent statistics show how much divorces have increased. Try to utilize them.

Work the always-reliable lobby display and secure stills that show the lavishness of the picture. The early sequences occur in a beauty parlor, so get busy on that angle and arrange some tie-ups with your local merchants. The exchanges handling this picture will be able to supply you with the kind of stills you need.

The most prominent member of the cast is Tom Moore. If he means anything to your crowd, don't neglect that angle, but as a general basis to work on, get behind the title to get it over.

Direction by.....Will Nigh; made too much detail convenient. Many situations theatrical and not true to life. Has not developed his moral in clear-cut fashion.

Author .....Will Nigh
Scenario .....Will Nigh
Cameramen.....Sidney Hickox and Jack Brown.

Photography ..... Acceptable
Locale..Luxurious home and cabaret
Length ..... 6,400 feet

J. P. McGowan and Helen Holmes in
"Stormy Seas"

Associated Exhibitors

As a Whole....GOOD SEA SEQUENCES GET THIS OVER EVEN THOUGH REST OF STORY IS PRETTY CONVENTIONAL; AN INTERESTING CAST.

Stars....A pleasing combination and work well together; Helen Holmes a refreshing type of heroine and will be remembered for her many exploits in serials; McGowan a hero, likeable hero.

Cast....Satisfactory though quite subordinate to stars; includes Francis Seymour, Gordon Knapp, Leslie J. Casey and Harry Dalroy.

Type of Story....Sea melodrama with good action bits and marine atmosphere that gives it good color; has fairly thrilling climax that brings it to exciting finish; not essentially a new theme but capable of satisfying a good many.

Captain of freighter, engaged to marry owner's daughter, wrecks his ship after drinking bout, is rescued by his rival who brings about his regeneration but hero bravely gives up girl to rival he believes more worthy of her.

Box Office Angle....A good average attraction with nothing especially cut of the ordinary in the way of story or production but enough elements of appeal to suit a majority.

Exploitation....Your men folks will like the ship sequences to be found in "Stormy Seas." Tell them about the fight against regeneration which McGowan puts up. They'll like the atmosphere of this and there are bits of action aboard ship that will make it attractive for them.

For the women folks, talk about the romance of the ship owner's daughter and her love for the captain whose inherited weakness for drink kills her love for him. They may be disappointed that the hero doesn't eventually marry the girl but here is a distinctive twist that makes the picture different and gets away from the regular routine "clinch" ending.

Display plenty of posters and ad sheets that will give an idea of the story. Stunt advertising isn't particularly applicable in connection with this one so you'll have to rely chiefly on catchlines, stills and program readers to get them interested.

Direction by....J. P. McGowan; has supplied appropriate production and told story in brief, interesting fashion.

Author.....Arthur W. Donaldson
Scenario.....Arthur W. Donaldson
Cameraman.....Not credited.
Photography.....All right.

Locale....A ship yard, a shore resort and aboard ship.
Length.....4,893 feet.

William Desmond in
"Shadows of the North"

Universal

As a Whole....GOOD PRODUCTION AND DIRECTION PUT OVER COVENTIONAL PLOT AND MAKES FAIRLY STRONG DRAMATIC OFFERING.

Star....Story gives Desmond plenty of fine opportunities and role suits his personality very well; will please a majority with his performance.

Cast....Fred Kohler a thoroughly fine villain who drinks poison just at the crucial moment; Virginia Browne Faire a capable heroine; others William Welsh, Albert Hart, James O. Barrows.

Type of Story....A drama of the Northwoods, minus the mounted police. Has considerable pictorial appeal in fine quantity of beautiful locations. Plot is more or less commonplace but it has been very well handled and carefully directed with a nicely sustained interest.

War hero returns to find his father robbed and killed by gang of which the father of the girl he loves is the head. How the enemies meet their death, the girl's father proves himself innocent is followed by a reconciliation between the lovers.

Box Office Angle....A good average attraction. You can promise action, pictorial appeal and a good cast headed by William Desmond. Lovers of out-doors will take delight in the scenic investiture.

Exploitation.....In telling them "Shadows of the North" is a drama of the Northwoods, it might be well to let them know it doesn't deal with the Northwest Mounted Police in case they may steer shy of it since the police theme has been used so many times. Let them know it deals with claim-jumping and the gold rush days in the north.

For the men folks promise some first rate fights and a good amount of action. In a trailer show them the fight between Desmond and Fred Kohler that comes early in the picture. There's a good thrill in the canoe ride down the rapids. A trailer of this should also interest them.

Talk about the romantic angle for the benefit of the women, with catchlines such as: "Would you continue to love a man if he threatened the life of your father because he believed him responsible for his own father's death."

Direction by.....Robert Hill; has done a good job on this one and helped considerably to get story over.

Author.....Edison Marshall
Scenario.....Paul Schofield
Cameraman.....Harry Fowler
Photography.....Very good.

Locale.....Canadian woods.
Length.....4,943 feet.

Thomas Meighan in
"Homeward Bound"

Paramount

As a Whole.....TYPICAL MEIGHAN VEHICLE. NICELY BLENDED ROMANCE AND WELL-SUSTAINED STORY INTEREST. THE WOMEN WILL LOVE MEIGHAN AND THE MEN ADMIRE HIM. RECONCILIATION AT END ENTIRELY TOO ABRUPT.

Star.....The same, quiet, unassuming individual. Plenty of poise and considerable charm of manner. Does very good work of his usual sort.

Cast....Entirely pleasing. Lila Lee a splendid foil for Meighan. Others include Charles Abbe, William T. Carleton, Hugh Cameron, Gus Weinberg.

Type of Story.....A sea story in which the accepted rates for salvaging disabled vessels results in the hero getting sufficient money to marry the sea baron's daughter. Logical in development with noticeable lack of improbable situations. Closing storm sequence a peach.

Box Office Angle....Not big by any means but a thoroughly pleasing picture with the not-to-be-overlooked fact that Tommy Meighan is the star. No doubt about its ability to please your audiences.

Exploitation....Here's where your friendship with your local merchants should help. You have the yachting angle, the briny deep phase, the fact that the story is based on Peter B. Kyne's, "The Light to Leeward" to talk about in store tie-ups and window displays. Doctor up the lobby with ocean-going material. Dress your ushers in sailor uniforms by way of atmosphere.

Meighan has drawing power. Your audiences know what type of story he appears in. Tell your world that this is Meighan's latest and to many that should prove sufficient. Remind them that here is Meighan in another sea story and then recall "Cappy Ricks" to their minds.

The title doesn't mean very much and so it might be better to dodge it as much as you can.

Direction by....Ralph Ince; has done very well. Deserves special commendation for handling of storm scenes which are realistic to a marked degree.

Author ..... Peter B. Kyne
Scenario ..... Jack Cunningham and Paul Sloane

Cameraman ..... Ernest Haller
Photography...Of the highest order

Locale ....New England village and aboard ship.
Length ..... 6,773 feet

NOT AN UNFAVORABLE COMMENT

THERE is a hundred per cent picture in every sense and meaning of the term. A picture that has not received one word of adverse criticism from the daily press, public, exhibitors or trade publications. All unite in classing it as the ideal box-office attraction, the last word in satisfaction to both theatre owner and patron.

Throughout the hottest weather of the summer "SUCCESS" has lived up to its title, actually drawing so much business that many houses playing it were able to break records even during the "dog days" of the theatrical season.

This means just one thing—that "SUCCESS" is a picture you simply cannot afford not to book. It's the kind of picture worth making dates for, even to the extent of putting some other film on the shelf to make room for it. You'll want to thank everyone concerned in the making of "SUCCESS" after you have played it, and,—

It holds a direct appeal for all classes. There is something in "SUCCESS" that will interest every man, woman and child in your community, it contains every element that goes into the making of a perfect picture.

Production in Russia

Little Going on There Now But Much Activity is Looked for Shortly—Revolution Held Up Progress of the Industry There

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Berlin—The Film Express carries an interesting article about production in Russia, written by N. Lebedow of Moscow. In part, it says: "The revolution and the ensuing three years blockade has done a lot of harm to the Russian moving picture business. Before the Revolution, Moscow was the principal and almost the only place for distribution of Russian and foreign pictures within the whole empire. Owing to the civilian war, however, many territories were completely cut off from Moscow, disorganizing distribution altogether. Thus, many provincial halls (theaters) had to be closed and imports considerably to be restricted. Russian production having flourished during the war, was doomed, no stock being available from abroad.

"Thus, in the middle of 1919, there was hardly any moving picture business in Russia, in spite of the government subvention and the moving picture halls. For the next three years up till 1922 all the old films had to be used up. Last year only with the improvement of the general economical position some new life began to be felt in the moving picture business, thanks to the fact that the consumer's standard of living could be raised and foreign connections could be taken up again.

"In Moscow, the number of halls was increased up to 500, containing altogether 40,000 seats. In the whole republic there are about 1000 theaters. Distribution could also be increased, principally on the expense of the German and partly of the American production. The following enterprises have been reorganized and can be considered to be quite sound: Goskino, Kino Moskwa (Moscow,) Gewsapkino (Petrograd,) and Pan Ukraine Photo Kino Offices (Charkow.) There are also a number of smaller organizations like "Russ," the Torch etc. which, however, do not exercise any strong influence on the market. By dint of the decree of the Government the educational committee of the Soviets still have the monopoly for distribution. The producing companies however also have the right to distribute pictures. "Production is still rather small, in 1922 no more than 10 features and 20-30 educational films having been produced. The chances for the future may be considered as follows:

"A strong flourishing of Russian production may be expected in which, apart of the efforts mentioned, the newly founded company Proletarian Pictures may prove to be rather important, some of the shareholders being very prominent people, exercising a strong political and economical influence. The company also owns a lot of interesting scripts, dealing with the life of present-day Russia, and apart of that will be able to make use of the best Russian artists.

"What does the Russian film trade expect from foreign countries? First of all serious and sound foreign business men to invest capital in the Russian film production; it may be pointed out that the production of raw film and machines seems to be specially needed and worth while.

"Furthermore, Russia expects good scientific, educational and other films. As to features, such with a tendency for pacifism, teetotalism, etc. should be specially welcome. Films with good sport scenes and a little romantic touch should also prove to be successful. Literary and mystical films would not do well in Russia. Apart of that, Russia is in need of good technicians and instructors to teach people production. And apart of that, literature considering all questions and problems of the film trade would be very much welcome."

Artistic Motion-pictures In Crude Surroundings

It was our experience with primitive "theatres" that revealed to us what the public ought to have. Moving-pictures were developing with leaps and bounds. Magnificent pictures were being made.

Actors and actresses of sterling talent were interpreting for the screen, wonderful stories by world-famous authors. Countless thousands of dollars were being invested in artistic creations.

Yet these modern and classical productions were being shown in converted storerooms.

It reminded us of nothing so much as using raw lumber to frame a great painting. It was utterly grotesque and out of reasoning.

There was a coarse screen hung at the end of the room. It was utterly unrelieved. In place of appropriate and warm embellishment which beautiful pictures ought to have, the surroundings were strips of whitewashed walls.

Yet in spite of this crudity, the people fairly crowded in to see the pictures. In spite of discomfort, stifling air, queer smells, uncomfortable chairs and unbroken monotony of bleak walls, the people came, Summer and Winter, and stood in line outside. They actually suffered to see.

Their intense interest was manifest. Their eager enjoyment was unmistakable. It was then that we saw the future of the moving-picture and realized the changes that must be wrought. We knew that no setting could be too elaborate.

It was then that we visioned great auditoriums, mammoth stages large enough to accommodate the greatest productions, beautiful framing, lobbies to protect the people while they waited, scientific apparatus to provide floods of fresh air—surroundings that would charm the senses to the last degree.

And these are the reasons why we built the four most beautiful theatres in the world.

BEAUTIFUL STAGE OF CHICAGO THEATRE

Balaban & Katz Theatres

Every Day in the Year

The Chicago, Tivoli, Riviera and Central Park theatres never could have been built had it not been possible to operate them profitably fifty-two weeks in the year.

Theatres of such size and magnificence, presenting such elaborate performances, could not be operated successfully if they depended solely on the cool months, being thankful for what little patronage was willing to come in and suffer through the hot summer months. Steady attendance every day in the year, summer and winter, spring and fall, was absolutely essential to support them.

We had to abolish the seasons. We developed ventilating apparatus at a cost of $250,000, to provide fresh healthful air for all seasons. We invested a similar sum for the development of freezing plants to cool this pure air so that the public might come here and find relief on Summer days when the air is hot, humid and oppressive.

To maintain these ventilating and freezing plants it costs us as much as it takes to operate the average modern moving picture theatre in its entirety. Yet this expense is wholly justified. It is good business logic. Because it serves to keep you comfortable and in a receptive mood to fully enjoy what you have paid to see and hear.

Your constant desire to attend these theatres is the natural consequence of this, and the countless other unusual efforts of this organization to make you happy and comfortable.

The Millenium

there is usually something different, something to indicate that you will have to work harder, or maybe ease off a bit, getting one over, as against the other.

In the good old program days this might have been easy enough. But not now when salesmen are taking everything but the chandelier's and seats out of the houses; when every good picture has a quota of half a million or more, and when they even ask two million exhibition value for some others. When they get to offering you that kind of a picture it's time to see it. Maybe you want it. Maybe you feel you can't afford to let the other house have it. Maybe you want the profits—or the grief. But at all events you've got to see them. That's the word, got—must.

And so when you see the distributors coming around to it. When you see Fox—looks as if Bill was the first—calling on exhibs to look, demanding they don't block buy—it's time to take notice. And then the others: they're rapidly falling in line. And then the TOCC demanding the right to buy in no other fashion. And there's a tip out, a real one. That one of the biggest concerns is also thinking of doing it—well, it looks as if that millenium was arriving in earnest.

Naturally there will be opposition to this. Earle Hammons wisely points out probable increased sales costs. That's possible. But it may be better to pay more—and get what you want—than to pay as you have—and get a lot you don't want and can't use. The short subjects are, of course, different, except in unusual cases. There is neither need nor excuse to do this—so long as you're getting the right kind to start with.

COURTESY

Many older stars might well copy Jackie Coogan's start. And send a letter of thanks. To the producing staff. Just as Jackie did. On completion of his latest. Because there's much—too much—taken for granted in this business. And courtesy, costing nothing, is always appreciated.

"BABE" ON THE JOB

Otherwise "Vic" Shapiro, Pathe, would be minus his thousand dollar stick pin; his collection of pigeon blood rubies and his checked suit. "Babe" is a terrier who barked away a burglarious negro. Looks like "Vic" was planning a new skit for the Naked Truth dinner. Getting local color—so to speak.

WORKING ON A REP

Out in Reno a clever check worker on the job. Claimed to be Robert Bruce. Passed a lot of phoney checks. And gave the Wilderness Tales star a lot of trouble. Tough.

FEDERAL TRADE WORKINGS

Start again in Boston Monday. Incidentally, while down in New Orleans, W. H. Fuller, chief counsel for the Government thanked the Saenger's for their courtesy. In helping out all they could. In the investigation. Nice—very nice.

FOREIGN MAIL

Postals. From Abe Fabian, in Paris. Back home now. Cheerio Garrett in London. Paul Scardon and Betty Blythe in Germany. Gregory Kann from Quebec—yep, that's foreign. And Billy Brandt sent one from Brooklyn. Lamenting over a 400 hand. That went wrong.

GOING SOME

Sid Olcott these days. Has two of the biggest pictures of the year. In competition. On Broadway. "Little Old New York" at the Cosmopolitan, and "The Green Goddess" at the Sam Harris. Both fine. Both sure fire. Looks like Sid started the season in the right way. Congrat's.

TALKATIVE CASH

Hal Roach wanted a new car. Told the Packard people so. Sorry, they said, no deliveries for several months. "Well," said

Hal, "I've got the money with me; guess I'll go elsewhere. "The it was different. How that money talked. Roach got his car 48 hours. Using it up-state now. Touring. Talking to exhibitors. Getting angles. Smart boy.

MOE MARK PLEASE NOTE

Over in Berlin. They are taking two fresh eggs. Or a pound of butter. For one admission.

GET OUT THE FINGER PRINTS

If anyone ever mistakes Charley Phillips (handling publicity for the new Carl Anderson distributing machine) for Rupert Hughes, they can't be blamed. The resemblance is startling. Wonder if Phillips knows it?

HOW IT PAYS

Time worn subject—advertise your product before you try to sell it. Sure, say the smart ones, that brings money to the little old paper. Bunk. Ask Murray Garsson. He's made three for this season—"Success," "Counterfeit Love" and "Broadway Broke." All advertised fully—yes, in the little old paper—before they were offered for distribution. All placed. He says very satisfactorily. Metro got "Success" Associated Exhibitors "Counterfeit Love" and Selznick has the latest. Incidentally Garsson says every important concern wanted to see "Broadway Broke" after his teaser campaign.

DANNY.

Cuts and Flashes

Hugo Riesenfeld has written a special music score for "Othello."

Leo Burns has been appointed "location man" for the Cosmopolitan Prod.

Amelia Summerville has been signed to appear in "Romola," to be made in Italy.

"The Destroying Angel," starring Leah Baird, is the current Associated Exhibitors release.

Gilbert Warrenton, chief cameraman on "Under the Red Robe" left for Los Angeles yesterday to spend a brief vacation with his mother.

Rogers Closes Two Deals

Charles R. Rogers is responsible for the deals whereby "Broadway Broke" will be distributed through Selznick, and "The Silent Accuser" through F. B. O.

Mrs. Todd Quits Universal

Mrs. Minnie Todd, who has been in charge of the Universal contract department has resigned. She has left for the coast where she will manage her little daughter, Lola whose first appearance will be in a new Universal picture.

Permit Sunday Shows

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Minneapolis—The town of Montevideo has lifted its "blue" laws against Sunday shows.

Memphis May Be "Blue"

Arbitration Boards

What is Happening Throughout the Country—Only Two Bad Spots Out of 31

Outside of Dallas, Texas, and New York City, it is understood the arbitration boards, working between exhibitors and exchangers in 31 states, are functioning without difficulty.

In New York steps are under way, it is said, to bring about a better understanding, and in this work Saul Rogers, Fox Film, is giving much aid, and expects an improvement in the early future. That the chief difficulty lies in the attitude of some of the exchangers on the board, is admitted.

In Texas there is a state law barring the existence of credit organizations, etc., among merchants, and this law has hit the arbitration board. An opinion relative to the legality of the arbitration board is now being passed upon by the Attorney General of Texas, and if this opinion does not meet with his approval a test case will be filed to determine the legitimacy of the Board in Texas.

It is said that the uniform contract now being used generally, even by exhibitors with state right exchangers, not identified with the M. P. Producers and Distributor Ass'n.

Why The Shootin'?

By JOHN C. RAGLAND
Eastern Representative, Harold Lloyd Prod.

AFTER reading all the interesting discussions in THE FILM DAILY on percentage contracts I am still forced to inquire: "What's all the shootin' about?"

A lot of powder and good space are being used up, but I notice each fellow is pointing his gun in the direction from which he thinks the enemy is going to rush out and assault him, without first getting the range or any report from the observation corps as to the exact whereabouts of the danger. Why not start a barrage to clean out all the confusing suggestions so that the proposition for percentage contracts can be considered in its proper light?

Will we ever get anywhere so long as the exhibitor has an idea it is all a scheme to pry into his business? Permit me to shout in your pink ear, in plain vulgar words, that it's nobody's business how much any exhibitor makes with pictures in his own theater, although no producer wants to see an exhibitor lose money. And I say this, being a representative of a star and producer whose pictures are just now being sold at the highest figure ever paid for motion picture product.

Exhibitors have been known recently to pay more for pictures than they could reasonably expect would leave them a profit, just to keep the other fellow from getting them. A percentage contract would not leave them in such a hole. It is honestly no business of the producer how much the exhibitor makes on his theater. He is entitled to all the profit he can get from smart buying, economic management and shrewd exploitation without being asked impertinent questions, nor as Exhibitor Ricketts says, should he be penalized by being charged for it. Perhaps the tax collector will catch him, but not the producer.

Give credit to the producer for knowing that the more profit the exhibitor makes the more he will be inclined to pay better prices for future product, be he ever so tight or hard boiled.

No sir! Percentage contracts will never be based on the amount of an exhibitor's profits, but I'll tell you later on, just what they must be based on. My point is, that all the talk about an adjusting board to fix equitable percentages, when percentage contracts become general, is simply folder-rol. No such thing will ever happen because exhibitors won't have it and they'd be foolish if they allowed it. And producers would be foolish to ask it.

On the other hand neither the production cost of a picture nor the profit made by the producer has a thing to do with its selling price nor with any percentage contract. That also is nobody's business except the producer himself. If he pays a flapper star every month as much as some bank presidents get in a year, it's nobody's business but the press agent. It's the producer's own lookout whether the picture crimps his bank roll for a million or only $40,000. He is entitled to a million if he can make a $40,000 picture so popular it will earn that sum, and same

Why the Shootin'?

the exhibitor, he need never report any but the tax man. If his million-dollar picture loses money, that is wise the producer's funeral to which the exhibitor shouldn't be expected to take the trouble to send flowers. Exhibitors would give the high to Douglas Fairbanks, Mary Pickford, Harold Lloyd, or Douglas Cleland — four producers whose pictures are piling up profits for exhibitors — if ever asked to chip in to cover a loss on some production. Their profit nor loss by a producer rests the exhibitor except as a matter for gossip.

For should the rising cost of production be ascribed to the clamor of exhibitors who are only trying to interpret what they think is the box-office demand. They may be silly about it, but they pay the price for "fillum" when it has the names they want and that's why the producers go to the expense to get them the stars, I mean.

Give the exhibitor the stars and the story that he likes and he will buy the picture or he won't. The producers can't make him sell it, and he lays down on a good picture that might "pack 'em in" with a little extra work and showmanship, the producer suffers without any chance of a come-back. He would suffer the more if the picture were played on a percentage contract. And he gets it from one who has sold "the rights" in both cities and tanks, the foremost thought back in the head of the successful exhibitors in selecting their "fillums" is to pick the ones that promise to "sell themselves."

So where does the producer get the money when percentage contracts become the fashion? With flat rentals he need gamble only on his story. With percentage contracts he must make the gamble which every exhibitor is forced under flat rentals to make on weather conditions, hold-overs, earthquakes and even deaths and national calamities. In the course of a year exhibitors can be pretty hard hit with such things. Adverse weather alone probably costs exhibitors several million dollars every year in gross takings, knocking them out of profits often that he needed to recoup some previous loss. Well then, when percentage contracts become the rage, it is going to be the result of united pressure from exhibitors—and they are bound to see the good of it soon as they get over from their foolish fears—and not the result of a desire on the part of producers. After all the exhibitor is the only dictator in the film business. The producer is entirely at his mercy and always will be.

What happens when the exhibitor neglects business and fails to sell a good picture which he thinks will sell itself with a few posters on a house front—a picture which another exhibitor advertised properly and played to a nice profit? Other product with the same star suffers and the picture itself gets a black eye wherever his poor business is heard about. He may even write to his favorite trade paper about it. It has been done. He is especially sore if he paid a flat rental, but with a percentage contract the producer must go fifty-fifty on his mistakes.

At this point the exhibitor who did make good, and knew how to sell the picture which he bought as he believes at a bargain rental, steps up and yells as if it were gospel truth: "What about me? Am I to be penalized and made to cough up a share of my profits by changing to a percentage contract? What did the producer do to help me secure the increased gross which that pin head in Ipswich didn't know how to go after? Not on your life."

Let's see about that. Suppose it had stormed cats and chipmunks, or the biggest Mason in town had his funeral parade, or the fireman's ball or any one of many things that could happen had killed business that day, where is the exhibitor's insurance against standing the whole loss himself excepting with a percentage contract?

If he did get the business, he did it with a picture that offered the opportunity if he would only do his part—and which he is in honor bound to do when the producer turns out for him such pictures—so who is better entitled to a share of his profit as an equitable price for the use of the picture? Exhibitors shouldn't get the notion that they own the picture, simply because they are permitted to play it. Whatever box-office value it may have or he may obtain from it, lies in the picture itself and self-defense, the first law of nature, should cause him to extract them. The producer must gamble that he will do it and provides him with all the assistance that skilled men can devise to help him get results.

In any event a percentage contract will be the result only of what he is perfectly satisfied is fair and what the distributor is also satisfied is a fair contract. In a flat rental contract, it is not a question of fairness, but will he sometimes pay the price demanded if forced to do so by competition.

Now comes the ticklish question of how are percentage contracts going to be equitable if no general authority or equity board doesn't fix the percentage?

As said at the start, no one will ever be given the right to inquire into the expenditures or the profits, either of the exhibitor or the producer. Dismiss that from your mind without further palaver. The selling price of a picture is based on only one fact: its income value tested by the box-office. What it cost the producer and what profits the theater may make or the producer may make doesn't figure. The gross at the box-office is the only thing that counts. It is up to the exhibitor to keep his expenses on a level that will leave a profit from his proper share of that gross business and it is up to the producer to get his money back and a profit on each and every picture from his share of the gross box-office sales, what ever that may be.

And it is up to the salesman and the exhibitor to figure out what that respective share should be on every picture sold. How they are going to do it does not concern me just now, but I'm dead sure it will be only on the gross income basis, because that is the only fair and equitable basis. Any exhibitor can easily figure his prospects from his past experience with big pictures, and soon decide how much his share must be to cover expenses. The salesman, on the other hand, will soon know the average gross from the same class of big pictures in every class of theaters and town, and can estimate the pictures drawing power before he starts to sell it. And the two must get together on percentage. No fixed percentage would ever be possible, because no two pictures have exactly the same value.

No picture can have a fixed market value until it is tried on the public, and every exhibitor figures the best he can on his own theater and his own public. He must do that even when he pays flat rentals, but he can never be sure. He may pay a fancy price for the new picture by a star whose values increase with each picture, and then adverse weather or some act of God spoils everything. His only protection lies in a percentage contract. How then can his contract be equitable otherwise? And why should not the producer take his chances with the exhibitor?

Today all flat rental prices, with a few exceptions, are set according to the estimated selling valuation placed on the picture before it is ever released, yet no general sales manager can say what is an equitable selling price for the film. He only thinks of what he wants to sell it for and the exhibitor pays as near that price as he can be induced to pay. The only time he will ever be permitted to have a voice in fixing the selling price of a picture will come when they are sold on percentage contracts. Think that over.

It is not easy to estimate in dollars and cents the evil of inequitable contracts—whether rental or percentage. There's many an old stage producer walking Broadway today looking for a job whose bankrupt condition is largely due to inequitable contracts in the theatrical business and that business has always been conducted on percentage contracts. The combined brains of both producers and theater managers refuse to play shows on any other basis because they found out after years of unsettled conditions and unfair results that percentage contracts were most equitable because both the manager and the producer had a voice in deciding the equitable percentage. The real reason is because it is the only equitable way to hold losses to the minimum. The producer is forced to share the loss when ever a loss comes through poor business.

Exhibitors and producers both require something to force them to a more wholesome regard for the business in which they are engaged. Exhibitors who oppose percentage contracts probably think they can "out-smart" the opposition in buying their film and care little about equity or whether the producing end of the game is a success. They squawk against high rentals and high cost of production while the producer and the distributor who must sell the picture squawk against exhibitors for failure to properly exploit the product.

The exhibitor probably wins the squawking championship because he imagines it helps him secure a cheaper rental, but he has never been known to offer constructive suggestions to the producer about what sort of pictures should be produced or not produced. He expects there will always be enough winning pictures to select, no matter how many producers go smash. In fact, there is little to indicate that he cares a tinker's cuss about the producer. If the exhibitor goes to smash the producer doesn't lose any sleep over it either, because he never has had any help from that direction save a rental price for his picture, and has entirely too much grounds for squawking about the poor effort put behind the selling of the picture to the public.

If all three interests concerned—exhibitor, producer and distributor—really want to help the motion picture business, they should chip in and elect about five representatives each to a General Board of Supervision to which all complaints should be forwarded as to a grand jury, which Board of Supervisors should start a campaign of education to correct the apparent evils that are uppermost in all three divisions of the business.

Percentage contracts will probably be a long step in the right direction if they can be made equitable by mutual agreement and thus remove one large sized squawk.

But the production end of the game will never be an entirely sound basis until producers and distributors learn that a bad film should be scrapped and the cost charged off against the next production the same as in the theatrical business, thus saving a million dollars' credit to the producer and the star, instead of attempting to get back the negative cost by letting the film go out to the exhibitor and the public who invariably take their revenge on the star's next several pictures. Percentage contracts may help to correct that evil.

And the exhibitors' game will never be sound until better effort be made to exploit good product, until the exhibitor discards the idea that he can always out-smart the other fellow in buying and until he really learns more about what the public wants to see projected on the screen.

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Dallas—The coming season promises to be a big one for Texas. Out-of-town exhibitors are here buying films and salesmen back from trips all report a bright outlook. Wheat in the western section is in abundance. More cotton seed is being planted than ever before with additional cotton gins going up in the Cape Rock district above the Panhandle.

Films Will be Lecture Topics
The production of motion pictures will be the topic of discussion at many of the annual winter lectures, conducted in school throughout the city by the Board of Education. Dr. Ernest L. Crandall, head of the lecture department has just returned from the coast where he gathered data, from a number of studios, to be used for the lectures. Over 4,000 of these lectures are given yearly in the New York schools by the Board.

S. Labor Department So Discovers After Survey That Covers 65 Industrial Centers—More Employment (Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Washington—The Labor Department has just completed an industrial survey into conditions at 65 centers of business throughout the country and finds that in July there was "an atmosphere in industry that is decidedly optimistic."

All amusement enterprises will probably find the reflection of these conditions at the box-offices. The survey which is conducted regularly by the department this time included 428 firms, each employing 500 or more workers. Thirty-seven cities reported increased employment and twenty-seven a slight decrease.

Say They Have $175,000 Fund

Harry Mackler, president of Local No. 306 stated yesterday that the operators' union had on hand a $175,000 "defense fund" raised through assessments against various members and that this money would be used for either "a fight or a frolic" as the case might be. Mackler denied that the operators had threatened a strike and declared that no extended conference with T. O. C. C. officials had been held.

Exports of unexposed film amounted to 5,031,366 ft., with a value of $133,678, the most important markets being Japan and England. Shipments of negatives totaled 1,274,401 ft., worth $100,657, of which approximately half went to Mexico.

Progress Penalized

Rembusch Has Something to Say Regarding Prices—Calls Block Booking a Menace (Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Indianapolis—Says Frank Rembusch: "In this industry progress on the part of the exhibitor is penalized. If there is a little storeroom show in a town of 5,000, pictures for that theater are very reasonable in price. If this exhibitor would build a large theater out of his earnings, or perhaps

Kane on Star Values

Explains How He Figures Them, Comparing Production Cost with the Gross Collections

Arthur S. Kane has definite ideas about stars and star values. This is how he determines them:

"Star value, in my opinion, goes like this: If a star has to spend or have spent for him $100,000, negative cost only, to gross $200,000, from which distribution, prints, advertising, as well as negative, must be paid, that

FILM DAILY'S INQUIRING REPORTER

QUESTION

Do you think the uniform exhibitor contract is more equitable to both exhibitor and distributor than the old form?

ANSWERS

Edward Abeles, New York exchange manager, Metro—"I think any contract discussed by ten wise men for a year and a half is bound to be better than something formed without such careful consideration. It has points that favor both."

F. Heath Cobb, Grand Asher—"Yes. For the first time in this business, what appears to be an equitable arrangement covering relations between the distributor has been made. Both have their rights defined and both know their limitations."

Murray Garsson—"Had the distributor given the exhibitor what he had demanded originally, he would have had less than he has now received. It is in favor of the exhibitor but nevertheless there is still room for adjustments to be made."

Nathan Hirsch, Aywon Film Corp.—"Yes. The principle of arbitration is part of the uniform contract works advantageously for both parties. Disputes on both sides can thus be settled with satisfaction to all concerned."

M. H. Hoffman, Tiffany Prod.—"A shade in favor of the exhibitor. In the old form contract, the exhibitor had the terms binding upon him without any opportunity of withdrawal. Under the new form, the contract does not become binding unless both sides accept."

Arthur Lee, Lee-Bradford Corp.—"There is no doubt about it. The uniform contract makes the understanding between the exhibitor and the distributor a definite one. Each knows where the other stands."

Exhibition Values

Reports generally are to the effect that "The Green Goddess" is going out on an exhibition value of $2,000,000.

Just what the exhibition value (?) of "Ashes of Vengeance" is to be seems a trade secret. But inasmuch as the exhibition value of recent Talmadge pictures has been $1,200,000, and as the latest cost considerably more than any Talmadge picture ever made it is safe to say that previous values must be surpassed. "Ashes" will probably be quoted at somewhere over $1,500,000.

Now this is all very fine. "The Green Goddess" is a mighty fine picture. The Talmadge production is magnificent. But how either of them are going to get that amount in—well, it's interesting.

Progress Penalized

on unwarranted enthusiasm, the price for the same picture is doubled and trebled. If you want to get your film service at a reasonable figure, you should own a little, tumbled-down theater, but if you build a big beautiful theater you can expect to pay a beautiful price for pictures.

"I am not complaining—I am just explaining the system. I know that the distribution and the sales of pictures is all wrong somewhere. There doesn't seem to be any coordination between the buyers and sellers of pictures. The Indiana organization turned down the F. I. L. M. Club and refused to work with it. The point that was made by some of the exhibitors was that the producers are insisting that we give play dates when we buy pictures, but at the same time they insist that we buy groups of pictures, 39 or 52 or whatever it may be, so that if we go before the Film Board, the Board will tell us that we would have to play these pictures and that would keep anyone else from play dates and who is not able to insist on block booking—i. e. the small independent producer.

"I think block booking is going to ruin the industry, because it prevents booking the particular picture we want for community or theater.

"I am not the most successful exhibitor in the world, but I do know that there isn't anyone who has a more diversified group of theater and I know that certain pictures for certain theaters is the only way that I can operate them at a profit. Exhibitors are beginning to feel that every year some new marketing condition is enforced that makes it more and more difficult to run their business. For example: I had three pictures booked in in August in a certain town and in certain weeks, going on the theory that with these three big pictures I would be able to overcome the summer depression. That was the dope given out recently.

"I didn't know when I booked them last May that there would be a Chautauqua one week, a medicine show for three weeks, and other local conditions of such a nature that it would be impossible for me to do anything except lose a lot of money and waste a lot of good pictures for that particular time, and the film company thinks that I should play them on these dates without any regard to the financial loss that I would incur doing it. I gather from what I heard at the convention that a lot of exhibitors are beginning to realize that if the film clubs are able to enforce their rules, it will not be very long until they will be running their theaters in every way except taking care of the losses. One thing seems certain, the stronger the rules the more opposition by exhibitors."

Plane on Star Values

 star value of 2 to 1. Another tive may cost $300,000 and gross
 ,000 in rentals over the world.
 plain that star valued is 3 to 1.
 t does not make any difference figures you work with, whether production cost $20,000 or $800.
 If the picture grosses 2 or 3 s as much as the negative cost, ems to me the star value is 2 to 3 to 1, as the case may be. I n gross collections, not producer's s.

have cited 2 to 1 and 3 to 1 as are the most common categorinto which real drawing stars fall.
 w approximately 2 to 1 they are box-office stars, no matter how n they may be advertised as such.
 3 to 1s are the real top-notchers e business. There are two great ptions and only two of whom I v whose star values figured in this er are known to exceed 3 to 1.
 ou may say that the stars who these various 2 to 1 and other es must use other big elements eir production to help them attain grosses, and that, therefore, much e credit for the drawing power ld be given to the vehicles, other w players in the cast, etc. It s to me that is beside the point.
 uestion is how much money has e spent by or for the chief element star picture in order to bring oss that is a multiple of the ex-iture? It is a fact that practically e stars in the 2 to 1 and 3 to 1 es must spend or have spent for relatively large sums for vehiccasts, directors and mounting.
 he two exceptional star values above do not make use of these ively large expenditure elements on the other hand their pictures tremendous drawing cards, givthem extraordinary star values.
 n those successful pictures in h there are not stars, other ele-ts are starred such as internation-or nationally-famous vehicles, ers and directors, and to these ents go the values which other-pertain to the star."

is not the greatest picture ever made, nor is it the most gorgeous spectacle ever filmed.
 It doesn't employ all of the most famous it is not as large as the foreign debt. It is just another evidence of the concerted effort which has been made to produce feature pic-

"Mothers-in-Law—Preferred-Grand Central Theater, St. Louis (Special to THE FILM DAILY)

St. Louis—Newspaper opinions on "Mothers-in-Law" at the Grand Central follow:—

GLOBE-DEMOCRAT—The photoplay on the bill, overshadowed by the stage attraction but nevertheless fine screen entertainment, is "Mothers-in-Law," featuring Ruth Clifford, Gaston Glass and Edith Yorke. It is a "jazz" picture with a theme that proves that mothers-in-law are only mothers after all.

POST-DISPATCH — The picture, "Mothers-in-Law," is a story that starts and ends on the farm with an interlude in the "big city." * * * There is a tense scene in which the young wife agrees to elope with one of her "set." * * * The young husband's mother, admirably portrayed by Edith Yorke. * * * Ruth Clifford and Gaston Glass are well cast as the newly-weds.

STAR — "Mothers-in-Law" introduces Edith Yorke as a jitney driving, whip-wielding mother-in-law, who is the whole show in the domestic affairs of the silky Ruth Clifford and impeccable Gaston Glass. By her novelty strong arm methods, she squares a triangle.

Bushman-Bayne Going Abroad

Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne may repeat their personal appearance with "Modern Marriage" abroad. Jake Wilk is now in Paris working out details. Bert Adler, acting for Film Traders, Inc. has purchased the entire foreign rights to "Modern Marriage" and is co-operating with Wilk in the plan to send the stars over.

Mammoth Pictures Formed

Mammoth Pictures Corp. has been formed with offices in the State Bldg. Victor B. Fisher is president and general manager with A. Cantor, his assistant. Southard Brown has been placed in charge of publicity and advertising. The first picture will be "Youthful Triumphant" recently completed on the coast. This will be state righted. Lilian Ducey who directed the picture is in town now relative to future stories.

Methodists for Strict Censorship (Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Washington—The Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals of the Methodist Episcopal Church is preparing for a nation-wide reform crusade which will include a stringent censorship of motion pictures. The attitude of the board regarding pictures can be summed up by the following which appears in a statement just issued:

"If the films are to teach our sons derailing, dynamiting, highway robbery, poisoning, seduction and murder; while our daughters are shown how to smoke, drink, deceive and play the harlot, something should be done, should it not?"

More Week Stands

Loew Circuit—Gradually Getting away from Split Weeks—Schiller Back from Trip

J. A. Schiller of the Loew organization has returned from a trip through the South in connection with the inauguration of the new week-end policies in the important key areas in that territory.

He also visited the new Shubert theater, Pittsburgh which will open on September 17 under the Loew banner. From there he went to St. Louis where the Loew organization is building a State theater. The construction work will be started in a few days.

It seems quite likely, that more theaters in New York will be changed to the full week stands, but this policy will not be all-embracing. The Loew officials feel that some of their theaters can be operated to the best advantage on a split-week basis and where that condition exists, no change in policy is expected.

Schiller visited important Southern cities while away. He was formerly in charge of the Loew Southern circuit with headquarters in Atlanta for that reason it is significant when he declares that conditions in these then key cities were never better.

Varner, Craver, Sams Here

B. Varner, of Lexington, R. D., Craver of Charlotte and Senator A. Sams of Winston-Salem are in town from North Carolina to attend a routine meeting of Associated First National Pictures of the Southeast. Varner says conditions in the South are not any too good.

T. O. C. C. Calls Another Meeting

The T. O. C. C. has issued a call for a special meeting to be held on Friday at the Hotel Astor. At that time a decision will be made concerning the exhibitors' situation. The T. O. C. C. claimed yesterday that the demands have been reduced to 25% and by individual vote each T. O. C. C. member has declared against a further increase.

Exhibition Series Through C. B. C.

Exhibition Film has arranged with C. B. C. to distribute a series of four pictures through that organization, the first to be "The Barefoot Boy" which has John Bowers, Marjorie Conner, Sylvia Breamer, Tully Marshall, Harlan, Raymond Hatton and others in it. Leon Rice is president of the company. "The Barefoot Boy" will have a Broadway run for which Adler will handle the exploitation.

Talk of T. O. C. C. Court Action Against Goldwyn Dwindles—Loew Playing "Enemies" Now

The possibility of court action against Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan on the part of the T. O. C. C. over existing contracts on "Enemies of Women" and "Little Old New York" has died out, it is understood, with the framing of a temporary agreement covering the situation.

As a matter of fact, Loew's Metropolitan in Brooklyn is playing "Enemies" all of this week. It goes into the State and the American the last half of this week. Next week, additional Loew houses will play the picture. It was stated by interests friendly to the T. O. C. C. that it made no difference whether the Loew circuit played the picture under a Paramount or a Goldwyn contract so far as the first-run situation was concerned, because Loew houses would exercise their seven day protection clause no matter from whom the picture was booked. A T. O. C. C. official declared that the members expected to get the picture under their Paramount contracts at the old prices and that the question of extending the runs in order to permit Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan to derive a revenue would be optional with the individual exhibitor.

Fox Drops Plan

Corona Plot Sold—Was Once Designed for Eastern Studio—For Residential Use Now

William Fox yesterday disposed of the large plot of ground near Corona, Long Island on which it was originally planned to erect a big studio. The title was closed yesterday and on the land there will be constructed about 75 residences.

Fox production activities will be centered in the 10th Ave plant and at the coast studio. The new plant in Los Angeles will be built on a big plot of ground that will have a number of exterior sets built on it for permanent use.

The abandonment of the Fox Long Island plant is another of similar moves on the part of various organizations. It was recalled yesterday that Selznick planned a monster studio on Queens Blvd., adjoining the Long Island City end of the Queensboro Bridge. Others, too, have talked about Long Island plants along the lines of the United studio in Los Angeles, but up to date, Famous Players seems to be the only company that has carried its original intentions.

Lasky is on record as saying in connection with it that "we have set for ourselves the gigantic task of surpassing 'The Covered Wagon'."

The new group will include "His Children's Children," "The Light that Failed," "The Spanish Dancer," "Stephen Steps Out," "Speejacks," the travel picture; and "West of the Water Tower." In addition to the above concerning which announcements have already been made by Paramount, there will be "The Humming Bird," starring Gloria Swanson and directed by Allan Dwan; and "Argentine Love," another Swanson vehicle directed by Dwan. Tom Meighan will be seen in "Pied Piper Malone," an original written for him by Booth Tarkington which Al Green will direct. As noted, Sam Wood will direct "Big Brother" with Tom Moore

In the Courts

The receivership for the Morosco Holding Corp. has resulted in the filing of an injunction suit by John M. Riehle, the receiver, to get possession of two films, "The Half Breed," and "Slippy McGee," in a suit in which the Greenwich Bank, Oliver Morosco, George R. Bentel and Associated First National are named as defendants.

The complaint alleges that the Morosco Holding Co. owned the stock of the Oliver Morosco Prod. which in turn owned the film rights to the two plays and produced them. It is alleged that with full knowledge of the ownership of the stock by the Morosco Holding Co., the defendants Morosco and Bentel, as officers of Oliver Morosco Prod., assigned the films to the bank as security for loans, and the bank accepted them with full knowledge of the facts. The papers state that the bank has already received $32,664 and is claiming additional money amounting to about $6,000 in the possession of First National, which is distributing the films. The papers ask that the assignment of the films to the Greenwich Bank be declared illegal and that Associated First National be restrained from paying over any more money to the bank, and that the bank account for the money received.

The Commercial Traders Cinema Corp., stated yesterday that the injunction sought by Oscar Apfel to restrain the sale of the prints of "The Trail of the Law," "The Man Who Paid" and "The Wolf's Fangs" had been denied.

Los Angeles—Jules E. Brulatour has instituted suit against H. H. Van Loan for $2,166.66 charging that Van Loan had contracted to write a scenario for $1,666.66; that he had been advanced $500 by Brulatour and then failed to carry out the agreement.

THE second BIG series of H. C. Witwer's knockout stories are miles bigger and better than the first series.

If you liked the first 12 episodes of "FIGHTING BLOOD" you'll rave your head off when you see the new series.

Wait till you see them. If you got business with the first series, rebuild your house or enlarge it to hold the jams that will crash their way to see the second series.

Take a slant at the photo above. That's the way the crowds packed themselves into Sid Grauman's Metropolitan theatre (newest and most lavish theatre in all America), where only the choicest offerings of the screen are shown.

Take our tip. SPEAK FOR THIS NEW SERIES NOW!!! We've taken the sales force off the job on "FIGHTING BLOOD." Our troubles now are apportioning the play dates.

"Drifting"—Universal—Capitol

DAILY NEWS—As Chinese pictures go, the one we're talking about is a good piece of film production. Plenty of bad characters, and fights and fires, but, alas and alack; not enough of the spooky * * *

Come to talk about casts, Priscilla Dean as feminine lead is a peach.

EVENING JOURNAL—It is dramatic, heartrending and thrilling.

All the acting is clever and the photography is excellent. There are two great fights. * * *

Priscilla Dean has the leading role. Her acting won high praise.

MAIL—Most of the sensational features have been much elaborated and indeed improved. * * * Some of the sets are really picturesque and impressive and others resemble the architecture of our larger chop-suey palaces. Priscilla Dean makes the intrepid Cassie a vivid and volcanic figure, and Matt Moore is suave and immaculate as the highly moral captain.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—* * * Although Miss Dean is an artist we did not think she was always the Cassie Cook of John Colton's play. * * *

The settings are distinctly of the lotus blossom type, and there are lots of Chinamen. The invasion scene is quite well done and works up to the big moment. Priscilla Dean does her best work when she is trapped in the missionaries' house. * * *

The story is not unusual and the characters are conventional types, and yet the picture as a whole is fair entertainment.

POST—Priscilla Dean is an expurgated edition of the Cassie Cook "as she was spoke," but looks and acts the required part decidedly well. Wallace Beery is a sinister Jules Repin, and, of course, one always expects and gets fine character acting from him. * * * The staging and photography of this play are good, but the sun of the matter is that the story doesn't ring true.

SUN—Here is another case of a play that is a failure turning into a movie that is a success, for the screen allows better opportunity than the stage. * * *

TELEGRAM—The role of Cassie Cook, * * * offers a range of dramatic possibilities suited to the dramatic talents of Miss Dean.

In transferring the play to the screen the story gains in scope and is magnified to a real motion picture thriller.

TIMES—The Chinese atmosphere * * * has been unusually well carried out, and although the story has a somewhat abrupt termination, it is nevertheless interesting and in spots quite thrilling. * * * Priscilla Dean and Wallace Beery are capital in their respective parts.

TRIBUNE—* * * For Priscilla Dean, leaves us as cold as a lemon ice, no matter what she does. * * *

The story is decidedly incoherent.

WORLD—* * * Without the blaze of torches in the night and the calvary dashing up at the last moment there wouldn't be much of a picture.

The introduction of "little Bruce," the missionary's small son, helps out some. Miss Dean must share the honors of a good characterization with Miss Wong.

"The Silent Partner"—F. P.-L.—Rivoli

AMERICAN—It was a very simple and ingenious story, with one bold, bad man in it. * * *

I cannot say of "The Silent Partner" that it gave me brain fag.

EVENING JOURNAL—Leatrice Joy, * * * plays her part well and others in the cast * * * help materially in making a lively picture. Mr. Maigne deserves praise for the photoplay. * * *

MAIL—It is a sympathetic theme, made doubly so by the restrained and unimaginative work of Leatrice Joy, who made the heroic wife a tense and convincing figure.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—As a matter of fact "The Silent Partner" is the merest bit of dramatic down and a zephyr of content or discontent is sufficient to blow it into your esteem or out of it.

POST—Leatrice Joy * * * makes her part of the far-seeing wife a living, sympathy-inspiring thing. The cast is well chosen throughout and it is a generally entertaining picture.

SUN—* * * She is a very good actress. In fact, as the wife * * * Miss Joy repeats the very fine impression she made in "Man-slaughter." * * *

TIMES—Owen Moore plays the part of Cuburn. He is not particularly good in this production. * * *

One of those foolish parties has been incorporated in this photoplay * * * "nice little picture."

TRIBUNE—It is just another one of those "Home-Sweet-Home" with variations stories. * * * Any picture would be interesting with Leatrice Joy and Owen Moore in it, for they are two charmingly human, likeable, good-looking persons whose vicissitudes you follow eagerly.

WORLD—What's wrong with the picture—the slender plot; the stereotyped characterization; the dredging for morals.

What's worth while—Leatrice Joy.

"The Midnight Alarm"—Vitagraph—Rialto

AMERICAN—Every ten-twenty-thirty-cent situation, except tying the girl to the railroad tracks is in "The Midnight Alarm." * * * The film is crammed with action of the most melodramatic kind.

EVENING JOURNAL—The filming is on an elaborate scale and much attention was given to many scenes, particularly that of the fire.

HERALD—A typical nickel picture—badly acted, badly directed and absurd in its plot. Even its numerous thrills are phoney. If there is one legitimate moment in the film we missed it while we were trying to read the program in the dark.

MAIL—The fire scene is excellent and the flames and smoky confusion have very genuine thrills of their own. Unfortunately none of their exciting qualities are shared by a very wooden cast.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—In this Vitagraph offering things happen quickly enough and it contains the essentials of good melodrama. * * * Is regular ten-twenty-thirty melodrama, but as such is pretty good entertainment.

TELEGRAM—* * * A powerful story * * *

TRIBUNE—The suspicion did cross our mind that it was not intended to be taken seriously. It must be burlesque. It is done broadly, and if you can go to the Rialto and accept it in that spirit you will have a marvelous time. * * * Our advice is, sincerely, do not miss "The Midnight Alarm." But mind you, it is not to be taken seriously!

WORLD—What's wrong with this picture—its appalling senescence; the substitution of property destruction for drama.

What's worth while—the struggles of the competent cast to render their material credible.

Newspaper opinions from out-of-town papers will only appear when the feature reviewed has its world's premiere in that city. New York newspaper opinions will also be published when the production reaches Broadway.

"To the Last Man"—F. P.-L.—Metropolitan, Los Angeles (Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Los Angeles—Newspaper opinions on "To the Last Man," now at the Metropolitan are as follows:

EXAMINER—The picture is a thriller in every sense of the word * * * an admirable cast.

EXPRESS—The title well describes the tense atmosphere * * * the backgrounds are unusual in their wildly picturesque beauty.

RECORD—The title is literally correct. Murders and killings take place regularly * * * a good cast.

TIMES—* * * Beautiful photography * * * Fairly interesting and entertaining * * * High lights are found in the cast, however.

Investigators There Only One Day—No City Set for Next Session in Late September
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Ston—The Federal Trade Commission hearing into the affairs of Famous Players and allied organizations was very brief. It ran one day, terminating Tuesday afternoon, with statement made relative to the seat of the hearing. It seems likely that there will no session late September.

Most of the agitation here in New England centered around the theaterings of Alfred S. Black, of Black's England Theaters, his selling gradually to Famous Players, and alleged summary methods of acquiring other theaters throughout the country. These practices of his, however, the testimony showed, were alleged in for the most part before Famous Players acquired any interest in his holdings. The Trade Commission (Continued on Page 4)

Frank L. Newman Says It's the One Way in Which to Gauge Value of Productions

By FRANK L. NEWMAN
Newman Theater, Kansas City, Mo.

I have always been opposed to this chain theater operation where one buys film for 20, 30, or 100 theaters. I believe that every city should have a fair chance in buying its pictures for what they are actually worth and should pay the producers every dollar to which they are entitled.

In my experience, I have found that the producer will force the exhibitor to take a number of pictures they themselves know the exhibitor must run at a loss in order to get a certain big picture that will be profitable, and, of course, the big picture must be paid for with real gold.

I think the big thing that should be worked out is that every picture should stand on its own merit and that both large and small cities

Carl Anderson, president of the Anderson Pictures Corp and the F. B. O. have entered into an arrangement whereby the product and salesmen of the Anderson company will be found in the 33 F. B. In making the announcement, Anderson said he considered this step towards the centralizing of distribution, an economic necessity toward which, in his opinion, the industry is moving.

Eighteen productions are to be marketed by this arrangement with each of the eighteen individually exploited. The block selling system will not be used. Additional pictures which have unusual exploitation possibilities will also be handled.

No Change In Release

"Ashes of Vengeance" Will Go Through First National, Despite Reports to the Contrary

"Ashes of Vengeance" will be released through First National as part of the Norma Talmadge series, despite reports to the contrary. It is understood First National is now selling the picture to exhibitors.

There have been a number of reports in circulation relative to the production. In one quarter it was stated that the high production cost had interfered with the arranging of a suitable exhibition value between representatives of Joseph M. Schenck and First National and that the run at the Apollo was being maintained to indicate the true box-office drawing power of the production. It is understood that no dates have been set for the regular Broadway showing at the Strand, the local first-run for First National productions.

The picture enters its fourth and last week at the Apollo next week.

should have the same chance to buy pictures on competitive bids. In other words, the exhibitor must not have to combat underground power that will take a picture away from him regardless of the proposition he may make.

I have always believed that a fair and equitable percentage basis is really the fair way in which to judge the box office value. I appreciate the fact that it would be impossible for every exhibitor to run on the percentage basis in every city, but in key cities where there is an exchange and the producing company has an office force that can take care of the key city theater, I believe it would be the best for the producer to run his pictures on a percentage basis in these cities as well as large cities. It would be through this medium that they would know the real value of the picture in the territory.

They could thus be guided as to what price they could ask in the surrounding territory. Very often the producer is over-enthusiastic over his picture and demands a price which is unreasonable, and at times possibly he underestimates his product. I know of no other medium that would give them a sound, reasonable and fair basis on which to work than on the percentage basis. Here, I want to give you a concrete example of what percentage basis means to the producer. Several weeks ago, a good friend of mine was in the city trying to sell me a production, which was unusual and he asked me what I thought it was worth. I told him that this was one picture the box office value of which I did not know and asked him why should either of us guess at this. Maybe he would sell it too cheaply or maybe he would over-rate it and I thought the best thing to do was to play it on a percentage basis.

We are playing this picture this week. I am sure I could have bought this picture outright for at least $2000 less than the producer will receive for his share. Would it have been fair for me to have purchased this outright and not have given the producer all he was entitled to?

The statement I am making to you is an actual fact. So you can see the value of a percentage arrangement in a key city or in a large city.

Boston Hearing Brief

sion counsel for the local hearing was headed by William H. Fuller, assisted by Gaylord R. Hawkins and Joseph L. Klein. Although Black filed no answer to the amended bill of complaint he was represented by his counsel, Herman Mintz. Robert T. Swaine, of the firm of Cravath, Henderson and Degersdorff, handled the case for Famous Players here, while assistant counsel was Bruce Bromley and C. Frank Reavis, Jr.

As was the case in Dallas, at the sessions of the trial held there, practically all of the testimony given during the short session in Boston was from exhibitors, although exchange managers were also called to the stand.

The first witness called was William P. Gray, who has offices in Boston and who testified that in addition to managing his own chain of 31 houses, spread through 20 New England towns, he was also manager for the Famous Players circuit of 25 houses.

He said that he took charge of the latter's Maine and New Hampshire houses in August, 1922, and took over the rest in February of this year; that he booked pictures by theaters and not for the circuit, in his own houses and those run by Famous Players as well, and that beside their own product these houses used many First National, Metro, United Artists, Warner Brothers and pictures from the studios of other prominent producers. The bulk of his testimony was taken up with a description of the produce-owned houses.

Attorney Fuller, examining J. W. Sawyer, New England manager for Vitagraph, tried to get him to describe some of the Famous Players theater holdings which had been sold, but with no great success.

M. A. Hill, Metro's New England manager testified that in 1920, after Famous Players had bought into the Black New England circuit, the prices paid him for Metro pictures was slightly lower than usual, but that in the fiscal year of 1922-23, when Famous secured full control of the Black interests, the prices received had been entirely satisfactory, and that their relations were of the friendliest. He also brought out the fact that in Boston two week's protection is given all first-run houses by exchanges in the local territory.

His testimony also brought out the fact that there are now seven theater circuits in New England, and that from the standpoint of returns from other centers, that it is important to give all pictures their New England first-runs in Boston, a practice, however, that is not as general as it might be.

The circuits he referred to were Goldstein Brothers, with 30 theaters, the 30 Gordon houses, S. Z. Poli with 16, Graphic with 15, Boas with 8, Jake Lourie with 5 and Elm Amusement with 9.

J. H. Brennan, manager of Loew's State, testified that in 1922-23 he showed 40 Paramount pictures at his house, 23 Metros, 12 First Nationals and several others from prominent producers. V. J. Morris, manager of the Orpheum, Loew's other big Boston house, declared that out of 70 features shown by him in the same period, 30 were Paramount features and 11 were Metros.

J. W. Conn, owner of two small houses here, the Sterling and the Star, testified that after Black sold out to Famous Players he had a hard time in getting films, but on cross-examination admitted that he only needed the product of one well-organized brand to run successfully, and that he had been offered 52 features by Universal. He claimed that he had finally been forced to sell out to Famous Players for $105,000.

J. B. Ames, of Littleton, N. H., who formerly operated the Park at Barre, Vt., admitted under examination that he had sold out to Black in 1918, that he had stayed on as manager and had also been employed by Black in securing other theaters but had later been discharged.

He offered the testimony that Black on their trips showed theater owners plans of houses he threatened to build if they did not sell, and in this way acquired houses in Northfield and Morrisville, Vt. at low figures. This happened in 1918 and 1919.

Mrs. Minnie C. Humphrey of Manchester, N. H., who operated a theater in Derry, from 1915 to 1922, David J. Adams, Concord, N. H. theater owner and George A. Cross of Northfield, Vt., all suffered under the Black methods of purchasing, they testified. Black threatened to build opposition heaters if they failed to sell, they said.

State Senator Walter G. Hartford, of Longmeadow, R. I., manager of the Imperial, Pawtucket, testified to keen rivalry in that city between Famous Players and Keith. The new Strand there, in which Black is or was interested, was using the Famous players product exclusively, he said, in its fight against the Keith interests. He said that his relations with Paramount and Famous Players always were satisfactory.

Capitol

A soloist with the orchestra is part of the opening number when David Sapirstein plays "Concerto," first movement, on the piano. A request number, "My Country," a short reel with a symphonic score, is next, followed by "Zigeunerweisen," by the orchestra and the Capitol Magazine, "A Celestial Fantasy" with the entire Capitol ballet corps and soloists precedes the feature, a Universal picture titled "Drifting." Organ selections conclude.

Rialto

"Il Guarany" is the overture. Riesenfeld's Classical Jazz, the Rialto News and Jewel Song from "Faust" follow in order. "The Midnight Alarm" is the feature. Lillian Powell, danseuse in "The Street Urchin" and a Pathe comedy, "The Man About Town" are the last two numbers on the program.

Rivoli

The Rivoli program comprises the overture, a selection from "La Tosca"; "In The Gloaming," a symphonized home tune sung by Miriam Lax, soprano, and Adrian de Silva, tenor; the Pictorial Weekly; "Dance Fantasy"; "The Silent Partner," the feature and Pietro Bucci, baritone rendering "Barber of Seville." QUESTION

Where the so-called $1,000,000 picture is road-showed, how long should it be before Mr. Average Exhibitor gets the picture through the regular exchange system?

ANSWERS

James V. Bryson, handling "The Hunchback of Notre Dame"—"One season anyway. So far as 'The Hunchback' is concerned, the production will be ready for the regular exhibitor by the time the road shows have covered the country."

Arthur S. Friend, Distinctive Pictures Corp.—"I don't believe motion pictures should be road-showed and if they are, such handling should be arranged so that the exhibitor gets the production within six months."

Charles Haring, Haring and Blumenthal Enterprises—"It will take about a year for the picture to play in that way. I think that, after a picture is exploited in that manner, the small exhibitor would be a damned fool to play it."

Ernest Kopp, Strand Theater, White Plains, N. Y.—"I don't think big pictures should ever go out as road shows. The exhibitor who pays high rentals for the regular run of pictures certainly should not be deprived of the special productions when they come along."

Robert Lowenberg, Manager, Rialto, Whitestone, L. I.—"Six months would be about right. The exhibitor could then cash in on the advance exploitation and popularity wave on which the picture is traveling. Waiting 12 or 18 months would certainly take the edge off it."

J. J. McCarthy, handling "The Covered Wagon"—"The Birth of a Nation" is the only precedent to go on and that took three years. The country can't be covered thoroughly in less than that time. I think "The Covered Wagon" will take as long as "The Birth."

Amount Week Starts Sept. 2—
"A Million More" the Slogan Adopted By Sales Force

The annual Paramount Week starts Sept. 2. The entire Famous Players organization is set for it.
Company officials of the company declare this is the largest newspaper advertising campaign ever launched in the

The sales organization has adopted the slogan, "A Million More," and it a result, it is planned to have every

To Paris Next

Fitzmaurice's New Picture Will Take Him to France—Italy, Stagnant,
He Says

George Fitzmaurice's next picture with Samuel Goldwyn and First National will take him to Paris to shoot exteriors. He plans to make the interiors here just as has been done in the case of "The Eternal City."

The director has about a month's work remaining on the Hall Caine and then plans a short vacation before sailing abroad. Fitzmaurice says he is strongly in favor of shooting exteriors in the locale described in the story, but believes interiors could be made in this country.

In Italy, Fitzmaurice needed a boy and a girl. In all of Rome he found only one boy and one girl who suited him and the girl had had no previous theater training. When he had need of a white-haired man to portray a priest, a search of Rome brought no results so an actor was brought from Paris.

Production in Italy is not progressing, according to Fitzmaurice. The film is advanced by Italian producers that the financial support of Germany has been withdrawn because of German influence.

Seek 1,000 Operators

T. O. C. C. Ready for Battle—Expect
No Trouble in Getting Skilled Mechanics

The T. O. C. C. is evidently prepared for a battle with the operators' union. In yesterday's morning papers there appeared a blind ad which read as follows:

"Wanted, 1,000 motion picture operators holding New York licenses.
Steady positions under contract."

A general meeting has been called for this morning at the Hotel Astor when the final decision will probably be made. The tone of the want ad evidently indicates how the organization feels about the situation. There was an executive meeting held yesterday in the Chamber's headquarters. The organization is absolutely opposed to wage increases of any kind.

It is not expected there will be any trouble in getting the operators desired. T. O. C. C. officials declare their wants will be filled without any trouble and that the new men will equal the old in technical ability. The Reel Club, an organization operating independently of the Local 306, may be called upon for part of the necessary number.

$500,000. Rothafel will also be added to the board of directors.

Revolutionary Sales Plan of Famous Players for Coming Season

Reported All Pictures Will Be Sold For Coming Season on Exhibition Value Demonstrated by Pre-Release in Many Leading Cities—Will Result in Sale of Picture by Picture—Effective November 1

It is reported that the sales policy of Famous Players is to be completely changed for the coming season.

Instead of selling the Paramount product as heretofore, it is understood that the revolutionary plan to be put into effect beginning with Nov. 1 will do away with this tried and seasoned method.

It is also said that Famous will sell on a picture to picture basis; and that each picture will have demonstrated its value at the box office prior to the sale. This demonstration will be made prior to the release date, and will occur in a number of zones, embracing all the country, for the purpose of demonstrating the value of each picture.

That Paramount will put behind each of these pre release showings the pressure of a special exploitation and advertising campaign can be expected.
Naturally, if this plan is to be adopted
Famous will make every effort to enhance the value of the picture. It is understood that prior to this pre-release showing the pictures cannot be bought; this for the reason that Famous will take no chances of under selling its product for the coming season.

When efforts were made to obtain a statement from Famous officials yesterday it was pointed out that the sales plan, as well as productions for the coming season, would be made public in the official announcement of the company to be made today, and in view of this no other statement would be made.

More Bobby Irons

Last June, for the Spring Golf Tournament, the Exhibitors
Herald, through John S.
Spargo, its New York representative, presented 20 bobby irons to 20 lucky players. These clubs were so much appreciated that The Herald has again come to the fore and will offer for the September tournament
20 more bobby irons.

John Spargo makes the offer in a delightful and complimentary letter and the Committee takes this means of thanking him, and The Herald, for the generous and kindly offer.

Putting It Over

Here is how a brother exhibitor put his show over. Send along your ideas. Let the other fellow know how you cleaned up.

A Real "Main Street"

St. Louis—Skouras Brothers used a very attractive lobby entrance for the presentation of "Main Street" at the Lyric Skydrome.

A beautiful garden forms the entrance, running over 100 yards long. This was turned into a miniature Main Street, erecting lamp-posts, buildings, billboards, etc.

Signs Placed on Letter Boxes

The backing of the post office authorities and Letter Carriers' Association proved enough material to launch an effective campaign for "Loyal Lives," at the Central. A number of post office executives attended, as well as the Letter Carriers' Association band, which played for some time in Times Square prior to entering the theater. Another arrangement was made for the placing of a card announcing the showing on every letter box on Broadway from 36th to 96th streets.

"Three Ages" Goes Over

San Francisco—When "Three Ages" opened at Loew's Warfield it drew to capacity, due, maybe to the three weeks' campaign conducted by Harry Brand.

The first step was a letter sent to 100 prominent citizens. It read: "Prepare! This concerns You personally; San Francisco will soon have the power of—K. K. K." The letters resulted in notification of the police. Later, small scribes appeared throughout the city with the words "K. K. K." and warning that the K. K. K. had something in store for San Francisco. Crude writing and stenciling was done in various nooks and corners, each bearing the words

"K. K. K." Next a 24 sheet was put up and on it in black and white was "Prepare! K. K. K. Is Coming," the theater and date strip was added a week later.

Then, to break the news, appeared a series of 24 sheets—with the long looked for news, "Keaton's Kolossal Komedy, Three Ages," which appeared across the poster. It was reported in the early part of the campaign that the K. K. K. had hired a theater; this caused a furor.

Heralds, throwaways, scribes, posters, etc., announcing the picture, the theater and the date concluded the campaign.

90 Day Ticket to Contest Winner

Tacoma—An essay contest was staged by Manager McManus of the Colonial with the assistance of Harry C. Eagles, Paramount exploiteer, for "Back Home and Broke."

The theater tied up with the News Tribune, and a story was run telling briefly the plot of the play and urging the business men of the town to relate their experiences in a not-more-than-20-word letter to the paper, the best letter-writer to be awarded a 90-day complimentary ticket to the theater, and the next best story a 30-day ticket. Each day the results were printed and since speculation was rife as to whose story was the best, the picture got more publicity than usual.

Omaha Paper Runs Contest

Omaha—"The Omaha Bee" and the Moon theater put over a successful tie-up in connection with the showing of "Trailing African Wild Animals."

For the entire week preceding the showing the paper printed a photograph each day of one of the animals shown in the picture. To each child between the ages of 5 and 16 who forwarded the picture to the editorial offices with an attempt at identification, a free ticket to the theater was given. Prizes of $10, $5, $3 and $2 were given to those children who identified the animals correctly.

The contest received the help of the librarian of the public library who voluntarily, through the paper, offered to place books and pictures of various wild animals in the reading room for those children who wished to consult them and to give the children every possible personal aid.

Lesser Answers

facts, there are two qualities which are responsible for the pre-eminence of the American picture. The first is in itself fundamentally a defect, for it consists in playing up to the ignorance and the low cultured standards of the American public as a whole. How low these standards are may be gathered from a report that "Oliver Twist" failed in the States on a whole, because it was 'too high-brow for the small towns.' To English people who have seen this hybrid hash of Dickens and dishwater such a statement may seem extraordinary, but in itself, in what it postulates as to the type of people for whom pictures are made, it is a tragedy."

To which Lesser makes the following reply:

"My experience has brought me to the conclusion that in small towns and by small I mean the great majority of rural towns in America, the popular demand is for subjects dealing with American life realistically produced. But stories of other countries dealing with subjects of modern life are also constantly sought for.

"American producers have well recognized that the classics of other countries that have endured for years contain, aside from their vast literary assets, stories of vast appeal and some of these stories have been produced with great success.

"In my sincere endeavor to advance the art of the motion picture, I produced 'Oliver Twist' and the facts contained in the above article are not altogether correct as this production met with wonderful success everywhere and to date has grossed over $1,000,000.

"English literature properly produced in America is popular. This could not be evinced any stronger than in the case of 'David Copperfield' which, incidentally, was made by an English company. Take for another example 'Disraeli' which met with the greatest financial and artistic success when shown on our screens.

"Mary Pickford, it is stated, will make Thomas Hardy's 'Tess of the d'Urbervilles' on a pretentious scale. I could mention many other English stories and books from European countries. Take for instance, 'Winter Comes,' 'Limehouse Nights,' 'The Vicar of Wakefield,' 'The Little Minister' and then not to forget the greatest success of all, 'Robin Hood' as given the screen by Douglas Fairbanks.

"One of the chief reasons of my contemplated European tour is to interest myself in the production rights of books written by such authors as H. G. Wells, Arnold Bennett, Hugh Walpole and John Galsworthy and to meet and confer with writers of such importance.

Clara Beranger Going Abroad

Clara Beranger, having just arrived from Los Angeles, will sail Sept. 4 for Europe. She will remain abroad about two months and on her return to New York she will meet William de Mille and aid him in cutting "Everday Love," which he will make in Los Angeles during her absence.

New Comedy Cartoon Series

Lee-Bradford has signed Frank Nankivell, Walter Stark and A. S. Hutchinson, cartoonists, to make a series of comedy cartoons in color. "Robinson Crusoe's Return on Friday," the first, has been finished. The Leviathan carried a print of the first cartoon on her recent trip to Europe.

Metro For Percentage

Marcus Loew Declares His Company Will Only Book That Way At a Luncheon in London

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
London—Marcus Loew has created a deal of unusual interest here as a result of his declaration made at a recent luncheon that Metro would book its new productions on the percentage basis only. The occasion was a luncheon given in his honor by Sir Sam Jury at which were present about 300 exhibitors.

During the course of his address, Loew said that when he had assumed the control of Metro he was afraid of the percentage but that he was now convinced that it was the only way to do business in a satisfactory manner. William, at the close of the Loew luncheon said he was open to consider other positions along these lines from independent exhibitors.

Loew's interesting announcement has caused a diversity of opinion in the exhibiting circles since the percentage basis is not particularly popular at the moment.

Chaney Guest at Lunch

John Chaney, just in from the coast, was introduced to various newspaper editors at a lunch given in his honor at the Astor on Saturday. Chaney will appear at the premiere of "The Chalkback of Notre Dame," at the Metropolitan theater on Sunday.

Minneapolis Next?

It was reported on Saturday that the Federal Trade Commission would reopen the hearing against the Famous Players in Minneapolis sometime next month. When asked in Minneapolis had been decided upon for the next site for the hearing, local Trade Commission officials stated that it was not known there and as the opening date had not been decided.

Williams Process

Production Values Enhanced But with Costs Correspondingly Lowered—Unusual Results Obtained

Charles Brabin, just in from the Hollywood studio at Culver City, is enthusiastic over the results obtained by the Williams process in production not only by himself, but other exhibitors as well.

Brabin declares that "Doug" is getting a number of shots made by the Williams process in "The Thief of Bagdad," and Cecil De Mille is using a number.

Up Against It

By BEN DAVIS

Of the Schine Theatrical Enterprises, Operating 18 Houses Up-State

The new fall season is staring us in the face. The independent exhibitor, and this means the exhibitor who must depend upon his theater for his bread and butter, and not in any way affiliated with the producer-distributor-exhibitor companies, is facing it with a groan.

He now knows that higher rental prices for film is no joke. And this sad fact has been brought home in spite of Convention Hall speeches that prices of film must come down if the independent exhibitor is to remain in business, and the industry saved from going to the bow-wows.

WHO IS TO BLAME?

The exhibitor blames the producers, the distributing companies, and the producer-distributor-exhibitor companies pass the buck to the public saying, the public demands (perhaps) unusually elaborate attractions, and put it up to the actors and studio mechanics and raw materials, for the excessive salaries demanded, unfair wages, and peak prices of raw material, all making for higher film rentals.

In spite of the attempt and earnest effort to bridge over differences between distributor and exhibitor, the chasm between them is widening, and this year more than ever.

WHERE THE BLAME BELONGS

To touch the real sore spot and lay the blame at the proper door, the independent exhibitor should look into his box-office mirror and say, "I am guilty." This is worth repeating. The exhibitor is responsible for all the ills and evils affecting him.

The reason for this is simple enough. The exhibitor is self-centered, secretive about his business, and considers every other exhibitor as his competitor and enemy. This results in a short sightedness which is next to total blindness. The independent exhibitor is so occupied with his petty troubles that he gives no thought to the morrow. He does not learn the lessons which are constantly before him, and profit by example.

HOW THE DISTRIBUTORS LEARNED

For a long time the producing companies considered themselves keen competitors and hated rivals. They attempted several organizations for mutual protection but these dismally failed. Vast losses made them realize the value of organization and constructive work for their benefit, regardless of the keen competitive field. Vast losses forced them to bury the hatchet and get an organizer who understands constructive work. This organizer had to be a national figure and out of the industry, one whose integrity no one could doubt. Coming to their senses resulted in their present Hays organization, and Will Hays, everybody admits, is doing very effective work for his organization.

LOWERING PRICES AT THE EXHIBITOR CONVENTIONS

Fine oratory at conventions about high prices of film and that film rentals must come down, were wasted words absorbed by

Peekskill Case

Settled Out of Court—Bernstein, Schenck and Associated Dispose of House to Peekskill Theaters

The action of the Peekskill Theaters Co., Inc., against the Advance Amusement Co., and officials of Loew's, Inc., has been settled out of court. It is understood that as part of the settlement that the houses formerly operated by members of the family of Bernstein, Schenck and others of the Loew organization, has been taken over by the Peekskill Theater corporation.

It will be recalled that the Peekskill people brought action claiming that they were being held up on film supply because of the action of the Advance Theatre—the house operated by those mentioned—and when all other efforts to obtain film failed they brought court action. The lower court decided against the Peekskill company but the Appellate division reversed the findings of the lower court and the decision indicated that in the opinion of the higher court criminal action might hold against the Advance people.

Subsequently the settlement took place.

Maude Adams to Produce "Kim"

It was reported in the local dailies on Saturday that Maude Adams intended to produce Rudyard Kipling's "Kim," and would make the picture in India.

It is understood that Miss Adams, after experimenting several years, has developed a new process with regard to lighting, and other technical phases of picture production.

Record Sales

Universal Business in New York Territory Reported Greatest in History of Company

Universal sales officials claim that business contracted for up to date in this territory has been greater in volume than ever before done by that company and incidentally declare that all through the country their bookings are way ahead of any other year.

When this claim was put up to several leading New York exhibitors one of them said: "I would not be surprised if this was so. Universal got the big get-away for the coming season when 'Merry Go Round' developed a tremendous business at the Rivoli. On the strength of that showing not only this feature, but convention hall walls. Why? Because exhibitors, as an organized national body, cannot present national figures divided into territories and zones to prove their contentions and statements. The exhibitor either has no facts or figures, or fears to divulge them. If an exhibitor walks into an Exchange and demands to tell of his conditions, the Exchange man is ready to hand him a bucket and sponge to do his weeping, and justly so. The exhibitor does not come fortified with facts and figures but with a lot of generalities which are not convincing.

SOLUTION AND SALVATION

The solution and salvation of the whole problem lies in the action of self-preservation on the part of the independent exhibitor by having a thorough, complete, and constructive national organization, headed by a man of the calibre of Hays. This organization, in its constructive work, will divide the country into zones and territories, gather statistics from exhibitors as to conditions, and through these mediums will be able to substantiate an exhibitor's claims. This will prove to the producer the necessity of equitable film rentals and arbitrate all differences. The question of flat rentals or percentages is not the vital issue. It is just an incident in the development. This data will help the producer and distributor to regulate this end. This will bridge the chasm.

THE GRAVE DANGER

If the independent exhibitor does not get busy, and real soon, to perfect such an organization to insure his self-preservation, he can make up his mind that it is but a question of a very few years, if that long, that he will be forced out of business.

It is the independent exhibitor who makes possible the producer-distributor-exhibitor. How come? The big companies deal with facts and figures. They have actuaries, efficiency men, cost accountants, whose business it is to figure out costs and returns as well as profits. They are machine-like in their precision. They figure and deal in futures. When they say that a picture must bring so much it is not a mere guess on their part. These companies must get the returns. Under present exhibitor conditions they can avoid taking losses and talk about costs—a matter of no interest to the exhibitor. The law of self-preservation is indomitable. If the product cannot be placed profitably with the independent exhibitor they will be forced, as they have been, to find outlets for their product.

These companies are now strongly entrenched with their chains of theaters. The exhibitor, due to the lack of effective organization, has made it possible for the companies to set and demand their own prices. The strength of the exhibitor, single handed, as against the distributor is no ber in "The Ten Commandments," and he has used 18 of such shots in "Six Days," just completed for Goldwyn. Among the very unusual shots accomplished by the process is one used by De Mille in which the Biblical episode of the Red Sea being commanded to roll back is shown. The sea rolls back and 3,000 supers are seen passing safely through. This promises, from the description given to be one of the most unusual shots ever presented.

Among the other more unusual shots accomplished by the process is one which will show the figure of a woman passing along the floor of the Cathedral of Rheims, the shot being made through a shell hole on the roof 185 feet from the floor. The interior of the wonderful Cathedral has also been reproduced through the Williams process, and will be shown in "Six Days." Brabin is tremendously enthusiastic over it and declares it will have a great influence on future productions.

Frank Williams, the inventor, was formerly a cameraman, working with the old Bushman-Bayne combination. The process is understood to be patented, the sliding mat being the feature. All work on the process must be against white or black backgrounds; the black backgrounds necessitating considerable night work.

more. The distributor has become a wholesale exhibitor. Think it over.

ORGANIZATION OF RIGHT KIND ONLY SOLUTION

What the exhibitor must do as an exhibitor, and the kind of an organization he must have, as deduced by the writer, will be treated in subsequent articles to appear in this publication.

Al Santell will direct "The Sandpile," for F. B. O. starting Sept. 1.

 about eight or ten of their other Jewels were sold quickly. They got in the punch before the other companies were really started."

When sales officials of Famous Players were questioned regarding this they admitted that Universal business had probably increased, but pooh poohed the idea that the sales were anywhere near those of Famous which, it was claimed, were larger than ever, especially for September when the greatest bookings in the history of Famous has been established in this territory.

Census Starts Soon

Questionnaires to Be in Distribution Before Year Ends—To Be Repeated Every Two Years.
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Washington—The recently announced decision of the Department of Commerce to include moving pictures in the commodities of which a census is taken every two years is a victory for those branches of the industry which long have contended that picture production is as susceptible to arithmetical analysis as that of any other manufactured commodity. That a census of pictures is practicable was proven two years ago when films were included in the list of articles on which data was to be compiled. Very little difficulty was encountered by the Census Bureau in conducting the census during 1921. The success of the initial inquiry was so satisfying that it is planned to take a census regularly.

It is believed that the taking of a regular census of production will do more than any other one thing to bring moving pictures to the level of a stable, established industry.

Calif. M. P. T. O. in Combine
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

San Francisco—The M. P. T. O. of Northern California and the Allied Amusement Industries of Calif. have combined into one organization. The new outfit embraces all legitimate vaudeville theaters including the child four big first-run picture houses and the Ackerman & Harris interests. Allied invited the combine; the M. P. T. O. going in in a body. The M. P. T. O. suspends operations indefinitely and will sell or lease the headquarters' furniture, cancelling the office lease. New headquarters will be in the Allied offices with Irving Ackerman chairman of the organization and T. D. Van Osten, manager-secretary.

The new combine will function under the Allied name. Van Osten has a lot to do in the bringing about of this combine. "The Independent Exhibitor," a regional paper promoted by Van Osten for the M. P. T. O. reports to the ownership of Van Osten, who will continue the publication under the title of "The Pacific Coast Exhibitor."

T. O. C. C. Firm

Action of Circuits in Increasing Operators' Wages Won't Have Any Effect on Organization.

T. O. C. C. officials declare that the action of the Vaudeville Managers Protective Association which includes all of the important theater circuits in Greater New York and the Broadway theaters in granting a wage increase to the operators will not have any bearing on the attitude of that body toward Local No. 306.

The V. M. P. A. has agreed to an increase of 22½%. Representatives of the U. S. Labor Commission are attempting to heal the breach between the T. O. C. C. and the operators and have both bodies meet on a common ground. Another conference is being sought to discuss the situation thoroughly but the T. O. C. C. is not inclined to acquiesce.

Bowes Busy on "Ben Hur"

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Los Angeles—Edward Bowes' visit to the Goldwyn studio is concerned chiefly with "Ben Hur." He expects to announce the director and the actor for the title role shortly.

Ludvigh Acted As Arbitrator

Singer Brothers, who purchased the Colonial in Peekskill from Advance, closed the transaction at the figure set by Ludvigh.

La Marr—1st Nat'l

Deal Closed by Arthur Sawyer—Associated Pictures the Producer—Series Probably Coast-Made.

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Los Angeles—Announcement is made here on behalf of Arthur H. Sawyer that the new series of Barbara La Marr pictures which are to be produced at the rate of four a year for five years will be released through Associated First National.

Miss La Marr will start work for Associated Pictures Co.p. which will make them after appearing in two more pictures, one a Universal special and the second, "The Shooting of Dan McGrew," which Metro will distribute.

No one at First National cared to comment on the above dispatch yesterday.

Takes Over Selig Studio

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Los Angeles—B. P. Schulberg has taken over the Selig studios for the exclusive production of Preferred Pictures. He has also acquired a large ranch at Alhambra, which will be used for exteriors. Until now these studios have been shared by Schulberg and Louis B. Mayer. Among the first improvements to be made in the property will be the building of a large new stage and a big tank.

At the Mayer office yesterday, it was declared that the producer would take over another studio at Hollywood.

Cities Not Set

S. R. Kent at Work on Famous's Pre-Demonstration Theaters—Middle West Lined Up.

Sidney R. Kent is back from a trip through the Middle West where, it is understood, he devoted his time to the selection of theaters to be part of the new Famous Players sales policy. It is understood that the entire Middle West has been lined up.

At Paramount, it is stated that the official announcement embodies all there is to be told of the innovation at this time. The number of cities to be used as pre-demonstration points has not been decided upon nor have the theaters in these cities been selected. It is assumed, of course, that in the larger cities where Famous has its own theaters, those houses will be used to test the drawing-power of the various pictures. Famous has representation in all important cities in the country and where it does not operate its own houses, it has arrangements of one kind or another with local first-runs that will probably be utilized for the new basis of things.

Kent held a meeting on Saturday

Lesser Signs Baby Peggy

Sol Lesser has signed Baby Peggy for three years to star for Principal Pictures. The youngster will start work in October. Production will be in Hollywood.

Baby Peggy's popularity has been growing steadily. She appeared in Century Comedies for a long time and then went over to Universal to make features. Two have been finished and two more are to be made.

Several Broadway showmen in commenting on the Lesser deal yesterday declared that Baby Peggy was a cute youngster but that the problem of securing feature material for her as a consistent thing might prove very interesting.

All Delays Cut

1st Nat'l Salesmen in Britain Authorized to Sign Contracts When Closed with Exhibitors There

E. Bruce Johnson has returned from England with an announcement of a change in policy there on the part of First National. Salesmen attached to the nine offices scattered throughout England have been authorized to sign contracts with exhibitors "on the spot," so to speak, so that the exhibitor will know at once whether or not he can depend on that line of product for his theater.

Census Starts Soon

The 1921 census, the first to be taken, showed 127 establishments engaged in production with an average of 6,259 wage earners during the year, and with production valued at $77,397,381. The Census Bureau has divided domestic production into 13 major industries, which include the necessities of life, all of which, such as food and steel, cover a full class of commodities, and 73 miscellaneous industries, of which production is tenth in importance, being exceeded in the value of production only by agricultural implements, electrical machinery, fur goods, manufactured ice, phonographs, boots and shoes, automobile tires, rubber goods and ships.

The questionnaires which will be used in taking the 1923 census are now in course of preparation, and will be distributed among producers shortly before the end of the year. They will be similar to those used in the 1921 census.

"What the Picture Did For Me"

VERDICTS ON FILMS IN LANGUAGE OF EXHIBITOR

The Midnight Cabaret (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—Another notch in Larry's guns of laughter. He sure knocks 'em cold with this one. Ran it with Grandma's Boy. Sure made a laugh program. Larry has a frog in this comedy that gives plenty of excitement. Film extra good.—Reis & Miller, Lake View Theatre, Lake View, Iowa.

Semon Comedies (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—The best two-reel comedies on the market. You never get a punk one. They are all good. Worth twice the price of any other two-reel comedy I have ever run.—G. Otto Hartsoe, North Newton Theatre, Newton, N. C.

Golf (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon. Another Semon knockout. Everybody well pleased. Brought roar after roar from audience. If you haven't run any Semons try 'em, they are great.—Anderson & Weatherby, Gem Theatre, Omaha, Nebr.

No Wedding Bells (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—Good. Semon getting better each picture.—J. P. Jones, Yale Theatre, Groesbeck, Tex.

The Bakery, with Larry Semon.—Got the jack and sent them home asking for more.—J. W. May, Grand Theatre, Shawneetown, Ill.

Golf (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—Oh, boy. It's a scream. Larry is there with the laughs every time.—P. E. Doe, Electric Theatre, Arcadia, Nebr.

Semon Comedies (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—Use one of these comedies every Friday and have not used a bad one yet. Vitagraph has a lot of exploitation on these subjects. Be sure to use it.—M. Oppenheimer, Lafayette Theatre, New Orleans, La.

The Fly Cop (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—They laughed so hard that they shook all the rivets and bolts out of the seats and my theatre is a wreck. Will have to take out a tornado insurance policy when Semon comes to bat again. He sure puts the Vita in Vitagraph.—Philip Rand, Rex Theatre, Salmon, Idaho.

Larry Semon Comedies (Vitagraph).—These comedies are consistently good. You cannot go wrong on them.—C. C. Clendenen, Amusu Theatre, Marlinton, W. Va.

The Bakery (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—Good. You'll laugh till your sides ache on this one.—Wm. Hinds, Opera House, Odell, Nebr.

Simple Life (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—Good. Roar after roar. Book them, boys. Played to a packed house. Patrons pleased.—E. W. Harrell, Royal Theatre, Rison, Ark.

The Agent (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—Good, clever comedy. Semon seems to bring the laughs when others fail.—L. B. Lewis, Gayety Theatre, Ft. Worth, Tex.

The Grocery Clerk (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—This should have been called "Riot" or something else, as it is one itself. Brought roar after roar. Semon comedies are hard to beat. Larry very popular with us.—Anderson & Weatherby, Gem Theatre, Omaha, Nebr.

The Counter Jumper (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—Larry pulled a stunt in this one with an egg which was a fine enough treat.—Smith Read, Patriot Theatre, DeKalb, Tex.

The Counter Jumper (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—A good slapstick comedy, entitled to be featured. Patrons liked it and talked about it. Went bigger and better than the feature drama. Helped at box office. Rosenfield, Hopp & Co., Fort Armstrong Theatre, Rock Island, Ill.

The Rent Collector (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—This comedy sure kept my house in a scream. I think the music was seldom heard. Excellent.—Mrs. C. H. Cannon, Gem Theatre, Kouts, Ind.

Semon Comedies (Vitagraph).—All good bets if they can be bought right.—Parmele Theatre Co., Parmele Theatre, Plattsmouth, Nebr.

The Hick (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—As all other Semons are good. If you are not running these, try one.—J. W. Andresen, Rialto Theatre, Cozad, Nebr.

The Saw Mill (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—It's just the same old story. All Semons are good and satisfy your audience because, as comedies, they are everything that could be expected of them.—Horn & Morgan, Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Nebr.

The Fly Cop (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—This two-reel comedy is full of action and plenty of laughs. My patrons like Semon comedies.—P. G. Held, Sterling Theatre, Fairmont, Nebr.

No Wedding Bells (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—Absolutely a good clean comedy. Semon is there when it comes to slapstick. You can't find better comedies than Semon's.—Reis & Miller, Lake View Theatre, Lake View, Iowa.

The Sportsman (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—Larry is the boy that gets the laughs out of our patrons. Ran this with our Sunday program. Everybody pleased.—Anderson & Weatherby, Gem Theatre, Omaha, Nebr.

The Suitor (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—This is one of Larry Semon's best two-reel comedies. If you haven't played this be sure and book same.—P. G. Held, Sterling Theatre, Fairmont, Neb.

The Rent Collector (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—Another good Semon. This kind gets the house to roar, especially the kids.—J. W. Andresen, Rialto Theatre, Cozad, Nebr.

Semon Comedies (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—These comedies can't be beaten. The Rent Collector is good, but The Suitor is a knockout.—H. E. Partrick, Palace Theatre, North Rose, N. Y.

Semon Comedies (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—Larry is there with the goods every time. He would jump from the top of the Woolworth Building to get a laugh.—L. G. Beecher, New Lyndon, Theatre, Lyndonville, N. Y.

Semon Comedies (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—Will strengthen and often put over some programs. All good.—S. H. Borisky, American Theatre, Chattanooga, Tenn.

Well I'll Be (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—Like all Semon's, good.—Geo. C. Starkey, Opera House, Montour Falls, N. Y.

The Simple Life (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—Have played a number of Semon comedies and they all draw and are fine. This no exception.—Geo. C. Starkey, Opera House, Montour Falls, N. Y.

No Wedding Bells (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—Another very good one with Semon. He prances through this one with his usual fine bunch of pep and it is a revelation to see him running and jumping out of third story windows just like you would step off of the veranda. Semon's comedies are good and this one keeps up his fine reputation for snappy tricks in comedy.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind.

The Counter Jumper (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—Best Semon comedy yet. They laughed from start to finish. If your folks like to laugh follow a sad feature with this one and win.—E. D. Keilmann, Grand Theatre, Topeka, Kans.

The Rent Collector (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—A scream, a whirlwind, a cyclone of fun. How does he do it? We are for Larry, as he seldom fails to knock 'em dead. For action and real fun his comedies are the snake's hips and the cat's meow every time. I am playing them all.—H. P. Thompson, Liberty Theatre, Pardeeville, Wis.

The Hick (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—Very few comedies today that are better than this one. Kept house laughing all of the time.—S. G. Ihde, Photoplay Theatre, Ashland, Kans.

The Barnyard (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—Hats off again to Larry. He sure made a real comedy in this one. Action all the way through. If it doesn't get the laughs your people are dead. Film in fine shape.—Reis & Miller, Lake View Theatre, Lake View, Iowa.

The Grocery Clerk (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—Semon comedies one good buy. Always draws here.—Katherine Dowling, Ark Theatre, Logansport, Ind.

Semon Comedies (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—We have shown a good number of Semon comedies and have found every one a knockout. I find that showing the comedy last works out the best.—Henry Saubers, Fad Theatre, Fairfax, S. D.

The Agent (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—"Laugh with Larry" is what they did. All Semon comedies average up so you can depend on them.—B. C. Brown, Temple Theatre, Viroqua, Wis.

Golf (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—As usual, all comedy—every inch a laugh. Semon should make a hit with everyone in this one.—T. W. Young, Jr., Vaudette Theatre, Dyersburg, Tenn.

The Counter Jumper (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—Put this one on with Thomas Meighan in The Man Who Saw Tomorrow and pulled 'em in to very good business for two days. All Semon comedies go over big here.—H. Van Buskirk, Temple Theatre, Mishawaka, Ind.

The Fly Cop (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—Very good. Got many good hearty laughs. Semon seems to be one of top notchers.—P. O. Roby, Latona Theatre, Williamsburg, Iowa.

Golf (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—A feature comedy. One of his best.—N. F. Loibl, Chimes Theatre, Cedarburg, Wis.

The Agent (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—The wise theatre man runs Larry Semon comedies not to please only his patrons but to please the box office. This one in particular is a knockout and kept the audience in an uproar. Book it sure.—W. E. Elkin, Temple Theatre, Aberdeen, Miss.

All Delays Cut

All delays at the home office are thus eliminated. The prices of posters have also been reduced by ten per cent throughout Great Britain.

A first National statement declares that English exhibitors have been arguing for the joint signing of contracts for several years. The new system will also include the use of a new form of contract in which are embodied a number of new clauses for which, according to the statement, exhibitors there have been working for some time.

The announcement of this change was made at the First National sales convention held in London recently.

Censors for Ireland

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Washington—Advices received from Dublin state that censorship will become active in Ireland Nov. 1. The measure provides for a censor and an appeal board consisting of nine members. Exhibitors will be taxed to defray the expenses.

Seeking Lower Insurance

The M. P. T. O. A. is distributing questionnaires to its various members soliciting data relative to insurance risks. The exhibitor is asked for information relative to the kind of risk his theater is and the amount of insurance he carries. This will be used by the organization in an effort to secure lower rates.

A New Kind of Salesman

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Cleveland—In all my travels I never met a film salesman with a new idea until a few days ago. Said salesman is none other than Joe Mayer, who was general director of publicity for Universal in New York two years ago, and a thorough newspaper man. He resigned as publicity man for Universal to go out and sell film. He has been with Universal for five years now. During the time he has been selling film he has used his newspaper knowledge to advantage and is the only salesman I have met that gets a greeting from exhibitors when he calls on them. Nine tenths of the film salesmen on the road now will tell you that the exhibitor has been trimmed so much that when a salesman calls with a brief case in his hand he is greeted with this beautiful salutation, "All booked up today—don't want to do business with salesmen anyway—they are always changing jobs."

This has been changed by Joe as he has a five year record with Universal. Just as soon as Joe signs a contract with an exhibitor he sits down with him and lays out an advertising campaign. He then goes over to the newspaper office and lands a big story about the local exhibitor having signed a big contract for first run Universal pictures. The reason Joe gets the stories printed is the fact that he sits down in the city room and writes the yarns newspaper style and leaves out the adjectives and praise.—PAUL GRAY.

Millions In New Unit

Balaban and Katz Corp. Formed in Delaware—New Stock Issue to Be Floated in Chicago.

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Dover, Del.—The Balaban and Katz Corp. has been formed here with an announced capitalization of $20,000.

In all likelihood, it is under the name of the Balaban and Katz Corp. that the proposed stock issue to be floated by this important firm of Chicago exhibitors will be issued.

It is planned to consolidate the Chicago, Tivoli, Riviera and Central Park theaters of the B. and K. group under one corporate name. Associated First National Pictures, Inc., of Illinois, and the Second National Picture Co. of Illinois will also be included, it is expected, in the consolidated unit. The stock issue will be floated on both the New York and Chicago exchanges. There will probably be an issue of 250,000 shares of common stock, 50,000 of which will be offered to the public at $50 a share and the remaining 200,000 shares to be exchanged for stock in the existing four theater companies.

"To The Ladies" Next

Essie L. Lasky has decided to abandon production of "There's A Fortune In It," which James Cruze was to make and in the place of that, Cruze will next do "To The Ladies." There will probably be several other changes in the next group of Paramount releases.

$1,000,000 in Five Weeks, Says "Bux"

Harry H. Buxbaum, state supervisor of sales for Famous Players, declared yesterday that for the period ending this week and ending with the last week in September, total gross sales for Paramount in the Greater New York and Northern New Jersey territory will reach close on to $1,000,000.

Ford Buys "Down to the Sea"

Reginald Ford has purchased the foreign rights to "Down to the Sea in Ships," and says he has arranged to make a typical three-masted whaling ship at over to Paris and place it on exhibition in the Seine. Ford maintains offices in Paris and London and when he leaves for France next month will close a deal involving three existing distributing organizations which presently maintains offices in various European capitols.

"Keep Time Open"

Urges Marcus Loew—Advises Exhibitors Not to Book Up Way Ahead of Play Dates

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

London—Marcus Loew is quoted in The Film Renter, in part, saying: "American pictures are bigger and better because people are realizing that there is no room for little pictures. No first-class house can afford to show pictures which are not first-class pictures. The public demand is higher, too. That was abundantly proved in the case of 'The Four Horsemen.' (I am mentioning Metro pictures because, naturally, I am most familiar with them.) Big pictures are being demanded everywhere, and exhibitors are realizing this. I would, however, urge exhibitors not to book so far ahead as they have been in the habit of doing, or, if they do book ahead, to leave, at all events, open dates for the inclusion in their programs of the newer, bigger pictures."

"Mentioning the large number of costume plays being produced in America, Mr. Loew believed that production of this kind of photoplay was somewhat overdone, for the American public was not so keen as the British upon this type of picture. He felt that pictures had to be big pictures and good pictures and that the American people were much more discriminating than they were and set higher standards on entertainment."

Kansas Meets Sept. 24 and 25

Soviet to Restore Copyrights

Advices from Moscow indicate that the Soviet Government is to establish the copyright for authors that was abolished in 1917. The copyright will be personal and inheritable and will run for three years on photographs and, presumably, on motion pictures.

Cleveland Operators Get Increase

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Cleveland—Operators here have settled their wage dispute by accepting a 7½ per cent increase over last year's scale. The new agreement covers a two year period—from Sept. 1, 1923 to Aug. 31, 1925. They demanded a 17 per cent increase.

Pickford in "Romeo and Juliet"

United Artists announced yesterday that Mary Pickford has definitely decided to make "Romeo and Juliet" and that "Doug" Fairbanks may play Romeo. Ernst Lubitsch will direct.

Mayer to Build Studio

The local offices of Louis B. Mayer announced yesterday that a new studio will be built in Los Angeles to house the various Mayer companies. Mayer has been working at the Selig studio at Mission Road, Los Angeles until now but Preferred has taken over the entire plant.

An Explanation

In yesterday's issue of THE FILM DAILY there should have appeared over the page advertisement captioned "What the Picture Did For Me" a line to indicate that the material used was from The Exhibitors Herald. This inadvertence, due to a mechanical error, is sincerely regretted by the publishers.

Grainger Back; Four Deals Closed

James R. Grainger of Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan returned yesterday from a sales trip that took him to Buffalo, Cleveland, Cincinnati and Detroit. In Buffalo he arranged for the showings of Goldwyn's first 11 which are to be divided between Shea's Hippodrome and the Lafayette; in Cleveland, the series will be shown at the Stillman, Park and Allen; in Cincinnati, a deal has been closed with Ike Libson for the Capitol or Strand and in Detroit the Broadway-Strand is expected to show some of the group. "The Spoilers" opens at the last named theater on either Sept. 9 or 16 for an indefinite run. Grainger said conditions at those points were very good.

Big Finance Company

Frank R. Wilson Heads M. P. Capital Corp.—Griffith, Banzhaf, Brulatour, Powers Directors.

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Dover, Del.—The Motion Picture Capital Corp. has been formed here with a capitalization of $6,250,000. Its headquarters are in New York.

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Albany, N. Y.—Frank R. Wilson of New York is the authorized representative of the M. P. Capital Corp., a Delaware corporation which has been granted permission to transact business in this state. The papers list 10,000 shares of preferred stock at $25 each and 60,000 shares of common, with no par value.

The M. P. Capital Corp. is understood to be a reorganization of the M. P. Finance Corp. formed in New Jersey sometime ago to finance producers of motion pictures. The original company was formed by Frank R. Wilson, who makes his headquarters in the office of J. J. McCarthy in the Longacre Bldg., and who was assistant to William G. McAdoo when the latter was Secretary of the Treasury during the Wilson Administration.

Wilson is understood to be the president of the new company which has downtown affiliations of considerable prestige and large moneyed resources. It is planned to offer financial aid to worthwhile producers on terms that are said to be equitable. Wilson could not be reached for a statement yesterday but it is understood that associated with him and on the directorate are D. W. Griffith, Albert H. T. Banzhaf, Griffith's attorney and a director in United Artists, Jules E. Brulatour and P. A. Powers.

Banzhaf refused to talk about the plans of the company yesterday, declaring that Wilson was the spokesman for the company and that he would return to town today.

Attend Preview of Hunter Film

Representatives of the trade papers left by boat for Boston last night en route to Manchester-by-the-Sea to attend a special preview of "The Scarecrow," a Glenn Hunter picture to be distributed by Hodkinson probably under another title. The picture was filmed in and around Manchester. The special showing was in behalf of a benefit with admissions fixed at $3 each.

Newspaper Opinions

"The Cheat"—F. P.-L. Rivoli

AMERICAN—For Miss Negri is surprisingly bad as the branded heroine of the now familiar story. The Hollywood melting pot seems to have assimilated her. She not only looks like, but she acts like the conventional movie star * * * The picture was well and elaborately set, but little more can be said for it. Even the tensity of the story went astray in the many absurdities of the telling.

DAILY NEWS—American pictures and Pola Negri seem to be pulling stronger together. In "The Cheat" the beautiful Polish actress appears quite at home. Pola is neither wild nor wicked in her latest achievement. She's just a womanly woman who loves her husband and can't avoid the attentions of the other man.

EVENING JOURNAL—Her gowns are still exuberant, her acting has all the verve and crispness of old, but she seems decidedly less European and much more like a good actress trained in American traditions * * * Mr. Fitzmaurice's picture is well acted and extremely well mounted, although there is a noticeable failure to make the character assumed by Miss Negri entirely sympathetic.

EVENING WORLD—If you see "The Cheat" you won't be cheated. It's far and away better than "Bella Donna," Pola's first American-made picture—in fact, it's almost as good as some of those pictures she made abroad, when she was an artiste and not a movie actress.

HERALD—It is the dullest, cheapest, most asinine movie that we have seen in months and months and months.

MAIL—In fact, to this spectator at least, it seems one of those rare cases where the film version is more dramatic than the story. Part of this is due to the swift and imaginative direction of George Fitzmaurice and part to the extraordinary photography which makes it a magical blending of lights and shadows. But its real lure is in the flaming personality of Pola Negri, who is at her wildest and best in this picture.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—They have made a fairly convincing and attractive picture out of material whose age is the only reason it should be respected * * * She makes the story seem real, and it is not until the picture is well under way that you discover you are seeing the same plot that you have reviewed at least a dozen times in a season.

TELEGRAM—The setting is one of the largest and most elaborate ever constructed in any studio.

TIMES—* * * equipped with elegant and exotic costumes, magnificent scenery, thrilling incidents and talented players. Hence it can hardly fail to be an entertainment far above the average photoplay. At the same time the story is by no means flawless, for it lacks subtlety * * * This photoplay is well worth seeing, for the plot is exciting in spite of the license taken by the scenario writer and the director.

TRIBUNE—* * * We left the theater at the end of the production feeling decidedly as though we had been cheated, as we remember the story * * * To us it seems a dreadful waste of time, especially for as great an actress as Pola Negri was, is, and ever shall be.

WORLD—"The Cheat" is a heavy handed, obvious and overstuffed movie melodrama, yet it pictures Miss Pola Negri more beautifully than anything in which she has appeared on the screen.

"Where the North Begins"—Warners Capitol

AMERICAN—Lovers of "man's best friend" will find many things to marvel at in the intelligence of Rin-tin-tin. No fiction about dogs has quite exhausted his accomplishments.

The drama, in its texture, is an ordinary chapter of the life of trappers and traders in the land of the midnight sun.

DAILY NEWS—If you're not especially fond of dog pictures, see this one and then see how quickly you'll change your mind. We did.

EVENING JOURNAL—* * * Superb acting of Rin-tin-tin * * * Reared by an American and trained for the camera with consummate skill, Rin-tin-tin ceases to be a dog in "Where the North Begins. He is an heroic, intelligent creature endowed with the feelings and motives of an A No. 1 man.

EVENING WORLD—* * * And Rin-tin-tin is truly a dog star if there ever was one. He does almost everything but talk, and talk, outside the subtitles, is pretty useless in movies.

MAIL—* * * It is really a most excellent picture, with the refreshing charm that a good dog-actor, unaffected by poses or temperament, can bring to an outdoor plot.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—Fred Myton and Chester Franklin's story is a three thousandth squeeze of a pretty dry orange, but within these limitations, the producers have managed to make it interesting * * * There's nothing particularly notable about the picture except the dog.

SUN—* * * Fairly exciting drama * * * Rin-tin-tin has made a striking success in this picture.

TELEGRAM—* * * Offers a wholly refreshing novelty * * * The greatest dog picture ever filmed.

TIMES—All those fond of dogs will be interested in "Where the North Begins. * * * The work of this dog in this photodrama is quite interesting, although it suffers in comparison with Strongheart and the excellent vehicle he had in "The Silent Call."

TRIBUNE—* * * It seems to us that the picture at the Capitol this week is the best canine entertainment we ever saw. There are a lot of actors and one or two actresses on the screen as well, but Rin-tin-tin is all that really counts. * * * We doubt if there is a man with soul so dead he would not enjoy "Where the North Begins."

WORLD—There is nothing excepting the appearance of Rin-tin-tin in this new picture at the Capitol to make it worth while sitting through. This interesting German police dog * * * is shown in various attitudes and moods which are entertaining and pleasing.

In the Courts

Two attachments have been filed in the Supreme Court against the property of the William Cabanne M. P. Trust, a Missouri corporation, with an office at 3 West 61st St., in suits of Jack V. Keenan, brother of Frank Keenan, and Frank G. Altman, both of Kansas City, on checks cashed for the defendant at the request of Alexander Beyfuss, who has been secretary and general manager of the Cabanne corporation, but who the papers show has been discharged.

The attachments were granted on affidavits made by Russell Evans, who came here to collect a claim of his own, and who alleges that $8,050 is due the three, which he says Cabanne and Beyfuss both admitted were legal obligations of the defendant. The affidavit of Evans states that Cabanne and Beyfuss both said the sums couldn't be paid because subscriptions taken in St. Louis and Kansas City for interest certificates in the trust have not come in fast enough to enable the defendant to meet its payroll and other expenses.

Cabanne is alleged to have said that a loan of $40,000 is being negotiated and that it is also hoped to get an advance distribution of a film being made by the defendant, which is its only property. It is alleged that Cabanne on Aug. 1, assigned to Altman certain property as security for his claim of $2,950 and when it was sent to E. W. Goode, one of the trustees of the defendant, to be executed at St. Louis, he said the assignment would not "hold water" because of the trust agreement.

The papers state that one of the checks given by the plaintiffs was $1,651 to pay the balance on a premium for a $150,000 insurance policy on Cabanne's life. Beyfuss got $550 for his personal use by misrepresentations, it is alleged.

Cabanne could not be reached at the Metro studio where he is working, for a statement. He was reported out of town for the rest of the week.

FILM DAILY'S INQUIRING REPORTER

QUESTION

Do you think film salesmen should be authorized to sign contracts on behalf of their companies similar to the practice inaugurated in Great Britain by First National?

ANSWERS

A. Benk, Manager, Stanley Theater, 590 7th Ave. New York—"I don't see why not. It is always claimed that contracts go back to the home office for approval or rejection but everything that film salesmen say can't be believed. The plan can be worked here."

Harry H. Buxbaum, Famous Players—"I should say not. Salesmen don't want the privilege because of possible barriers thrown in their paths by exhibitors who may try to influence prices by declaring that they will 'take it up with Mr. Zukor or Mr. Kent.' The matter properly belongs to the home office."

Charles A. Chasteen, Manager, Rialto, 268 Fulton St. Jamaica, L. I.—"If the home offices give the salesmen the final authority and recognize the salesman's signature as binding, I think it would be a great idea for this country. The trouble is that contracts don't seem to be contracts in the film business."

Paul C. Mooney, Sales Manager, Louis B. Mayer Prod.—"It wouldn't work out in this country. In England, the pictures are always screened for the exhibitor and aside from that, he buys for a year ahead."

Louis Rosenbluh, New York manager, Fox Film Corp.—"Such a thing is not possible here under the uniform contract which expressly stipulates the time limit allowed the home offices to either reject or approve contracts with exhibitors."

E. M. Saunders, Metro Pictures Corp.—"Such a thing is not possible in this country under present conditions."

The statement came from the of-tion of the T. O. D. C. to "eliminate the evil whereby exhibitors are com-

The Warning

From an important sales ex-

"Exhibitors are doing good business, but the price of next is booking all he can is wise, but wait until he has to read just contracts. Wait for next February and March!"

have closed with Selznick each for a series of pictures, work on which is yet to be started. While no one at Selznick could be reached for a statement, the existence of such contracts is definitely known.

Efforts were made to reach the directors involved but without success. No one at the directors' association was in those offices to discuss the matter. It is understood that James Vincent, an official of the organization is now on his way West and it may be that he is the "financial representative" looked for by the coast film colony.

It is understood on excellent authority that the report emanating from the coast has a foundation in fact. It is further understood that various members of the directors' association have interested banking circles in their plan. Certainly, that impression has been rather carefully fostered in certain quarters around town.

It will be recalled that it was the M. P. D. A. that voted to work with the M. P. T. O. A. when it became apparent that the exhibitor organization was about to enter the distributing field.

The reports from the coast reached New York almost simultaneously with the announcement of the plans of the Theater Owners Distributing Corp. It was recalled and considered significant by some that the M. P. D. A. had sat in on various conferences of the M. P. T. O. A. when the exhibitor organization first advanced its plan for the formation of an exhibitor-distributor organization.

entertainment at small prices," said Truc. "We protest against the folly of $2 admissions and the attitude of many of the national distributors in following the policy of 'all the traffic will bear.' The exhibitors themselves know the attitude of the public and the exhibitors will, through this, their own distributing organization, make a determined effort to secure and to present worthy attractions at reasonable prices."

The statement merely announced the date on which activities would be launched and also traced the history of the movement since the Minneapolis convention. There was nothing mentioned about the personnel of the sales force or any information relative to the distributing system. It is understood that the T. O. D. C. will not establish its own exchanges but use an existing national system which will take care of the physical handling of the product. Just how many pictures the organization expected to handle and who would make them were interesting details which the initial statement did not go into.

A Correction

Due to a typographical error the name of Peter Oletsky, owner of the Federated Film Exchange of Washington and Baltimore was misspelled in the Chadwick Pictures Corp. advertisement which appeared in the issue of Sunday, Aug. 26.

Monte Blue and Harry Myers have been added to the cast of "Daddies."

EASTMAN KODAK COMPANY ROCHESTER, N. Y.

IT is seldom that I have addressed you concerning Vitagraph productions. "Pioneer Trails" is the greatest attraction of the day. It is an epic of the old West and has every element known to picture production that will satisfy the public. No picture dealing with the glorious days of the early West approaches in magnificence the scenic investiture of "Pioneer Trails." No one can appreciate the sensation and danger of travel by the old stage coach until he has seen "Pioneer Trails."

The story of "Pioneer Trails" is in my opinion one of the most dramatic photoplays that have ever been screened. The appeal of the love interest is sure-fire. The characters are living, human, red-blooded people, brought to life out of the past, brave adventurers who carried civilization across this great continent.

The cast is remarkable in that every actor realistically portrays the role to which he is assigned. There is no artificiality in "Pioneer Trails."

I am proud of "Pioneer Trails." I recommend it to you because I know its values. I have put into "Pioneer Trails" the experience of thirty years of picture producing, and I give you my pledge that it is one of the greatest pictures of the year. It is not my custom to praise the productions we have made, but "Pioneer Trails" so far surpasses the screen offerings of today that I want everyone to enjoy the satisfaction that "Pioneer Trails" affords. It is the biggest of all the many winners David Smith has directed, among which are included "Black Beauty," "The Courage of Marge O'Doone," "The Ninety and Nine," and "Masters of Men."

"English Creeping Up"—Crawford

Ray Crawford, of Associated Exhibitors, Inc., just back from Europe says that while England and France are both behind America in production and exhibition, England is creeping up in production.

"The more important English producers," said Crawford yesterday, "realize now that their own field is too limited, and that they must make product which will appeal to American picture lovers also. That is why so many of them are now engaging American actors.

"In France more American pictures are in circulation than are productions of any other country. One expects to find American-made features advertised in front of the leading boulevard theaters of Paris and he is seldom disappointed. The effects of the war continue to be felt in business circles in France much more strongly than in England. Notably in London I found a genuine spirit of optimism regarding the outlook for the fall."

McGuirk Sees Good Season

John J. McGuirk, vice-president of the Stanley Co. of America, in commenting on the coming season, in "The Exhibitor," Philadelphia, says in part:

"I am convinced that the motion picture will be more popular than ever with the season starting Labor Day." Speaking on the drawing power of pictures, he says, I would not like to give precedence to any form of photo play with respect to money-drawing power. Each picture has potentialities. The thing is to discover what is the drawing value of each film and to utilize that knowledge to the best advantage. After all it is a question of showmanship. The good showman will never overlook any big point and of course he will be able to establish a patronage of real worth. The big pictures cost more and demand greater patronage. They should undoubtedly be shown but with due regard to the necessity for intelligent advertising. Less expensive pictures also demand exploitation. Unquestionably the market is here. It is going to be a good season. There is never a bad season for a good show and we will have them in bundance."

In the Courts

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Trenton, N. J.—Joseph Barry, of Old Rose Street, is being held by Judge Anthony S. Brennan for the Grand Jury for forging the name of Charles C. Hildinger, a local exhibitor, to a check.

Cushing, Okla.—H. L. Youngblood, owner of one of the local houses has filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy, listing liabilities at $5,946, with assets valued at $3,450. Thirty-six firms comprise the creditors.

Philadelphia—Messrs. Greenstein, of the Penn. So. Phila. are charged by S. E. Applegate, of United Artists, with assault and battery and will be arraigned soon before a local magistrate.

The Greensteins booked a United Artist picture and not satisfied with the financial showing the picture made, came to the exchange on Vine Street to seek a rebate. Appelgate and the Greensteins apparently could not reach an amicable understanding and an argument resulted, it is declared, the father and son then attacking Appelgate. Appelgate received a rather severe pummeling and was removed to his home.

British Tastes

As Revealed by Popularity Contest
—Spectacles Plus Romance
Lead the List

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

London—The results of the Sunday Pictorial Film Contest will be of interest to film producers and exhibitors in both Britain and America. The total number of votes recorded in this contest was 6,240,216, which makes it easily the most comprehensive guide to film popularity yet obtained in this country. Competitors were asked to place 12 films, from a batch of 20, in order of merit. The highest possible vote for any one film was, therefore, 520,018. The contest would have been of greater value if competitors had not been pinned down to a list of 20 films, but we understand that otherwise the task of examining entries would have been impossible. As it was, the examination of coupons occupied fifty ex-service men for 22 weeks. Within this necessary limitation the contest result runs very true to the best film form.

Griffith scores a triumph with "Way Down East," placed first with a 91 per cent. vote, and "Orphans of the Storm," second with an 86 per cent. vote. "The Kid" is third, running "Orphans" very closely. Then there is a drop of nearly 10,000 votes to "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," another drop of 20,000 to "The Queen of Sheba," and yet another drop of 20,000 to "Smilin' Through." Two British films, widely divergent in appeal, "Squibs Wins the Calcutta Sweep" and "A Bill of Divorcement," are placed in the list well above both "My Boy" and "The Old Nest."

It would appear from this result that spectacle plus romantic appeal is the most popular form of film entertainment. We have this in "Way Down East," "Orphans of the Storm," "Queen of Sheba," and "Smilin' Through"—five out of the first six. Sentimental comedy seems to come next in popular favor. We have it in "The Kid," "Pay Day," "Squibs Wins the Calcutta Sweep," and "My Boy." Drama unadorned by spectacle in "A Bill of Divorcement" gets only 60 per cent. The sheer sob stuff of "Over the Hill" and "The Old Nest" fares on the average even worse. It seems, therefore, the public taste for motion pictures is better than is generally admitted or provided for by film producers. If the result of this contest will convince producers that the public appreciate artistic and ethical merit in motion pictures, and if some few producers will act on this proof a statement we have made over and over again, then it may do something to lift us a little further out of the rut of cheap melodramatic, mechanical stuff which has brought discredit and contempt upon such a large proportion of film plays.—Kinemetograph Weekly.

Los Angeles—James Kirkwood is still seriously ill as a result of a fall from a horse. He is understood to have suffered a concussion of the brain.

Newspaper Opinions

"The Eleventh Hour"—Fox
Cameo

AMERICAN—Talk about thrills! There's a thrill in every second of "The Eleventh Hour," and the Cameo theater is no place for persons with weak hearts or sensitive nerves this week.

EVENING JOURNAL—It is verily melodrama. In fact, it is melodramatic melodrama. * * * have evolved an encyclopedia of thrills. There are enough shocks in this feature production to overflow a fifteen-episode serial.

EVENING WORLD—We have never seen more screen trouble and tribulation packed into seven reels than crowd "The Eleventh Hour." * * * Maybe you'll like it—we didn't.

MAIL—It is a grand orgy of shocks for those whose delight is in mechanical thrills.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—A good, old, rip-roaring melodrama is relished by the best of men, and particularly when it is produced with the verve and dash that abounds in "The Eleventh Hour," making it one of the most agile melodramas we have seen in some time.

POST—There is plenty of action in "The Eleventh Hour." * * * The photography is good and, while the film is full of impossibilities, it is a real thriller.

SUN—In fact it is advertised as a "frank and honest melodrama." It's all of that and more besides. To be perfectly truthful it is the most out and out hokum ever screened and a great deal more thrilling than "The Green Goddess."

TELEGRAM—* * * proved to be replete with thrills—thrills. * * * The photography is unusually good.

TIMES—There are many fine sequences of photography, and the sea scenes and the "shots" of the submarines and destroyers are especially good * * * Those who like serials and the very old-time red-hot melodramas will find interest in the impossibilities of this production.

TRIBUNE—It is even more thrilling than these old series used to be. * * * If you want melodrama, however, we know of no place where you can find so strong a solution.

WORLD—The picture is one of the most frenzied melodramas we have ever witnessed—a "Perils of Pauline" jammed into five reels instead of fifty. It is a cheerful and exciting sacrifice of probability at the shrine of boisterous excitement.

"Daytime Wives"—F. B. O.
Central

AMERICAN—Derelys Perdue was excellent as the daytime wife and Grace D'Armond played the home spouse with spirit. Wyndham Standing as Adams, gave his usual sincere and convincing performance * * * Many of the interior scenes were artistically conceived and presented.

MAIL—* * * An original basis for another of those domestic sermons appearing with such regularity at the Central theater.

POST—* * * it is not likely to set the river afire. It is hardly worth consideration.

TELEGRAM—There is a good picture at the Central.

TRIBUNE—"Daytime Wives" is as cheap and tawdry and altogether as discouraging a production as we have seen in a long, long time.

WORLD—"Daytime Wives" is a sermon in celluloid about wives who spend too much of their husbands' money and wives who purchase the evening meal at the delicatessen store. * * * Second rate sermons have long been a curse of numerous sections of American existence. The motion pictures already have enough handicaps with which to struggle without entering the overcrowded field.

"To the Last Man"—F. P.-L.
Rialto

AMERICAN—Your attention never swerved, which means a lot in a film of this nature. Rough stuff has had a long and vivid day. This was rough stuff with a vengeance, but it got there, and it got there with both feet.

DAILY NEWS—"To the Last Man" is one of those family feud films.

EVENING JOURNAL—* * * musses up a perfectly gorgeous expanse of Arizona scenery on the Rialto theater's screen this week. The theme is worn threadbare, it is true, but in this particular use of it there is at least a human quality that rises above the average of such pictures. The right note of tense and bitter feeling between two families is sounded at the outset and is well maintained.

EVENING WORLD—"To the Last Man" we must admit, isn't a film that will in any way call upon the use of the large "A" in spelling Art, but it makes for one grand and glorious hour of entertainment and thrills that are well worth the money.

MAIL—"To the Last Man" is a typical Zane Grey yarn of Arizona in the eighties. There is a local Romeo and Juliet separated by one of those family feuds without which a western romance could not possibly be written.

POST—It is a great combination when you get Lois Wilson and Richard Dix in the same cast. They are both clever, versatile, good looking, and likable—which makes the photoplay, "To the Last Man" * * * successful from the beginning.

SUN—Some newspaper said yesterday in a headline that the Wild West motion pictures are coming back into style. If they are of the quality of "To the Last Man" the "revival" should be popular.

TELEGRAM—This picture shows primitive life and hates in the most magnificent country in the world.

TIMES—Lois Wilson is as good as can be expected in this film, and Noah Beery as Colter is convincing * * * This is one of those pictures that give one a fit of yawning, and as darkness reigns in the theater one does not even have to bother to put one's hand before the offending mouth. There were quite a number of yawns in the Rialto yesterday.

TRIBUNE—The picture is very exciting * * * Richard Dix is good as Jean, the half-Indian, but Lois Wilson is superb as Ellen Jorth. She is spirited and thoroughly convincing * * * In the cast are Noah Beery, who gave his usual perfect performance; Robert Edeson, who was excellent as the elder Isbel.

The Film Storage & Forwarding Corp. has filed dissolution papers with the Secretary of State in Albany.

Build Good-Will

Hal Roach, Through Newspaper Advertising—Decries "Pawnbroker" Methods

E. Roach delivered an interesting address at the regular meeting of the M. P. A. yesterday. The pro-speecher spoke for about 45 minutes and deduced his thoughts on two definitions:

The building of good-will in national newspaper advertising is the elimination of "pawnbroker" methods of selling pictures and the establishment of a set sales price for this business.

Roach attacked the present method of selling pictures and would sponsor a highly developed campaign using newspaper advertising generally throughout the country in order to create a kinder attitude toward motion pictures in general. He pointed out how maligned pictures were by the press in a story involving film people and declared that the industry has the good-will of the public now as never before. In defraying the cost of such a campaign, Roach stated that every producer and distributor be apportioned his share of the financial burden. He cited excellent work done by the California Association of Exhibitors.

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Chattanooga, Tenn. — Tennessee Enterprises, Inc., a Famous Players subsidiary, has issued bonds totaling $100,000 against its holdings and has placed them with Caldwell & Co., Knoxville. The refinancing has been arranged to permit the company more time to meet its obligations and to enable it to build a new theater here. The bonds will run for 10 years and bear 7 per cent interest. The theaters involved are the Rialto, Tivoli, Bijou and York, here; Majestic, Bijou, Strand, Queen and Riviera at Knoxville, and the Grand and Palace in Marysville.

Still Dickering

M. P. T. O. and American Society Gradually Getting Together on Music Tax

The special committees representing the M. P. T. O. A. and the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers have held one joint meeting at which the basic principles governing the actions of both organizations on the music tax situation were laid down. The matter rests just there temporarily but in mid-September another meeting will be held at which a definite understanding will be reached.

E. C. Mills of the Music Publishers' Protective Ass'n and special advisor to the executive committee of the American Society leaves for Minneapolis shortly where, on the 10th he will confer with the executive committee of the Minnesota exhibitor body. He declared yesterday that Wisconsin had advised its members to avoid litigation and take out licenses for taxable music and added that he understood that the Virginia body will take similar action at a meeting to be held in the near future.

De Luxe Has "Refund Contract"

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Philadelphia—De Luxe Film Co., Inc., has inaugurated what it calls a "refund contract." Under its terms, 25 per cent of the rentals paid by exhibitors are held in trust. On a picture that costs $5,000, De Luxe figures $18,000 a satisfactory gross. From this amount is deducted the franchise rights, exploitation, prints and the 25 per cent held in trust for exhibitors, estimated at $16,500 thus leaving a profit of $1,500 or 12½ per cent for De Luxe on each picture.

Fox Appeals Decision

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Washington—The Fox Film Corp. has appealed a decision of the Federal Trade Commission to the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit in New York. The Commission ruled against the re-issue of Fox pictures under new titles unless the old titles were prominently displayed in the prints of the subjects as well as in all advertising matter.

May Refilm "Les Miserables"

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Los Angeles—It is reported here that Finis Fox will make a new version of "Les Miserables" with Ralph Lewis as Jean Valjean, and Gloria Grey, who appears in "Bag and Baggage," the new Fox picture, as Cosette. The production will probably be made in France. One version has already been made by a French company and a second by William Fox with William Farnum starred.

When Finis Fox was reached at the Algonquin yesterday, he admitted he planned making "Les Miserables" but declared the entire matter was as yet too indefinite to talk about.

Percentage Optional

Paramount to Book That Way Only When Exhibitors Desire It—Kent Busy on Plan

Famous Players will not insist on percentage bookings generally throughout the country under the workings of the new sales policy. This can be relied upon quite definitely.

Sidney R. Kent in this connection pointed out yesterday that in many of the larger cities, Paramount's arrangement with its first-run accounts at present includes percentage. This method of business is not at all new to the Paramount organization. Many important exhibitors are now doing business with Famous on that basis.

So far as the smaller towns are concerned, Kent declares percentage will never be insisted upon. He is emphatic in stating that only in those cases where that basis of transacting business is mutually satisfactory, has his organization arranged percentage bookings. This will not be forced on or extended to other exhibitors unless the deal is amicable.

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Kansas City—The validity of the county's yearly theater tax will be tested in court tomorrow, Saturday. A. M. Eisner, owner of the Broad-mour, 35th Street and Broadway, is charged with failure to pay the tax of $50. Eisner is president of the local theater owners organization and will fight the case to a finish, contending that the tax was levied by the county court in June, whereas the Missouri law states that it should have been assessed in the May term. Eisner is under $500 bail.

Monday, Sept. 3 being Labor Day and a legal holiday there will be no issue of THE FILM DAILY published.

Roach attacked the present method of distribution and described the methods used to sell pictures to the exhibitor. He said the salesman went to an exhibitor with a $100 figure in mind for a certain picture when all that he ever hoped to get was $60 and that, similarly, the exhibitor would try to underbid the salesman's offer. "Pawbroker methods" is the term Roach used to describe this practice. He said he saw no reason why valuations could not be fixed or rentals, based on the location, and seating capacity of the theater.

Kent is understood to be at work on the pre-demonstration group of theaters. As noted, in those cities where Paramount has its own theaters, they will be utilized and at those points where the Paramount product is regularly shown first-run, it is reasonable to assume that these houses, too, will be part of the plan. It is understood that exhibitors have been wiring into Kent's office seeking information and offering their theaters under the new plan. Kent won't confirm this but at the same time he hasn't denied the report. It seems to be merely a problem now of weeding out the desirables from the undesirables.

Putting it Over

Here is how a brother exhibitor puts his show over. Send along your ideas. Let the other fellow know how you cleaned up.

Kiddies Used in Prologue

Kansas City—Thirty-five children from a local dancing school appeared in a prologue to "Penrod and Sam" when that picture played the Newman. The management used the regular exploitation in addition to boosting the "kid" feature.

Street Car Ballyhoo

Montreal—The Capitol gained some wide publicity for "The Isle of Lost Ships" by making arrangements with the street car company to banner a car and send it on every line in the city and suburbs. Besides the ballyhoo 1,000 sheets were plastered around the city as well as 500 art window cards and 50 insert window strips.

Four-Page Rotagravure Insert Used

Hamilton, O.—A four page rotagravure insert was used in the Daily News as an exploitation stunt for "Foolish Wives" when the picture played the Rialto, managed by J. A. Schwalm. Scenes from the picture appeared in the insert. Schwalm did the same thing when he played "Human Wreckage." Both times the house played to capacity, so Schwalm states.

Unusual Lobby Display Attracts

Stratford, Ont.—John V. Ward, manager of Allen's Classic, used elaborate lobby decorations when he played "The Voice from the Minaret." The front had the appearance of an oriental city, made possible by beaver boards. The sky alone created much comment, in view of its very pretty effect of the moon and stars. Ward is using a series of lobby displays for his theater.

Snowden Credited With Another

Louisville—H. T. Snowden, Goldwynner, has another successful campaign to his credit. This time, when "Enemies of Women" played the Strand, a tie-up was effected with the United Bakeries, an organization in this section dealing with 242 retail groceries, whereby an insert was placed in every loaf of bread distributed during the week of the showing. On the strips appeared "Hot Ovens Are 'Enemies of Women.' Serve Krisp Crust Bread and See 'Enemies of Women.' At the Strand theater Beginning Sept. 2." Special window cards, 14x22 were placed in windows of the stores, the message being the same as that on the insert.

Arrangements were also made with the Louisville Laundry Ass'n. and the Louisville Railway Co. to place cards in each bundle of laundry while the railroad company placed strips on their bulletin boards.

Personal Messages From the Stars

Florence, Kan.—When "Souls for Sale" played the local theater, Homer Gill, Goldwynner, mailed out cards to a selected list, each signed by some star appearing in the picture. The cards were postmarked Los Angeles, and contained a view of that city.

Boys and Girls Parade

Pittsburg—A week prior to the showing of "Penrod and Sam" at the Rialto, M. Rosenberg staged a parade of boys and girls, approximately 1,000 of them, each wearing a hat and carrying a balloon advertising the showing. He also took motion pictures of the parade and showed them with the picture.

Extensive Campaign for Premiere

Los Angeles—An extensive exploitation campaign announced to Los Angeles the premiere of "Where the North Begins" when the film was shown for the first time.

Window tie-ups were arranged with the Owl Drug Co. in their three large downtown windows and in ten neighborhood stores. In addition, the drug people distributed 65,000 posters for their day at the Motion Picture Exposition, in which Rin-Tin-Tin and "Where the North Begins" was credited. Other window tie-ups were arranged with Colburns, furriers, and Klein's, furriers. An electric fan tie-up with window display and newspaper ads were arranged for with the A. M. Smith Electrical Co. Silverwood's, a men's store, collaborated with a window showing Palm Beach suits, and Politz and McDowells, also a men's store, contributed with a window tie-up on fall suits. The Family Brick Ice Cream Co. aided with a tie-up in their newspaper advertisements.

Another feature was "Rin-Tin-Tin Night" on the Cinderella Roof Dance Hall, and a "Where the North Begins" Night which followed. Advertisements carried the slogan, "Come and Dance in the Snow." The public's attention was directed to the fact that the entire cast of the production would be present at the occasion. A "Where the North Begins" contest ran in the newspapers, wherein one of Rin-Tin-Tin's puppies was to be given to the winner of a contest on the best story of why Rin-Tin-Tin is the greatest dog actor on the screen. The Los Angeles dramatic editors acted as judges of the contest.

Off for Italy

Ronald Colman, who will appear opposite Lillian Gish in "Romola," Herbert Grimwood, Francisco Puglia and Amelia Summerville are on the way to Genoa, where scenes for the picture will be shot.

BIG STUFF

By DANNY

The big waves are rolling in. Oh, boy! how they have tumbled. We are going to see the big pictures this week than were released easily within any month during last season. And before last season almost in a season.

The ball started rolling a couple of months ago when we all had the first glimpse of Mary's new "Rosita."

A Glorious Picture!

What a combination! Mary and Ernst Lubitsch! Mary is back again. Right into the spot she triumphantly held for years. What a picture! The magnificence of the settings, the splendor of the production is equalled only by the richness of a story in which at times Mary plays second fiddle (and has a hard time doing it) to Holbrook and Irene Rich. But every time Mary does step out, she is so delightful—so charming, that you forget all about the rest of the people, play, sets—even Lubitsch's magnificent production.

"Rosita is the first production made by Lubitsch in this country. Just as he was acclaimed for his German made productions, so he takes his place here. He is one of the greatest directors of all times. And how he has proven it in 'Rosita'!"

A Sweet One

One of the sweetest of the new ones shown us was "Strangers of the Night." We are getting so many of these big ones that they now shoot twice a day. So this one was right late Friday. And it was worth going a long way to see.

Of course, when Louie Mayer put Niblo on Captain Applejack, the smart people expected something big. Everybody knows how dependable Niblo is. And he has made good—mighty good. "Strangers of the Night" will take a mighty important place among the big bets of the year. I don't know what our own reviewer is going to say about it, but—I don't care.

By the way, I caught a mighty interesting featurette—I don't know any other name for it—over at "Doc"

Fight in Kansas

Looms Up Between Exhibitor and Exchanges—State May File Anti-Trust Charges.

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Topeka, Kan.—The State of Kansas may decide to file charges against various exchanges in Kansas City under the Anti-Trust Law as a result of a complaint filed with the Attorney General's office by W. B. Rogers, exhibitor at Wamega.

Rogers, it seems, permitted himself to be oversold on pictures. He then disregarded notices from the Kansas City arbitration board to straighten the matter out. Several exchanges then asked for rental money totaling $1,200 and threatening discontinuance of service if Rogers didn't pay. The exhibitor at once retained an attorney and came on to Kansas City to attend one of the meetings of the arbitration board. No results were obtained in that way. He then came here and consulted with Charles B. Griffith, attorney-general of the State, who first demanded that a hearing be held before he brought the State formally into the matter. The matter now rests with the attorney-general's office.

Olcott With Famous

It is understood that Sidney Olcott, who directed "Little Old New York" and "The Green Goddess" will make two pictures for Famous.

Forrest Halsey who did the scenario for "The Green Goddess" will also handle several scenarios for Famous.

A New Contract

By OSCAR NEUFELD

Treasurer, De Luxe Film Co., Philadelphia

The writer has been reading for some time, the arguments for and against the system of percentage booking, and thought it might be of interest to the readers of THE FILM DAILY, particularly to the exhibitors, to know about the De Luxe Film Company's refund contract.

The exhibitors in this territory think it is the fairest possible way that a distributor can sell his product to an exhibitor.

We have been fortunate in purchasing from the large independent producers good product at a fair price. We have not only purchased them from one concern, but from three or four of the large producers. These pictures may not measure up to the cost of productions of the pictures of the large national producers, but as box office attractions in many cases, they have gone five times beyond that of a so called million dollar production.

We were fortunate last year in having purchased such pictures as "More To Be Pitied Than Scorned," "Jacqueline," "Only a Shop Girl," "Streets of New York," "Temptation" and several other productions that meant dollars and cents to the theaters that played them, irrespective of what the pictures cost to make, and everyone of these pictures satisfied the audience because it had a human story well acted.

Fortunately this year, we have again secured an excellent line-up of independent productions, which we intend to sell to the exhibitors at a fair price, because we have been able to purchase them at a fair price, and we are going to give the exhibitors the benefit of our years of experience in the purchase and marketing of independent productions. This is our plan:

If the rights of a picture for our territory cost us $5,000, we figure that if we do $18,000 gross on this picture, we are making a fair profit for ourselves, and will be able to return to the exhibitor at the close of the playing season 25% of the money he has paid for this production. The summary of this is here given:

Anent Percentage

Commenting editorially under this caption "The Independent Exhibitor," San Francisco, says in part:

"The matter of checking percentage exhibition of pictures is the least obstacle in what seems to many as a complex problem. A general system of percentage showing would, naturally, eliminate a big part of the present traveling salesman cost. Distributor-exchanges can easily take care of their own percentage dates in the key-city or first-run points. Local representation in what was commonly termed the 'one-nighters' is the simplest part of the whole structure. The expense can be borne collectively by distributors, offset by the lessened cost of selling. Actual personal representation of producer-distributor at the theater door, with box-office statements, nightly settlement, etc., are all within the scope of the percentage system.

"Percentage will eliminate buying the egg before it is hatched. Production cost cannot rightfully be attached until public presentation establishes box-office value; then percentage basis automatically establishes itself. Theater percentage establishes itself through population, character of theater, seating capacity, management, details, etc., relatively based on the drawing-power of the attraction. There can be no set formula. What is worth 70-30 in one house may be worth 80-20 in a house across the street from it. It's a mutual partnership arrangement.

"Confidence, co-operation, truth and sanity, plus intensive application must be the foundation stone—and percentage will be the solution of the industry."

THE MIDNIGHT ALARM

From "Screen Opinions," Chicago

CCLASS A-c 90%. You can boost this picture for a special. It's the kind that should draw big in any locality."

From "New York Daily News"

"THE Midnight Alarm' shows one of the most realistic film fires we have ever seen. Then, too, there's an excellent exhibition of quick fire work—from bed to burning building as it were—and a spectacular train crash."

From "Exhibitors Herald"

"THE Midnight Alarm' provides excellent entertainment. Here is a fast moving story filled with dramatic action and suspense that should appeal to any theatre audience. It tells an absorbing story that is punctuated by spectacular scenes and punches that hold the interest unflinchingly. There is a great fire scene that is finely done; the wreck of an automobile by a train, and a suspenseful moment when a great drawbridge is lowered just in time to keep a passenger train from plunging into the river. But the production boasts more than the spectacular elements. The story runs along a vein of considerable human interest revolving about the search of an old couple for their long lost granddaughter."

From "Motion Picture News"

"THE picture carries action and incident all the way."

From "Moving Picture World"

"IT'S chock full of real action, and a midnight fire that is without a doubt the best of its kind this writer has seen. 'The Midnight Alarm' is a clever piece of work. The thrillers are well handled throughout and will keep your audience on the alert all the while for there is plenty happening in this picture. The frustrated attempt at wrecking the train at the trestle, following a villainous attack on the keeper of the switch house, is a knockout, and the surprise occasioned when the speeding train mounts the trestle just as the latter has been lowered would have made the 'nigger heaven' gods of yesteryear tear the house to pieces with excitement."

From "New York Evening Journal"

"THERE is a great fire with the heroine locked in a safe. The filming is on an elaborate scale and much attention was given to many scenes, particularly that of the fire."

From "New York American"

"THE Midnight Alarm' was set for action and it rings the bell."

From "Exhibitors Trade Review"

"THE Midnight Alarm' responds to the demand by a very large section of movie patrons for a 'sure-enough' thriller which breezes along at a cyclonic pace, makes a direct appeal to the most elemental emotions and winds up by enveloping hero and heroine in a blaze of glory. The 'blaze' must be taken literally for the fire in which the villain meets his well-deserved doom at the close registers as one of the most spectacular episodes in a picture which fairly vibrates with 'big punch' scenes as exemplified by the attempt to send a limited express crashing to the bottom of a trestle, an auto wrecked by a train and other exciting bits of realism."

From "New York Tribune"

"OUR advice is, do not miss 'The Midnight Alarm.'"

From "The Film Daily"

"THE picture is 'sure-fire' entertainment. Holds a decided appeal for the general public."

Historical Series

The company is sponsored by the American Patriotic League and plans to make pictures for non-theatrical use only. The Examiner in speaking of the plan, says the League has a membership of 7,000 including college men, business men and professionals. The Government will be presented with a print of each subject. A local studio will be used for the first one and later, according to the company, a studio will be built here. A system of exchanges is promised to handle distribution.

The series will include important incidents in the history of America such as its discovery and the like. The board of directors includes. Judge Levi McGee, E. A. Hanger, secretary of the Sons of the American Revolution; Fred H. Sears, former assistant to Professor Ridpath, author of "Ridpath's History of the World." Edward McKiernan, former manager of the M. P. Producers' Ass'n., Dr. Herman Fisher, capitalist Grover Jones, producer; Frederick L. Becker of Becker Prod.; W. A. Mennerd and Major Giggs of the Page Military Academy.

The coast dispatch would indicate that the new organization intends covering the same ground as the Chronicles of America unit which has the backing of the Yale University Press. These pictures, some of them already made will be released through Patre.

What they want most to import are educational, propaganda, agitation and revolution ones."

Supreme Court Justice Mahoney has appointed W. S. Katzenstein receiver of the film, "The Valley of the Ngumba," or "The Red Trail," an animal film made by the John Hagenback Films of Berlin. The receiver was asked for by Sonia Marcella as agent for Hagenback in a suit against the Acron Sales Corp., to which the film was disposed of, and which failed to pay $5,500 agreed upon for the rights in this country.

Cooper, Collings & Shreve of Los Angeles have filed an application in the Supreme Court for judgment in their suit against Arrow Film for $3,000 on a trade acceptance, on the ground that there is no defense to the action. The defendant agreed to pay the sum stated for "Idle Workers," to the Norman Manning Prod., but permitted the trade acceptance to go to protest. The claim was assigned to the plaintiff by the Norman Manning Prod. on a prior debt.

An attachment for $3,000 against the property of Joseph F. Vion of Los Angeles, formerly employed here in the office of George M. Cohan, has been granted in the Supreme Court in a suit of Everett J. Morgan and Geneva Wilson Winans on the ground of fraud and misrepresentation. The petition alleges that July 11 last Vion represented that he controlled all the stock of the Ridgefield Park Amusement Co., operating the Crescent theater at Ridgefield Park, N. J., and with intent to deceive the plaintiffs stated that the business had been profitable for the past three years, had averaged net profit of $90 to $100 a week, and that the theater and its contents were free of all debt. The plaintiffs say they paid him $1,500, and found that the theater had been unprofitable, and that the lease and chattels were mortgaged.

IDEAS

By DANNY

Inspiration want their audience guaranteed tonight. At the opening of "The White Sister," in case it rains—so their newspaper ad's say—just call a checker taxi. And motor to the 14th St. at their expense.

Negative costs increase with every shower.

"The Hunchback"

This one looks like a real box-office. Of course there was so much story—much incident—that of necessity some of the early sequences look distorted. Many of them were too soft. But the finish makes up for it. And the last few reels are full of action.

Chaney's performance is all that could be expected—and more. But the perfection of his makeup found some critics who felt that the character of Quasimodo was a trifle reserved.

From the box office angle—picture values—excellence of cast—and the last few reels should put this big picture over. The title alone, considering how many have read this classic, could make thousands who never attend pictures, want to see it.

"If Winter Comes"

Why this has been so long coming by William Fox and his close associates know. Certainly it should have been completed for showing last January. But they ran into a lot of bad luck in the making, six months more was spent in shooting alone, and the cost must have been tremendous.

Hutchinson's book had a greatogue here. There is a question if it isn't arriving a bit too late to capitalize reader interest, which, if captured at the peak, might have made no difference. But better late than never, and while a bit heavy, and with a sad finish, it is still a real picture. Percy Marmont never worked so well. His characterization is better than that of Cyril Maude, as shown in the stage play. They photographed Ann Forrest to the very worst disadvantage possible. A touch of war buff was shown in less than 40 shots, but it was quite effective.

Wood to Do "Next Corner"

Sam Wood's next picture for Paramount will be "The Next Corner," by Kate Jordan.

Two for Open Market

"Ashes of Vengeance," the new Talmadge picture and "The Fighting Blade," the new Barthelmess vehicle will both be released on the open market by First National.

Hoffman and Aronson Back

M. H. Hoffman and Alexander S. Aronson of Truart, returned yesterday from a trip to the Mid-west, Grave fears are entertained for the safety of the American film men now in Tokio as representatives of important American distributors. Famous Players, Universal, United Artists and Fox all maintain their own headquarters in Tokio from which point Japanese business and, in some cases, other Far Eastern transactions are handled.

Strenuous efforts are being made to secure direct communication with the area stricken by earthquake and fire, but up to late yesterday, all efforts proved unavailing. Abe Berman, foreign manager of United Artists, attempted to get a message through to the Japanese capital through the American consul. The Western Union and the Radio Corp. of America admitted their hands were tied. Wireless messages were being accepted for Osaka which is quite a distance from Tokio, but export managers considered this an unsatisfactory means of securing the much desired information.

Famous Players operate in Japan as Famous-Lasky Paramount Films, Ltd., with Tom Cochrane and R. E. McIntyre in charge. The headquarters are located in the Shiba ward of Tokio which is located along the water front and which is reported in

Fate of Film Men In Tokio Still Doubtful

press dispatches to have suffered heavy damage. The foreign department at Famous assumed yesterday that the offices had been destroyed. No word has been received from either Cochrane or McIntyre.

N. L. Manheim, foreign manager of Universal has been sending messages regularly since the first word of the disaster came through by cable. Universal officials are very much concerned over the safety of their employees there which total 44, all told. By a curious twist of fate, Edward B. Rowe, Tokio manager is now in Universal City en route to Japan after a vacation spent in New York. Rowe is on his first vacation in three years and happened to pick an auspicious moment to depart from Japanese shores. Frank Lappin and J. D. Miller, the latter an accountant are the other American members of the Universal force there.

Robert H. Cochrane of Universal is worried over the fate of his brother, Tom who is the Famous Players representative in Japan. In every case, it has been impossible to get through a wireless or a cable to ascertain the exact status of matters.

Delbert Goodman represents Fox in Tokio where the operating company is known as Fox Films, Far East Corp., Ltd. This company, too had an extensive establishment there about which there is no information. Goodman has only been in the East for about a month, since Fox's expansion there is new.

H. Wayne Pierson, Mrs. Pierson and their child, and Charles Dreher are the representatives of the United Artists in Japan.

While A. C. Berman, foreign manager had not received any direct word he was informed by George Mooser, former representative for United Artists there that he believed the headquarters had been destroyed.

Mooser, who is familiar with the devastated territory, said yesterday that he believed that few Americans in the film colony would be found among the missing. He pointed out that the catastrophe occurred about midday on Saturday, adding that at this time of the day, on any summer Saturday, most Americans were out of the cities, at some resort.

Distribution in general will not be hit in Japan inasmuch as those American companies that maintain their own exchange systems also have offices in cities like Osaka, Nagoya, Nagasaki.

Horace T. Clarke, Far Eastern representative for David P. Howells, Inc. who has spent considerable time in the Orient and knows Japan quite well declared yesterday that, in his opinion, many of the theaters in Tokio and Yokohama must have been destroyed. He estimated that there were about 175 houses in Tokio, about 50 of them fairly good houses and that Yokohama had between 30 and 40.

A recent report sent to the U. S. Department of Commerce by Martin G. Scott, attached to the American trade commissioners office in Tokio stated that there are 50 theaters in that city but that they play to an audience of about 10,000,000 annually. The most important company in Japan is the Nippon Katsudeshashin Kabushiki Kaisha which owns and controls about 350 of the 500 houses in the whole of the country.

Those American companies not maintaining their own connections in Japan distribute through domestic organizations there.

Rushing Earthquake Films Here

International News stated yesterday that the negative of several hundred feet of film depicting the ravages caused by the earthquake in Tokio are now aboard a steamer bound for this country. The pictures were secured from an airplane by Captain Ariel Varees who flew from Shanghai to Tokio, secured the pictures and then returned to Shanghai in time to catch an American bound boat. International says the negative will be rushed cross-country by airplane and claims that Varees was the first news cameraman to reach the scene of the disaster so soon after it occurred.

Newspaper Opinions

"The Hunchback of Notre Dame"
Universal
Astor

AMERICAN—This much I'll say, and you can flaunt it before my eyes evermore: a more remarkable, epochal, unforgettable, haunting and obsessional piece of eccentric, bizarre, cynical character acting than that contributed to "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," * * * by Lon Chaney, I have never seen on stage or screen.

Lon Chaney has stamped himself as an artist of purest ray serene. This bit of work cannot die. It is immortally fine. * * *

"The Hunchback of Notre Dame" is epoch-making.

EVENING JOURNAL—Lon Chaney's picturization of Quasimodo, the Hunchback of Notre Dame, * * * deserves to live for generations as one of the most impressive characterizations ever exhibited on stage or screen.

It is the magnificence and spaciousness of the settings built by Universal for Victor Hugo's rich romance that intensify the artistry of Mr. Chaney's almost super-human performance.

EVENING WORLD—All through our movie-going career we have been keeping a little safety-deposit box full of adjectives of praise that we would call into use when "The" picture came along; and now that "The" picture is here, we've lost the key. Wallace Worsley, * * * has done a noble bit of work and one well deserving a special niche in the Hall of Fame. From now on Worsley is on our list of wonder men of the screen.

HERALD—* * * a picture as beautiful, as profoundly stirring, as anything that the erratic movie industry has ever produced. * * * It is an indisputably fine achievement. * * * The settings are magnificent beyond words and stamped with an authenticity, a fidelity to detail, that sets them above anything that has been erected in Hollywood. * * * This performance transcends anything that Lon Chaney has ever done before. His makeup is astounding and his spiritual realization of the role uncanny.

MAIL—From the point of spectacle it is as great a picture as has been produced in America. Indeed, it will stand as a monument to the ability of American directors to handle vast crowds of players realistically and artistically. In this respect Wallace Worsley, * * * deserves a place with the greatest German directors.

There is one big fault to be found with the screen version of "The Hunchback of Notre Dame." The picture lacks coherence, the genius to make it a great drama. As it stands it is a mighty array of perfect incidents—acting, setting, direction of each scene. Perfection marks every detail. Yet something is lacking to make it live as a whole.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—* * * the settings were as fine as I have ever seen on the screen. * * *

Lon Chaney's performance, we do not doubt, will be the center of much discussion. But whatever conclusion is reached one admits his characterization is unique in the annals of motion pictures. * * * Carl Laemmle and R. H. Cochrane have made a production that, both from an entertaining and an educational viewpoint, is all that one can ask—and that is big praise when so often attempts are made to do big things and fail.

POST—Elaborate settings, correct costuming, a good cast and excellent direction are all to be commended.

Unfortunately the too realistic portrayal of Quasimodo must be questioned. * * *

The length of the play will allow a good half hour's cut, to say nothing of the many impossibly dull moments in the first half of the production.

The second half improves materially; the action is faster, the continuity is better, even the acting acquires a new tempo and temper; several mob scenes really attain the mob spirit. * * *

SUN—"The Hunchback of Notre Dame" at the Astor, is a far better picture than anything the Germans have sent us, and, with the possible exception of "The Covered Wagon," it ranks as the greatest achievement of the American screen. Lovely to behold, stirring, yet dignified in treatment, it takes its place among those unforgettable works which once in a very blue moon are broadcast over the world from the canned drama factories of Hollywood. * * *

Frankly, the hunchback, as played by Lon Chaney seems to us the most striking characterization that the screen can boast of.

TELEGRAM—* * * Hugo's story in pictures—vital, vivid pictures that hold the attention and excite admiration by their undeniable power and beauty. * * * Lon Chaney's acting is a thing to be seen with breathless attention.

TIMES—He (Chaney) gives an unrestrained but remarkable performance in this production. * * * It is, however, a strong production, on which no pains or money have been spared to depict the seamy side of old Paris. The "set" of the cathedral is really marvelous. * * * However, the film holds the interest because of the excellent acting and "sets" and the splendid atmosphere throughout the drama. * * * It is a drama which will appeal to all those who are interested in fine screen acting, artistic settings and a remarkable handling of crowds who don't mind a grotesque figure and a grim atmosphere.

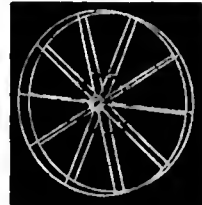

TRIBUNE—It always seems to us that Chaney depends entirely on grease paint and putty for his impressions rather than allowing some of the effect to come from within. He is more of a makeup expert than an actor, or so he seems to us. * * * Nothing more need be said of the magnificence of the settings, the enormity of the mob scenes and the beauty of the photography. So much has been said already that every one takes it as a matter of course.

WORLD—"The Hunchback of Notre Dame" is a motion picture which we shall never forget. * * *

"The Hunchback of Notre Dame" is a marvelous example of "bigness" in picture making. * * *

We care nothing about it whatsoever as drama, yet as a production it is so enormous in size and numbers as to be interesting to look upon.

A PROBLEM

By DANNY

Production costs that have crept. Exhibition values that are sky-high. Exhibitors who refuse to advance prices. And consequently claim they cannot finance the big pictures and make money. (They don't tell you they can make money with the little ones. Can they?) With these organizations facing chaos. With producers clamoring for more rentals through distributing agencies.

Is this the beginning of the storm? Is the prophecy of six months ago in sight?

Gentlemen, it's something to think about.

The Hays group again demonstrates its effectiveness. Right on the job enlisting the entire industry to aid in the relief of Japan. A fine move; a splendid move—the sort of action that lives up to the charter: "to attain and maintain"—the best of good will towards this industry from the peoples of the world.

Exhibitors Distribution

Within the next few days you will read the advertisement of the Theater Owners Distributing Corp. with regard to its plans. There is no secret that Carl Anderson will have charge of the distribution; and that distribution will be physically handled by the FBO.

But what is most important is this: what pictures will be distributed—who will make them—and how will they compare with product being offered? This is not the season when anything but the best will do. Without the best of product any distributing organization—exhibitors or others—will find itself hard up against it.

And still they come. "The Silent Command" (Fox). "The White Sister" last night. Mae Murray's latest "The French Doll," and Hal Lloyd's "Why Worry." All in the same week. And several more. Much. Far too much.

Cosmos Art Has All—Embracing, Idealistic Plan to Make Exhibitors Happy

At last there enters the motion picture industry an organization designed to fill the exhibitors' cup of happiness to the brim; help him make money and assure for him an immediate release for important pictures like "The Covered Wagon," "Robin Hood" and "Knighthood." This organization is the Cosmos Art Pictures Corp., capitalized, according to its literature, at $10,000,000 in Delaware.

In addition to all of the amazing promises made in a pamphlet issued by the organization, a gentleman representing himself as Frank M. Willard, studio manager, adds more—lots more. To return to the prospectus:

The organization has been formed "by a group of forward looking men in the industry who seek to place the exhibitor in his true relation to the industry." It plans to effect a cordial and harmonious relationship with the

"Rights" Come Up

M. P. T. O. and American Society May Reach New Basis of Understanding on Tax Situation

The first official statement to emanate from the M. P. T. O. and the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers on the music tax situation was issued yesterday. In general it covered the ground already gone over in previous articles published in THE FILM DAILY but went further in that the question of the disposal of what are known as the "performing rights," of the music publishers were gone into.

As noted, the temporary basis of settlement provided that the Society was not to institute any more suits against M. P. T. O. members while negotiations were under way. E. C. Mills, acting for the Society has drawn up a new system of license fees which eliminates the alleged unfairness of charging the small theater owner the same fee for a license as the owner of a big house.

So far as the "performing rights" are concerned, it was pointed out in producers, "by informing them of the needs and desires of the exhibitors throughout the land" and the prospectus adds optimistically, "it will be a short time until Cosmos Art be looked up to by the producers as the logical source of information concerning the exhibitor and his needs and demands."

This work will be aided by the fact that the president of Cosmos Art, James E. Bowen, is also president of the United M. P. Producers of America, "perhaps the largest and most influential organization of independent producers in America and leading many of the most prominent producers." In carrying out this work, James E. Bowen and C. Flack will be the guiding lights. Bowen is said to have been connected with Robert Brunton, while Flack is characterized as one of the former members of the Illinois bar.

Exhibitors will be interested in the broad aims of the organization which appear in the prospectus:

It is the intention to maintain an extensive research department under the guidance of capable executives, and its files will contain exhaustive reports and data on any subject that may concern its members. At the present time it has on file data covering practically every town and every exhibitor in the country, and when the tabulation is completed, it will have a separate card covering every city, giving the population, theater-going population, nativity of the population, race, financial standing and per capita wealth, average income, type of photoplays favored by the community and individual data on individual theaters, such as seating capacity, admission charges, etc., etc. In this way it will be in a position to determine in advance just the type of product required by each and every theater in the country. Furthermore, it will be able to give each of its members full and complete co-operation in the solution of the many vexing problems that face him from time to time, and make your association the clearing-house of profitable business-building ideas used by various members throughout the entire nation."

And then, some more of the aims:

"You will be given its assistance in opening new houses in localities where it is deemed advisable or expedient, and whenever possible the Association will assist you financially.

"A complete organization will be maintained by it, and will handle only those productions which meet the high standards it has set.

"Releases not on its own program will be obtained if possible, when requested by its exhibitors.

"All productions released through this Association will be on a straight booking contract.

"Members will receive special rates.

"There will be no grouping of pictures.

"No franchise system will be used.

"You can buy in the open market—when and where you will—your membership does not compel you to accept its releases—though you will find them all choice productions that will reflect credit to you and your house."

Mr. Willard happened into THE FILM DAILY office and was good enough to add to the general outline as given above: He said he was here with Charles A. McVickers who is general manager of distribution to organize 39 exchanges throughout the country and generally spread the idea. He paid the THE FILM DAILY a very flattering compliment when he declared that the small one inch ad which has been appearing for some weeks past in its columns has attracted the attention of 14,000 exhibitors, all of them now members of the Cosmos Art organization at $10 a head. Willard declared that his company would build theaters, finance exhibitors, distribute pictures, make 'em and the like. When asked what producers Cosmos Art had lined up he said that, following the completion of present contracts, the company would handle the pictures of Harold Lloyd, Charles Ray, Reginald Barker, Fred Niblo and then in the same breath added the following: Shellcraft Prod., James E. Bowen Prod., Sherwood Mac Donald Prod. and Excelsior Prod. Willard said this vast enterprise had the backing of the American Association; that the company had contracted with Gene Stratton Porter for 72 stories to be filmed, that a special drive would be made for non theatrical business; that a story based on the life of George Washington would be the first of an historical series; that the Powers projection people had agreed to work on the manufacture of a new style projector which would be effective in the use of a daylight screen.

Willard nonchalantly added that the enterprise represented a joint investment of $22,000,000 divided as follows: Cosmos Art Pictures Ass'n, $10,000,000; Cosmos Art Finance Corp., $10,000,000 and the other party $2,000,000 to be divided among the producing units.

Film executives in New York may be hard-boiled, unsympathetic, but many of them declared their afternoon had been lightened by a good laugh when some of the details of the Cosmos Art scheme had been explained over the telephone. One declared the matter really should be turned over to Signor Mussolini of Italy for attention.

One man did get explosive and he was John C. Ragland, Harold Lloyd's Eastern representative who was anxious to get in communication with Willard so that the latter could repeat what he had told THE FILM DAILY about Lloyd's future plans. Arthur S. Kane declared he did not know anything about Ray's future plans inasmuch as their former close association had been recently severed.

the statement that the M. P. T. O. made the point that the popularity of new compositions is greatly enhanced through the continual playing of them in picture theaters. The statement then adds this significant paragraph:

"The suggestion was then made and developed, that possibly a mutually agreeable arrangement might be made whereby the copyright proprietors might be given co-operation by the theater owners in a systematic, thorough and inclusive 'plug' for their compositions, of such tangible value from the exploitation standpoint that they might well afford to relinquish so-called 'performing rights,' in consideration of the service thus to be rendered."

EASTMAN POSITIVE FILM

To protect the exhibitor against screening, unknowingly, film of inferior photographic quality we make Eastman Positive Film identifiable. Musicians in Providence have just received an increase of $6 a week while operators in Springfield theaters demand more. Newspaper Opinions

"Rosita"—United Artists

Lyric

AMERICAN—* * * has a vehicle worthy of her talents. Few, if any, of her admirers will regret that she has graduated from the Pollyanna class and stepped into the long skirts of Rosita. It is evident that "the world's sweetheart" has been hiding a mature dramatic talent within her childish golden curls.

"Rosita" is not only an intensely interesting reflection of the court of Spain a century ago, but it is magnificently mounted and admirably cast.

DAILY NEWS—True we enjoyed Miss Pickford's new Spanish characterization, but that's because the dainty blond star, * * * singer, is enabled to show her pretty ways and her faculty for doing what has to be done in the proper time and place. What we mean is simply that Mary can and does act.

"Rosita" is a sweet romance—nothing more, but then it doesn't intend to be anything more. * * * As the debauched King Carlos of Spain, we can't say enough for Holbrook Blinn.

EVENING JOURNAL—Every foot of "Rosita," Mary Pickford's new production, is a delight to the eye. Acting, costumes, settings and photography combine to present a glowing stream of radiant beauty, each scene reflecting the intelligent composition strength and finish of a painting by a Rembrandt, a Watteau or a Meissonier. * * * The picture was directed by Ernst Lubitsch—and shows it.

EVENING WORLD—The story of "Rosita" is a gripping one, splendidly cast, directed and photographed and is indeed a cinema treat. * * * It is thoroughly enjoyable, and we wouldn't have missed it for worlds.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—Of this year's greatest productions and the finest thing Mary Pickford has ever done, not even excepting "Stella Maris." * * *

Here is art in motion pictures. Art from the excellent scenario furnished by Hans Kraely down to the tiniest bit contributed by the unimportant extra. The story of "Rosita" has suspense, comedy, pathos and human interest to the nth degree.

POST * * * in fact the plot of the motion picture is a fragile thing, but Mary Pickford more than makes up for this lack as the little street singer of Seville. The settings are beautiful, the photography perfect, and the deft touches of Ernest Lubitsch, the director of so many successful foreign films, are seen throughout the picture * * *

"Rosita" is far from being a great picture, but the audiences that will no doubt crowd the Lyric will not be disappointed either in the film, or Mary Pickford. Yes, Mary is as firmly seated on her throne in filmdom as ever.

SUN—* * * wholly charming little comedy * * * Mary Pickford is a Spanish street singer—a creature of fire, a sort of blond Pola Negri. She is excellent.

"Rosita" is a good film. It is a dash of "grand operatism," a dash of unusually good comedy and a dash or so of melodrama.

The charm of "Rosita" is due a great deal to the intelligent direction of Ernst Lubitsch.

TELEGRAM—You will wait a long, long time before you see a better picture than "Rosita." Here is a charming story full of romance and humor, which is told with unflinching movement.

TIMES—Nothing more delightfully charming than Mary Pickford's new picture, "Rosita," has been seen on the screen for some time * * * and in mentioning names one ought to include Holbrook Blinn, who gives such an excellent performance as Carlos of Spain.

The photography is as perfect as the acting of the principals, and the sight of the interiors and exteriors elicits murmurs of admiration. * * * This is one of the most charming productions in which Miss Pickford has appeared.

TRIBUNE—Ernst Lubitsch * * * has put into the picture all of the charm, spirit and "community acting" which made him world-famed as soon as his first picture had been shown in the Eastern and Western hemispheres. * * *

The performance of Miss Pickford is, we think, an exceptionally brilliant one. * * *

WORLD—* * * has given a right sweet and artistic performance in a picture which is pretty good entertainment. For our own part, we can see in it nothing of a departure from the regulation American method. It all seems the same old stuff. Lubitsch has learned the American formula well and rapidly.

"If Winter Comes"—Fox Times Square

AMERICAN—It is very long and quite astoundingly faithful to the story. Few pictures are as faithful, and few are as dull. * * * The first three-quarters of an hour of "If Winter Comes" could and should be skipped.

Presuming that we do want a faithful recital of Mr. Hutchinson's story—we get it at the Times Square. It is a well-made picture.

DAILY NEWS—You may enjoy it tremendously and your next seat neighbor may thoroughly abhor it. It's all according to whether you are in sympathy with the characters and the plot—whether you liked the book, if you read it.

EVENING JOURNAL—* * * is one of the most faithful visualizations of a fine novel ever made. It is truly the book in pictures and is bound to warm the hearts of Hutchinson's myriad admirers.

EVENING WORLD—"If Winter Comes" struck us as being a complete picture, inasmuch as it was very satisfactory. It is well worth the seeing.

HERALD—It is, incidentally, a singularly fine motion picture. * * *

When the 200 pages have been exhausted and the meat of Mr. Hutchinson's novel has been arrived at, the picture takes a tremendous burst of speed and ends gorgeously.

By far the finest thing in the picture is Percy Marmont's impersonation of Mark Sabre.

Nevertheless, "If Winter Comes" remains a good picture. The story is extremely powerful, and it is eloquently expressed by Percy Marmont. It is unfortunate that it should be made to suffer from faults which, after all are purely mechanical.

MAIL—* * * No novel which has appeared on the screen has been transferred so exactly as "If Winter Comes." Indeed it might be added that the story has been copied word for word. Not one incident germane to the whole has been eliminated and the result is truly remarkable.

Watching the tale unfold is like reading the book with living illustrations on the page opposite. You read of what took place and then see it happen. If some one were to tell us this and then say that the result was most effective, intensely dramatic and beautiful we would say that such a thing was impossible.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—The picture is crowded with titles and sub-titles. * * * This is the greatest fault in the entire picture—but to pass on to the virtues.

The characters are all drawn with the finesse of an etching. Each player selected fits into his or her role with an unusual amount of ease and grace. * * *

Mr. Marmont plays Mark Sabre, giving him all the gentleness, all the humor and all the wistfulness which Mr. Hutchinson created in the character of the novel. * * * Truly, his is a wonderful characterization.

POST—Considering that A. S. M. Hutchinson's popular novel is not adapted for the screen and could be adapted to it only by being rewritten, the moving picture version at the Times Square Theatre is a fairly good movie. * * *

The film is saved by the "good acting of the leading players, particularly Percy Marmont * * *

SUN—* * * seems to have come to town for the autumn, winter, spring and probably a few more seasons, to judge by its reverent reception last night at its opening at the Times Square theater. A really beautiful picture it is, sincerely and movingly enacted, full of fine nuances as well as more emphatic emotional qualities.

TIMES—It is a faithfully-produced photodrama. * * * Percy Marmont has shown marvelous patience, a love of acting and a resolution to make his Sabre as true as any man could. His is really a remarkable performance, except toward the end, where there is a scene or two of over-acting. * * *

This production is interesting, but the number of the close-ups ought to be eliminated or cut. It is a gloomy story with hardly a whiff of relief from the constant stream of troubles that beset Sabre. Still it is one of the best adaptations of a difficult literary work ever filmed.

TRIBUNE—Any producer who has an "If Winter Comes" to his credit never need worry any more about what he will do. One such perfect picture is all that the public can reasonably expect one man to give to the world. * * * We are ready to declare that it is without any exception the most engrossing screen drama we have seen in at least a year.

Percy Marmont, who plays Mark Sabre, may take unto himself all that we said in regard to the producer of the picture. For an actor to have given anything as great as this performance should mean that he never again could be unhappy or discouraged.

WORLD—It is an actual photograph of the novel's characters and incidents. Accordingly the audiences who having read the book, assemble to see the picture, will not be disappointed. Those who attend simply to see another motion picture will not go home so favorably impressed. * * *

The cast, with minor exceptions, is one of the most evenly capable that has presented a picture on Broadway in some time.

TRICKY

By DANNY

fortune has been spent, and you can see it, in "The White Sister." And, while it ranks high among the big pictures of recent years, and even among the best ever made from a production viewpoint, it may prove a flop at the box office. Because it is itself to discussion relative to the Catholic Church. While Catholics may not object to it—indeed may like it very much indeed, because the picture proves true to her vows—it is one of those tricky pictures and you never can tell what is going to happen.

It is certain—several shots in "The Crucifixion" should be eliminated. They are totally unnecessary. A title indicating that the Catholic church enslaves women should also be eliminated and another that the heroine is the bride of Christ must be cut. That a nun is a bride of the Catholic church is true, and easily acceptable. But there is a "and is, and will be" treacherous criticism of the heroine in the picture or play, being depicted in the manner indicated. The title is true to the nature of the ceremony may be—does not render it excusable, however. It is deeply religious, and while perhaps satisfying to Catholic believers because of its truth, is still far from what should be presented in entertainment. It encroaches far upon something sacred.

Audience Attitude

A friendly audience, such as was seen at the premiere, (incidentally the most notable of the season), both cheered and applauded when the title was read with reference to the enslaving women. If this happens—and it did—among a friendly to the picture and the picture—is it not a fair question to ask what might happen with the picture in general?

More On Percentage

By R. B. WILBY
Princess Theater, Birmingham, Ala.

Percentage playing now exists, but it's percentage of a guess at the gross rather than of the gross itself. How can an exhibitor pay varying prices—with the maximum probably three times the minimum—for different pictures unless he determines in his own mind what these different pictures will probably gross in his house, and offer some more or less fixed proportion, or percentage, of that figure as rental? How can a salesman set quotas unless it be on some guess—oh, what fool guesses some of them make!—at the "exhibition value," which simply means box-office money?

Exhibitors do pay different prices, and do it because they believe one picture will gross more than another; never because one costs more than

Looking Around

Production Investigation Being Made on the Coast by Representative of Theater Owners Dist. Corp.
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Los Angeles—"Bill" Alexander, well known in the East, is here investigating production activities for the new Theater Owners Distributing Corp. He has been talking to a number of "independent" producers, but from what can be learned, so far has evidently not corralled much product. Indeed, there isn't a lot of product worth corraling being made without release being determined in advance.

Alexander cannot be located for a statement, but producers who have been talking to him say the market looks barren for good pictures. Those obtainable do not measure up to the demands made by the big pictures now being released.

No Release Yet for "White Sister"

It is understood no releasing arrangements have as yet been made for "The White Sister," produced by Inspiration, which distributes its Barthelmess pictures through First National. It may be for this reason that the opening at the 44th St. Theater on Wednesday was the most notable of the season. Among the more important producers and distributors present were Adolph Zukor, Harry Schwalbe and Jesse L. Lasky.

A. B. C. Defunct

Local Booking Combination Definitely Passes Out—Circuits Reported Lowering Offers on Pictures

The Associated Booking Corp. has ceased to exist. Despite valiant efforts made by certain elements in its personnel to keep the organization alive, the majority opinion held that it was best for the body to stop functioning.

Meetings have been held at which ways and means to continue activities were discussed but the attendance at these sessions has dwindled down steadily until yesterday, at what was considered the final meeting, only two exhibitors were present.

The A. B. C. was formed last winter by about 65 local exhibitors controlling 312 days in bookings. The purpose of it was to fight the powerful theater circuits such as Loew, Fox and the U. B. O. on first-run contracts, the impression prevailing that the number of booking days would present sufficient argument to bring the distributors into line. However, various of the distributors went on record as opposing doing business with exhibitor booking companies.

Lasky Leaves Soon

Jesse L. Lasky will leave for the coast in a few days.

Hamilton Film Through 1st Nat'l?

It was reported yesterday that "Black is White," the definite title for the new Lloyd Hamilton feature, in which Al Jolson was to star, will be distributed through First National. The picture is practically finished with Tom Wilson, Edna May Sperl, Sally Long, Irma Harrison, and Lucille La Verne in the cast.

Denies Distributing Deals

Frank M. Willard, studio manager of the Cosmos Art Pictures Association, denied yesterday that he had made statements to THE FILM DAILY concerning the distribution of the Harold Lloyd pictures. Willard declared that if such an impression was fostered as a result of his statements as published, it was a false one, as he meant to create no such idea. This statement followed an interview held between Willard and John C. Ragland, Eastern representative for Lloyd, at which a FILM DAILY representative was present. Willard declared Lloyd would merely make his pictures at the Cosmos Art plant, and said this applied to Charles Ray, Fred Niblo, Reginald Barker and the other producers mentioned in the original article.

Investigation shows that something under 20 pictures have been made for the "independent" or "state rights" market during the past few months. Of these, according to report, only two or three have measured up. The rest are hanging fire.

Naturally there is much interest here as to any new distributing machine, especially when planned by exhibitors, and producers will watch with interest the movements of Carl Anderson, whose distributing company will undertake the actual work of handling the product for the exhibitors.

It was impossible to obtain any statement from the local offices of the Theatre Owners Dis. Corp. yesterday with regard to the above.

Lila Through With Famous?

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Los Angeles—The Times declares Lila Lee is at work on her last picture for Paramount and quotes her as saying she wants to return to the stage with James Kirkwood, her husband.

It is understood Miss Lee's contract with Famous has expired and that she is now employed by that company on a picture-to-picture basis only.

Americans Believed Safe

Although no direct word has been received from Japan by distributors here, cables in yesterday's dailies did not include the names of any known film men now in Japan in the list of the American dead there.

Universal's future headquarters in Japan will be located in Osaka until the reconstruction of Tokio has advanced sufficiently to provide suitable accommodations there. The Imperial theater, Tokio, which houses many first-runs, is a complete ruin.

J. J. McCarthy, a close friend of H. Wayne Pierson, received a cable yesterday informing him that Pierson and his family were safe. United Artists, however, had no word from Charles Dreher, associated with Pierson in the conduct of their office there.

More On Percentage

another to produce. Sales managers do guess at box office values in individual towns, asking for a picture in a "good" town twice as much as in a "bad" town of the same size.

And if that isn't percentage, and in its worst possible form, what is it?

It doesn't follow that the brainy exhibitor would be penalized. If he is so good, there is every probability that the exchange would be glad to get into his house at from five to ten per cent less than into that of some dud. There's no discouraging hustle, for in any scheme of things, the exhibitor would get a large enough percentage of the gross to make work worth while.

There's no logic in any inspection of costs on either side. The percentage at which a picture should be played in any town can be determined by trading quite as well as, and certainly more intelligently than, the flat rental. The exhibitor can quite reasonably pay different percentages for different pictures; probably should pay varying amounts, for that matter.

There are ills that percentage will not cure, of course, but surely it's a more reasonable basis for trading than the present conflicting guesses at the gross, for it's easier to trade for a thing the value of which is known than for that which is absolutely unknown.

In all the percentage arguments there has been nothing about the actual percentage. Varies, of course, but between some rather narrow limits. Famous Players play almost all pictures in their theaters at from 20 to 25 per cent, and apparently have no trouble getting all the outside product they want at that. In fact when they buy a product the distributor runs to the trade papers to brag about it. Of course they do not sell at that, and, through their exchange managers, express the opinion that THEIR product is not high when the rental runs up to 35 per cent of the box office takings. When it is taken into consideration that it is doubtful if any chain can do as much in a small or medium sized town as an individual, it's evident by how much they are out buying the independent.

It has been said that some exhibitors will not make fair returns. Maybe; some merchants will not pay their bills, but credit goes on. Crooked must be guarded against in any business.

Newspaper Opinions

"Why Worry?"—Pathe Strand

AMERICAN—What this curious pair do to that country and its military forces constitutes one of the funniest pictures of the season in filmdom?

Not a fight or skirmish takes place that they do not win and always with a new funny angle.

DAILY NEWS—... we are absolutely correct in saying that when we forgot our worries watching "Why Worry?" we made note of exactly twenty-one shrieks, eighteen loud laughs, four screams, and an uncountable (we assure you this is not our fault) seemingly senseless number of giggles and gurgles. We partook in the shrieks, laughs and giggles.

EVENING JOURNAL—Because Harold Lloyd's "Safety Last" was such a good picture his newest, "Why Worry?" suffers by comparison.

EVENING WORLD—And, take it from us, if you see Harold in this, his most uproarious farce for months, you won't have a cause in the world to worry.

It's a laugh from start to finish; not one of those little giggly sort of laughs, but one, long, uninterrupted, guffaw!

MAIL—... another of the successes which this gifted comedian is using to climb the ladder of fame to a place all his own in film comedy.

There are laughs galore in "Why Worry." Those who seldom smile should not miss this picture.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—To describe "Why Worry," ... is as difficult as to describe the sensation of being tickled in the ribs. The piece is broad farce, with an occasional bit of burlesque; a combination of what is oldest and newest in this type of work.

POST—As long as Harold Lloyd continues to make films like "Why Worry?" he has no cause to worry. The picture is very laughable and is produced in only the way Harold Lloyd can put comedy on the screen. "Why Worry?" however, is not as clever or as subtle as some of his earlier five-reel releases, and "Grandma's Boy" still heads the list.

TELEGRAM—Within the period of a year he has given such admirably fine of laughter as "Grandma's Boy," "Dr. Jack," "Safety Last" and "Why Worry?" which is without question his greatest humorous achievement to date.

TIMES—Strand, contains a number of new and absurdly farcical bits of "business." The film is called "Why Worry?" This is a swift-moving production, just as good as any in which Harold Lloyd has ever appeared.

TRIBUNE—The picture is filled with new and ludicrous stuff. ... Our preference is still for "Grandma's Boy," but we have an idea that most people will like the new picture.

WORLD—"Why Worry?" is so far ahead of the average funny film that it is sure to be so widely enjoyed. We only mean to say that it is nothing like so masterful a comedy as his "Grandma's Boy," nor does it sparkle with the keen wit of "Dr. Jack," which, by the way, it resembles.

We can recall no picture coming from the Lloyd studio which has been more thoroughly filled with "gags" than this.

"The Silent Command"—Fox Central

AMERICAN—Yet he (Fox) has done the job well enough to win official commendation from old General Pershing and young Theodore Roosevelt ... Truly, it is blood-stirring stuff.

EVENING JOURNAL—There is a good deal of wild plot weaving in "The Silent Command" and much that taxes the credulity of even a generous picture fan.

EVENING WORLD—... for if there was ever a fine, upstanding story of the sea and the navy, then "The Silent Command" is it.

And, aside from all its propaganda, "The Silent Command" is good drama—thrilling drama.

MAIL—But the glory of this picture is the glory of the Navy—a fine patriotism mixed with stirring adventure. Its views ... are beautiful, and at the same authentic. The great actor in the piece is the Navy, ... and it's a smashing hit for the Navy.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—The scenes on the boat were splendid. A raging ocean was prominently featured and acted up very well when it had its photograph taken. ...

"The Silent Command" glorifies the spirit of the navy, and you leave the theater feeling that it's a pretty grand old flag and all that sort of thing.

POST—Moderately good entertainment ...

There is a lot of flag-waving, and an effort, not entirely successful, to achieve an atmosphere of keyed-up patriotism about the picture.

An occasional thrill is provided—a corking shipreck, with a stirring fight going on inside the cabin of the vessel, and some shots of the fleet that are as good, but no better, than those usually seen in the news reels.

SUN—It is full of esprit de corps, spies and counter spies, villainous foreign agents, patriotic self-sacrifice and some extremely meritorious marine photography. ... Edmund Lowe's acting in this mad scene, as it was uniformly all through the picture, was so good that the patrons applauded.

TELEGRAM—The story is a brilliant one and well told, while the photography is of the very highest type.

The theme is a simple one, but there are many thrilling moments. ...

TIMES—... is an old-fashioned melodrama with the old school of acting. It is true that the film is dressed up to modern days, ... interesting "shots" of vessels at sea. ... There are other portions of the fight that are quite stirring.

There is nothing very subtle in this production. ... The splashing waters, the uniforms and the sea pictures are very good.

TRIBUNE—Mr. Fox and his cohorts seem to have spared neither money nor energy in this somewhat pretentious undertaking, and the actors have contributed skill and courage. ...

Altogether, this new picture provided to those not addicted to hectic internationalism an exciting and entertaining evening not entirely free from special pleading.

WORLD—Likewise it found favor with last night's audience, largely recruited from the naval dignitaries now in Manhattan. Most of this favor it merited. ... But best of all were the flashes of the Atlantic fleet, the doomed ship nose under in the storm, and panoramas of the canal with the fleet steaming unsuspectingly into the locks mined by the enemy.

"The French Doll"—Metro Capitol

AMERICAN—Miss Murray ignores no chance to show her terpsichorean prowess, her dainty figure and her remarkable collection of dazzling clothes.

EVENING JOURNAL—Miss Murray's qualifications are quite pat for the role. ... Miss Murray is as beautiful as ever—if not more so—and her gowns are as remarkable as usual.

EVENING WORLD—It's frothy, but rather pleasant froth.

MAIL—... "The French Doll" has been directed in a manner aimed to extract from the original several excellent farcical incidents. In its new form it should have more financial success than on the stage.

Mae Murray has a freakish manner of shimmying and twisting her features which is not funny but annoying.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—... a vehicle also well adapted to Miss Murray. ...

Miss Murray is a good drawing card and here her characteristic poutings, smiles and gestures are more in evidence than in any other of her recent pictures.

POST—She leaves nothing but a nerve wrecking and nerve racked impression of a wild shock of hair and extreme gowns in extremely bad taste.

TELEGRAM—"The French Doll" contains the elements of romance, adventure, gorgeous costumes and sumptuous settings and is undoubtedly suited to the particular bright talents of Miss Murray.

TIMES—Mae Murray's gyrations in "The French Doll," which is making people at the Capitol dizzy this week, ought to have been taken by the slow motion picture process, as she does not keep really still in a single scene. ... She is a fascinating little creature, with cubistic lips and very fair hair. ... The sets in this film are quite good, and what is seen of Miss Murray's costumes is alluring.

TRIBUNE—A fairly same play, "The French Doll," has been made into a mad, mad, movie with Mae Murray in the title role. ...

Miss Murray looks like a French doll herself, and ... she appeared on the screen in some of the most fascinating garments it ever has been our good fortune to behold.

WORLD—Probably the most vital intelligence regarding the picture is the fact that Miss Murray displays a countless collection of French gowns. The feminine population will be deeply interested in this collection. It is various and, to the untutored eye wonderfully made.

"Salomy Jane"—F. P.-L. Rialto

AMERICAN—An abundance of action, with a strong love story amid picturesque settings, makes "Salomy Jane" an altogether entertaining photoplay of the traditional Western type.

EVENING WORLD—It is a pure feud drama of the first water, and if your taste runs in that direction you'll enjoy it. We did, in spots, and we're sometimes hard to please.

MAIL—... the director ... did not succeed in making Harte's simple and appealing story of the days of '49 in California anything more than an ordinary western movie.

The real drama in the story was overlooked entirely and trampled upon by the constant riding in the virgilantes.

SUN—... it contains plenty of excitement, shooting, color and atmosphere, and say that the photo version is thoroughly enjoyable.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—It's just another one of those "California in the reckless, lawless, romantic days of '49" affairs.

POST—Jacqueline Logan plays in the role of Bret Harte's heroine, and she is very good in the stellar part. But the film is not as good, and although the cast is 100 per cent, the picture becomes unconvincing and uninteresting. This is a surprising occurrence in a George Melford production.

TRIBUNE—The cast is very good, ... The direction is by George Melford, too, but in spite of all these advantages "Salomy Jane" reaches just "ordinary" in its high moments and shrimps to "boreome" in its low moments as far as we are concerned.

TELEGRAM—... has an unusually interesting all film program with George Melford's production, "Salomy Jane." ...

"Bill"—Release Undetermined Rialto

AMERICAN—More important than the feature picture is "Bill." This photoplay is a straight character study from Anatole France's "Cranquebille." There is no plot to it, no melodramatic scenes, no love theme, yet it should have a permanent effect on photo-drama here because it is a work of art in which new possibilities in picture-making are revealed.

EVENING JOURNAL—The story itself is hardly more than an anecdote, but the important thing is the magnificent portrayal of an old Parish peddler by Maurice de Feraudy of the Comedie Francaise. ...

Mr. de Feraudy's performance is without a flaw. The picture shows several examples of ingenious trick photography devised to disclose the distorted imagination of the scared peddler when he is taken to court.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—From France by Hugo Riesenfeld reflects keen observations of life. There is a whole philosophy back of it. ... The relation of the simple narrative conveys little idea of the charm of the film for which we acknowledge a debt of thanks to Mr. Riesenfeld.

POST—... a delightful short film. ... It is cleverly done and well worth seeing.

SUN—... one of the oddest films we have seen ... the title part is humorously rendered. ...

TELEGRAM—"Bill" brings to the American stage one of the most noted actors of the French stage in a rare character study. ... This little film is likely to win new admirers of the movies, for it proves that motion picture making can be a really great art.

TIMES—This is a beautiful, simple production, with an inspiring actor in the title role.

TRIBUNE—The nominal feature of the program at the Rialto is "Salomy Jane," with Jacqueline Logan, but we liked "Cranquebille" much better. This is a story called "Bill" in English. ...

Made A Hit With The Kiddies

Chicago—The management of Orchestra Hall had 100 boosters for the showing of "Safety Last" when they invited 100 kiddies to see the picture. A tie-up was arranged through Sally Brown of the Tribune staff who featured the invitation in her column.

This stunt can be used effectively in any large city inasmuch as many big newspapers conduct a Sally Joy Brown column for the kiddies.

Clown Contest for Clown Picture

Toronto, Ont.—N. I. Miller and Robert Knevels of Pantages, and Clare Appel, First National exploiteer played up the circus angle for an engagement of "Circus Days" at that house.

Two weeks prior to the opening, an announcement was made, via cards and the newspapers, that cash awards and complimentary tickets would be given children dressed in the best clown costumes. Parks and public halls were used as meeting places. At each meeting a circus wagon with a band, dressed in clown costumes, appeared. During the judging, novelty "Circus Days" buttons and throwaways were given out, then following the band wagon came another ballyhoo with 24 sheets tacked on each side. After a short stop the wagons proceeded to the next meeting place, followed by hundreds of shouting kiddies.

business. The A. B. C. did succeed in landing several pictures, about five all told among which were included "Tess of the Storm Country," "Suzanna," "The Ninety and Nine" and "Modern Marriage." When "Tess" was played, large-sized advertisements appeared in the New York dailies advising the public where the picture might be seen.

It was stated yesterday by a well-known exhibitor who was one of the leading figures in the A. B. C. movement that distributors in general are already beginning to feel the effects of the disbandment of the A. B. C. and the elimination of the competition it offered.

"When the A. B. C. was active," he declared, "distributors secured more money than ever before for their product because the circuits found a competitive offer facing them, whereas before the formation of the A. B. C. they held the field undisputed. Without mentioning any names, I tell you that one circuit is offering $29,000 for a picture—a very good picture—that would have brought the distributor anywhere from $50,000 to $65,000 in the days when the A. B. C. was active.

"Fox paid $91,000 for 'Knighthood.' Why? Because the A. B. C. went as high as $75,000 on behalf of its members and Fox went the limit to beat out the A. B. C. The distributors are now facing the situation of getting less money for their pictures locally because the one strong competitive factor in the Greater New York exhibiting field has been allowed to die."

Mexican Ban Lifted

More Trouble Now Over Objectionable Scenes in American Productions

Difficulties existing between Mexican Government and First National have been brought to an end. The Mexican Government has withdrawn its strong protests with American officials over the manner in which its nationals were usually depicted on the screen.

Previous Players and Metro were the first companies to fall under the ban of the Government there. Later, the same thing occurred with First National over certain scenes in the "The Girl of the Gold Coast." Edwin Carewe, the director of the picture immediately withdrew from work with the Mexican Government and as a result, all restrictions were removed.

An old complaint was again renewed when "The Bad Man" went into production. Further meetings were held with the result that the entire situation was clarified and aicable understanding reached.

What A Week!

And what pictures! The big ones promised proved out. They were big. Very big. Taken collectively probably the largest number of very big, very fine productions ever released within a week—or longer—in the entire history of the business.

They naturally divide into two classes—the very fine pictures as against the definite box office successes. And there is a difference. A very big difference. Several shown, undeniably magnificent, may have difficulty in making the million dollar grade—and that's all the producers talk about as to earnings—at the box office. Yet it is a bet that every one of the week's releases—that is the big ones—must get that million—or more—or somebody is going to be hurt.

MILLION DOLLAR PICTURES AND THE BOX OFFICE

It's easy enough to talk of million dollar pictures. But it's tough going to get it in. Ask any distributor. And here—as well as any other time—you might as well accept this: many pictures scheduled to get that million won't make the grade. No matter how fine; how big. True they cost enough to demand that return (some won't make a penny profit when that million arrives). But to get it is a question. Most of it has to come from the big first runs—that is at the start, anyway.

Every problem involving a sale automatically returns to the first fundamental of business: supply and demand. If the demand exists the supply can be absorbed profitably. If there is overproduction, or lack of demand—trouble.

Schenck Switches

Norma's "Ashes of Vengeance" to Play Rivoli and Rialto Rather Than The Strand

One of the surprises of the season: the Norma Talmadge production "Ashes of Vengeance," the most stupendous picture ever made by Joe Schenck, will not play the Strand, on Broadway, heretofore the home of all Talmadge releases. Instead the picture will be presented in about three weeks at the Rivoli, to be followed by another week at the Rialto.

At the Strand Friday no one cared to comment on the move; nor would Felix Feist, representative for the Schenck Productions discuss the matter. At the office of Dr. Riesenfeld at the Rialto it was admitted that the picture would play the houses, but nothing else was said.

Picture folk, however, when asked about the switch, seemed much interested. One distributor was of the belief that this was the first serious indication of what would result from the "open market" policy of selling First National pictures.

Sees Theater Boom

"The big outstanding feature I saw in England," he reports, "was the tendency to build new picture palaces. The new Tivoli, now under the auspices of Marcus Loew, one of the finest and most advantageously located in the Kingdom, opens this week as the house which will give premier showings to the Metro output.

"With Robert Lieber, president of First National and Ralph Pugh, I had the pleasure of attending the opening of the new Davis house at Sheppard's Bush. It is a magnificent theater—another proof of the fact that England is awake to the necessity of bigger and better theaters.

"I was particularly impressed at this and other theaters with the enthusiasm and spontaneity of British audiences. They are much more responsive than American audiences. The Davis theater fairly rocked with laughter during the antics of Buster Keaton in one of his characteristic comedies.

"Through the courtesy of Colonel Bromhead and Reginald Bromhead, I visited the new Gaumont laboratories in London, where are installed the latest models of the Lawley automatic developer. I was much impressed with the cleanliness and mechanical arrangements of this plant. I also renewed various other laboratory and exchange acquaintances. Everywhere I was received with true British courtesy.

"The producers of England are awake, alive and going strong. They are making worthy plans for the production of pictures of the highest calibre. It is my opinion that 1924 will see on the American market English-made pictures, which will compare very favorably with the best American productions.

"In Paris I enjoyed my annual visit with Raymond Gaumont. The Gaumont laboratory in Paris, is one of the best in the world—kept up to the minute through the scientific research and inventive genius of M. Gaumont, Sr., whose color discoveries and mechanical achievements are matters of film history.

"Among the big American film executives I noticed as being very much on the job, were Marcus Loew and Hiram Abrams. In London Richard MacFarland, personal representative of Douglas Fairbanks, were justifiably enthusiastic about the reception of 'Robin Hood' in the United Kingdom. Major King, of the United Artists London office, is besieged with inquiries from exhibitors who want to know how soon they will get the new Fairbanks and Pickford productions.

"The film trade of the United Kingdom displayed genuine regret at the departure of E. J. Smith who resigned the European company to become general manager for Universal in America. Mr. Smith made a great record in England and all his British friends predict he will ring the bell even louder over here. Beverly Griffith who succeeds Smith is a man of great experience and ability and has a keen understanding of European conditions. He is already a long way on the road to popularity and success.

"I found the production of Norma and Constance Talmadge in high favor in England. These two artists are going strong all over Europe.

"The query heard everywhere is 'When will Charlie Chaplin give us his new picture?' On this earth Charlie's popularity is as universal as the sun's rays.

"I saw a private preview of 'Woman to Woman,' the new British-made picture starring Betty Compson. In my opinion she does in this picture some of the best work of her career.

"Also saw a trade showing of 'Fires of Fate,' made in Egypt by Tom Terriss for Gaumont. This picture is particularly interesting because of the historic and scenic values of the Egyptian setting."

"Strangers of the Night"

Producer: Louis B. Mayer
Distributor: Metro

As a Whole....CHARMING, DELIGHTFUL PICTURIZATION OF "CAPTAIN APPLEJACK," A VERY SUCCESSFUL PLAY. SURE FIRE ENTERTAINMENT VALUE.

Players....Enid Bennett, who will be remembered from her charming performance in "Robin Hood." Delightful and naive. Matt Moore well selected for the type, handles his work very well. Barbara La Marr excellent as usual. Others, Robert McKim and Tom Rickards.

This is one of the type of pictures more or less based upon a dream, but the dream comes in so easily and so logically that you forget it, and there is sufficiently thrilling drama thereafter to offset the dream stuff anyway. It shows how a weakling developed into a real man through the influence of a dream, during which he imagines he is a pirate chief. At the end of course, there is the inevitable clinch with hero and heroine having discovered the treasure left by the pirate ancestors of the Applejacks.

Box Office Angle....This is the sort of picture that should prove tremendously entertaining to practically all of your folks. It contains comedy, thrills, drama and the ingredients that all showmen have long since emphasized as "a box office." It starts slowly but once it begins to hit on high, it never lets up, and the last two reels have a slam, bang, get to it effect that is sure to send your audience out feeling mighty good.

There is a fine thrill when the villains and the heroine crawl along the edge over the windows of an old residence seeking possession of the map which contains instructions where to find the treasure. It is immensely absorbing.

Exploitation....You have everything in the world to talk about. First you have the name of Fred Niblo, one of the greatest directors of the day, whose recent productions, notably "Blood and Sand" and "The Three Musketeers," have made him hosts of fan friends. Then you have Barbara La Marr and you do not need any more said about her because you should know whether or not she is a real bet.

During the pirate sequence, Applejack cuts cards with the villain and his deck contains nothing but aces. You should be able to use this angle in your exploitation.

Direction by.....Fred Niblo; has handled this exceptionally well, although the story starts slowly. Fine production values as well.

Author.....Walter Hackett
Scenario.....Bess Meredith, from an adaptation by C. Gardner Sullivan.

Cameraman.....Alvin Wyckoff
Photography.....Superb
Locale.....Old English home and deck of pirate ship

Length.....8,059 feet

Lillian Gish in "The White Sister"

Producer: Inspiration Pictures
Distributor: Not yet determined

As a Whole....ANOTHER MAGNIFICENT PRODUCTION: WHETHER A GREAT PICTURE AT THE BOX OFFICE TO BE DETERMINED—TRAGIC END MAY ALSO HAVE ITS EFFECT.

Players....What a magnificent performance Lillian Gish gives! Sincerity and repression dominate. Ronald Colman, a new leading man, will be in demand after this. Long cast of excellent players includes J. Barney Sherry and Gail Kane.

Type of Story....Tragic, inasmuch as all important characters, excepting heroine, die at finish. Beautiful romance of young girl taking the veil when she believes her fiancée dead, only to find him alive when she cannot marry him because of her vows to the church. In the end he dies during an eruption of Vesuvius, while warning the people of their danger.

Box Office Angle.....Gorgeously mounted; magnificent in construction; a tremendous lot of money spent—one sees it—ranking this as one of the greatest pictures ever made, with Miss Gish giving an outstandingly notable performance, still you had better see this before you book it.

The chief reason that you must see it is that it contains material which may provoke much discussion relative to the Catholic church; the taking of the vow and the resultant problem faced by the lovers. There are several titles and sequences, which, if not removed, will certainly provoke much discussion on this point.

Exploitation.....Vast material is at your hand to put this one over. First, you have the name of the star who has not appeared since "Orphans of the Storm," and who has a big fan clientele. Tell them she does the finest work of her long and meritorious career. Then you have the name of Henry King, and remind them he made "Tol'able David" and other successes.

Get a trailer showing the eruption of Vesuvius; the death of the older sister by being dashed from a carriage when the horses bolt; the fox hunt—they are all fine sequences and should easily bring them back.

Direction by..Henry King; has done a magnificent piece of work. Places him among the very leaders.

Author.....F. Marion Crawford
Scenario by...George V. Hobart and others

Cameraman.....Roy Overbaugh
Photography....Some interior shots cloudy. Otherwise good.

Locale.....Italian exteriors and interiors. Both magnificent—and real.

Length.....About 13,000 feet; will be cut for general distribution.

Mary Pickford in "Rosita"

Ernst Lubitsch Production
Distributed by United Artists

As a Whole...ONE OF THE MOST DELIGHTFUL CHARMING PRODUCTIONS MARY HAS EVER MADE. STANDS ON A PAR WITH THE BEST OF THE SEASON'S RELEASES.

Players....The one and only Mary returns to her own. Regardless of how she may have slipped in more recent pictures she is back again more wonderful than ever. Holbrook Blinn splendid as the King and Irene Rich almost as good as the Queen. George Walsh occasionally overacts. Mme. Mathilde Comon as Mary's mother a delight.

Type of Story.....Based on famous Don Caesar DeBazan's story, altered to fit Mary and how it fits! Just a wonderful love story with a Spanish background. That's all you need to know.

Mary allows her company full scope. There is considerable footage before she makes her first appearance, and then in a truly dramatic form.

All the way through there are delightful bits; one of the best where Mary's parents, living decently for the first time in their existence, use the magnificent palace just as they did their hovel; with wash lines cluttered with drying clothes, which annoy the supercilious palace flunkies.

Box Office Angle....If you don't get back of this one, one thousand per cent and put it over with the biggest bang of the season, go out of business. This one is in. Those of Mary's admirers who have turned cold will come back and leave your house again booming Mary and boosting you for showing the picture. All of Mary's hokum is used to the fullest extent and it's sure-fire. Every trick of her long knowledge of the camera and the screen is used to the utmost advantage and what a picture it is!

Exploitation..Stick to Mary. Twenty-four sheet her to the limit. Talk of the gorgeous, magnificent production, because it is all of that and more. Holbrook Blinn unfortunately is not particularly well-known to picture fans, but he will be after this. You can also use the name of Irene Rich as well as George Walsh.

By all means get the score especially prepared for this.

You can also play up the name of Ernst Lubitsch, whose excellent work in "Deception" and "Passion" will be remembered.

Direction by....Ernst Lubitsch. It will pay every American director to go and see his work in this.

Author.....Norbert Falk
Scenario by.....Edward Knoblock
Cameraman.....Charles Rosher

Photography.....Rosher at his best and that's going the limit.

Locale.....Spain; gorgeous sets
Length.....8,800 feet

British Editors on Kent Percentage Plan

SIDNEY R. KENT'S recent article on percentage, which appeared in THE FILM DAILY, has attracted the attention of the editors of important British trade publications. The article appeared in full in a recent issue of "The Film Renter" and has been the basis of a number of editorials in other papers published in London.

This is how the British trade feels toward percentage as reflected through the editorial comment of its leading journals:

Equitable Percentage

The fairest way of showing a film on a percentage basis is for the exhibitor to make the costs of running his theater a first charge against the production, then guaranteeing the renter a certain sum, and splitting the proceeds after that. Against this there can be no real objection—it means both sides take a chance, but the renter is guaranteed a certain amount, and the exhibitor knows that after he has played a film he will not see the renter walk away with a large sum of money while he is out of pocket on the transaction.

In America, * * * the distribution manager of Famous Players has some very sensible things to say upon this matter. Remember, he has been selling pictures to exhibitors for years, so he knows what he is talking about. Percentage is bound to come, that much is certain, and if the exhibitor is wise he will examine it for himself, and above all he will see that he gets the right terms before he allows a picture to be played in his theater on sharing terms. Greediness on the part of renter or exhibitor will wreck any way of doing business, but if there is the desire of both sides to give each other a fair and square deal then the right result will be attained.

Ernest W. Fredman, The Film Renter.

Case Against Percentage?

Listen, again, to some of Sidney R. Kent's remarks. Kent is the Famous Players director of distribution, and he is so frank as to be staggering—a Daniel come to judgment. Many of his remarks read like a confession, and one almost feels, as a result of the recent exposures, that some of the American organizations are preparing to say mea culpa.

Kent goes on: "This business is still suffering today from 'too little money for good pictures and too much for bad.' Today I can go out and spend $600,000 in making a picture. I put out a clever campaign, oil my tongue and go to bat. Long before that picture is released I can get in much more than its cost in contracts. That same production put out on its merits wouldn't bring back $200,000 on percentage."

That is the answer to the case against percentage. It has defects, but it prevents over-selling to the exhibitor and to the public. It prevents bad pictures being bolstered up by exploitation and fake "key" runs and unloaded on the exhibitor, who makes heavy losses.

More important still, it is the solution of the higher rentals threat—a threat which means fewer and poorer theaters and much more surely than it means bigger and better pictures.

Frank Tilley, Kine Weekly.

Golden Eggs

A prominent exhibitor says that rentals have already exceeded the exhibitors' capacity to pay them, and that percentage is the only alternative for theaters.

But percentage must be equitable. The renter must take into account the prestige of the house as an asset to him. The theater in which the premiere run is given has a direct influence on subsequent bookings. The renter must also realize that it is the exhibitor who always takes the bigger risk.

Every negotiation for percentage business must be conducted in a spirit of mutual interest; it is really a partnership deal. In the majority of cases it is the renter who stands to benefit. "Give and take" must be the spirit of the compromise for "the goose that lays the golden egg may very easily be killed."

Although each booking is a matter of competitive bargaining, the disposition of certain exhibitors have shown to outdo one another, even at the risk of serious loss, may prove profitable to some particular renter at the moment, but may establish a standard of false values that in the end spells chaos and ruin. When they encourage such competition beyond a reasonable point, renters are undermining the future of the industry in general and their own businesses in particular.

Sam Harris, The Cinema.

London Opening

There was never a time in the history of this industry when the timid theaters were invaded by motion pictures as will be the case in the next week or two. The London Pavilion has been taken by Famous-Lasky for a period of three months, during which time the show "The Covered Wagon" and such other big productions as may be required. The Empire is secured by Goldwyn's, who are running "Little Old New York." The London has been secured by Fox for the season of "If Winter Comes." The London shows "Where the Pavement Ends" beginning Sept. 7. Exhibitors have secured the West End to show "Merry-Go-Round," three or four other companies are impatiently waiting for West End theaters to show their productions. This is but the advance guard of a number of big pictures which will be on top of us before we can get round. This season looks as if it will be the biggest and busiest in the film industry.—Cinema.

London—"If Winter Comes" opens at the Palace Monday. "Chu Chin Chow," at the Arch, Sept. 17.

"The White Sister" Release Undetermined 44th St. Theater

DAILY NEWS—The entire production is marvelous for its splendor of photography—especially the Vesuvius eruption scenes, and heartrending for its exquisiteness and pathos of portrayal. As for Miss Gish, she is ethereal in her loveliness and an actress of remarkable ability. * * * This is a picture that no one can afford to miss.

EVENING JOURNAL—Perhaps the best way in which to describe this adaptation of F. Marion Crawford's novel is to call it one of the very best productions ever made. It stirred this observer as few others have done and made him marvel that he could be so deeply affected by shadows shifting on a screen.

Lillian Gish and Ronald Colman in the principal roles act superbly.

EVENING WORLD—Broadway, presented lately with several unusually superior pictures, was given another fine one last night. * * * provides an excellent vehicle for the wistful beauty of the star and contains much genuinely moving and thrilling drama.

"The White Sister," is a big picture and a fine picture and deserves to rank with the best the movies have yet produced. * * *

Miss Gish did fine work in all but the first part of the picture. * * *

Ronald Colman * * * a good actor. More should be heard of him.

HERALD—For approximately nine reels "The White Sister" maintains an amazingly high quality. It is so superbly played by Lillian Gish and by Ronald Colman, and so perfectly directed by Henry King that one is entitled to assume that here is an unquestionable candidate for the Hall of Film Fame. * * *

Then, just as every one has feared, Vesuvius starts to erupt, and "The White Sister" collapses dismally. It becomes just another movie, and the vast promise of its earlier reels is dissipated. * * *

Miss Gish is, as always, exquisite. Under the direction of Henry King she shows the same remarkable qualities of expressiveness and emotional repression that she has revealed in various Griffith pictures.

MAIL—* * * There is no denying that she is an exceptional emotional actress.

She is beautiful. She does not resort to facial tricks nor does she pose. * * *

The only fault of this production is that which characterizes most of the pictures which are flooding New York theaters. There is much unnecessary detail. The story is altogether too long getting under way. * * * Ronald Colman * * * an ideal lover and his work is of a high caliber. His emotional acting is as good as that of the star.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—The romance and beauty is all intact, and for those who are romantically inclined this is going to be a most palatable entertainment. For those who choose their motion pictures with more sophistication, "The White Sister" will not appeal; it has too much of the "Camille" flavor. However, Lillian Gish may go a long way to placate this latter class, for her ethereal beauty and intense performance is not restricted to any one group, but is universal in its interest. * * * Of romance, beauty and pictorial charm there is plenty, but the story is slow-moving and rather tedious.

POST—Never has a simple tale of love and despair been told with greater beauty, sincerity or truth.

Every picture is a painting, * * * And, best of all, this production brings Lillian Gish to us again. * * * slowly and subtly is borne upon you that this is a finer and more mature actress. * * *

Henry King, the director, has achieved something of which the Inspiration Pictures, Inc., can say that it really lives up to its name.

SUN—"The White Sister" is not a movie; it is a work of art.

Henry King, working in the emotional and spiritual materials provided by Miss Lillian Gish and Ronald Colman, and by the curious paradox of dramatic art, aided by their special artistry, produced the genuine artistic triumph. * * * King * * * knitted this picture together into a complete and satisfying masterpiece of the screen.

TELEGRAM—The scenes in the old garden are beyond praise for their rare beauty and their notes of verity. Street scenes in Naples, superb sea views in the famous bay and glimpses of Vesuvius are all impressive in their reality. The picture has not been equalled for scenic beauty.

And the story is an absorbing one. * * * Lillian Gish as the White Sister, is all loveliness and appeal. She moves through the scenes with a pathetic charm that disarms criticism.

TIMES—The production itself is a notable one, an artistic effort on which the producers seem to have leaned backward to cling to the sterling worth of the picture. * * *

A remarkable and successful effort at characterization is made in several instances by the director and the players. The latter actually appear to live the parts they enact on the screen. * * *

This film starts out as one of the strongest love stories that has ever been filmed. But the death of Giovanni and the latter part of the story weaken what might have been a perfect love story of Italy. * * *

The players are excellent. Mr. Colman's Giovanni is splendid, and Gail Kane is especially effective in the unsympathetic role of the Marchesa.

TRIBUNE—An extremely dramatic story, artistically directed and beautifully acted. * * * Miss Gish does some of the best acting she ever has done. * * * One has come to expect perfection in a Lillian Gish performance. What did surprise us, however, was the acting of Ronald Colman as the hero, Giovanni Severi. * * * We liked the first part of the picture much better than the second half.

WORLD—* * * bears full evidence of the faithfulness of its atmosphere, and presents a series of scenes which for photographic excellence and beauty of landscape views possibly never has been surpassed in the cinema. It also presents a large, cumbersome, ponderous, heavy-footed movie, one which brings back Miss Gish in numerous moments of rare and finished pantomime, but also one in which Miss Gish appears almost from the beginning to the end as a sad faced, tearful, abused little being. * * *

"The White Sister" has been taken entirely too seriously by every one concerned with it.

"Her Reputation"—1st Nat'l Chicago Theater, Chicago

Newspaper opinions from out-of-town papers will only appear when the feature reviewed has its world's premiere in that city. New York newspaper opinions will also be published when the production reaches Broadway.

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Chicago—Consensus of newspaper opinions on "Her Reputation," at the Chicago Theater follows:

AMERICAN—The story is built up swiftly and, granted the groundwork, fairly convincingly. * * *

Of great importance is the fact that in this film May McAvoy, gives her first feature role, proves her claim to the title of a star. She has beauty, grace and charm, along with a fine talent.

HERALD—Good old-fashioned melodrama, for a change. * * * Murder, flood, fire and automobile wreck give the visible thrills to those who get no kick out of mental anguish. * * * just escapes the class of so-so pictures by reason of fairly expert direction.

JOURNAL—A film event of the season, underscoring the judgment of fans and producer, is the featuring of May McAvoy. * * * something dramatic, somewhat ambitious, unsophisticated and reasonably entertaining.

POST—The events, altho melodramatic, are set forth convincingly and the fine acting, especially that of May McAvoy, gives the play an atmosphere of realism rare in such an exciting picture. * * *

May McAvoy proves herself a dramatic actress of the first class in this production.

TRIBUNE—Summing the picture up, Miss McAvoy and Mr. Hughes are most attractive. The supporting cast supports well. The story is awful. The sets and photography all right. Some of the shots of the newspaper local and press rooms are fine.

"Dulcy"—1st Nat'l

Loew's State, Los Angeles
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Los Angeles—Consensus of newspaper opinion on "Dulcy," at Loew's State follows:

EXAMINER—As the good intentioned, but forever fumbling Dulcy, the popular star keeps Loew's State theater audiences in a tumult of laughter throughout. She excels as a comedienne. * * * The entire spirit of the story * * * has been admirably kept by both the adapters. * * * Mr. Franklin has kept the action moving briskly yet smoothly.

EXPRESS—With the satire almost entirely extracted, the version * * * was merely a gay little tale, filled with numerous inexpressibly funny situations that kept the laughs going throughout its showing. It raced along gaily, without much aid from subtitles, strange to say. Subtlety, there was none.

HERALD—Constance Talmadge, better than ever, makes "Dulcy" a comedy hit * * * and her characterization of the loving, blundering Dulcy keeps the crowds in a tumult of laughter.

Miss Talmadge is at the height of her career as Dulcy, and her playing of this part should increase by a substantial number the hundreds of thousands of her admirers.

RECORD—"Dulcy" is funny * * * brightly amusing farce.

Constance Talmadge becomes the dumb Dulcy with such abandon that one squirms as one laughs at the naturalness of it.

TIMES—"Dulcy" was a perfectly delightful comedy on the stage. On the screen it is delightful, but not perfectly. But it is in such good hands, down at Loew's, what with Constance Talmadge playing Dulcy, Sidney Franklin directing her, Anita Loos writing the subtitles, that it cannot but be entertaining.

Harold Lloyd in
"Why Worry"

Producer: Hal Roach
Distributor: Pathe

As a Whole... LLOYD FOREGOES COMEDY THRILLS TO GET OVER LAUGHS IN BURLESQUE ON REVOLUTIONARY PLOT THAT OFFERS FIRST RATE COMEDY ENTERTAINMENT.

Star... Sure to please his following and all those seeking entertainment that aims to amuse them; Lloyd's role mostly a matter of rough and tumble but there's always a laugh in the star's maneuvers.

Cast... A South American giant lends a novelty touch to the picture and permits of a lot of unusual comedy business that is original and sure-fire. Jobyna Ralston, Lloyd's new leading lady.

Type of Story... While "Why Worry" may not be as continuously humorous or exciting as "Safety Last," it is still an AI comedy entertainment and can be counted on to satisfy the star's many admirers and all those who enjoy a good laugh. Sam Taylor, the author of "Why Worry," has taken the very popular South American revolution plot and handled it in more or less of a burlesque fashion.

Box Office Angle... Easy to judge this one. You know best what Lloyd and his pictures can do for you. Act accordingly. They'll be satisfied with "Why Worry" even though they may not consider it as good a laugh maker as "Safety Last." That depends, however, largely upon whether they like thrills mixed with the laughs. "Why Worry" hasn't any of the "hair-raisers" of "Safety Last."

Exploitation... Where the star brings them in it should only be necessary to announce that you are showing his latest picture, "Why Worry."

But be sure and make your announcements well in advance and get them acquainted with the title. Just as a trailer showing Lloyd balancing on a plank off the top of a skyscraper, attracted their attention for "Safety Last," so will a trailer of Lloyd climbing up the giant's chest in an effort to extract a tooth, interest them in this one.

A good street stunt would be to have a man impersonating Lloyd going about with a small bag, similar to a doctor's case, and distributing small boxes of candy pills, with a label reading: "Here is Harold Lloyd's prescription as a remedy for the blues. 'Why Worry' when you can enjoy a good laugh? Come to the blank theater and see Harold Lloyd's latest picture."

If you can secure the services of a giant to accompany the impersonator of Lloyd, you'll have still a better stunt.

Direction by... Fred Newmeyer and Sam Taylor; a little slow in getting to the laughs but it picks up nicely and holds the pace to the finish.

Author... Sam Taylor
Scenario... Sam Taylor

Cameraman... Walter Lundin

Photography... Good

Locale... A South American republic

Length... 6,000 feet

Glenn Hunter in
"Puritan Passions"

Producer: The Film Guild
Distributor: W. W. Hodkinson Corp.

As a Whole... ABSORBING, SOMEWHAT SOMBER PRODUCTION SPLENDIDLY MOUNTED WITH PARTICULAR APPEAL TO MORE INTELLIGENT AUDIENCES.

Players... Osgood Perkins in a characterization that is easily the outstanding feature. Glenn Hunter interesting in rather weak role. Mary Astor charming, beautiful. Others unimportant.

Type of Story... One of the most unusual ever screened. Adapted from Percy Mackaye's play, "The Scarecrow." Deals with Puritanism and witchcraft of the days of old Salem. Offers backgrounds and atmosphere, the very unusualness of which may get it by in a real way.

The story is full of dramatic values; the vengeance of a woman upon the man who betrayed her. How this is worked out through the connivance of "Old Nick"—the devil—contains twists materially different from that which motion picture audiences are accustomed to see, ending in a way which may prove a surprise to some fans.

Box Office Angle... This is a tricky one. You had better see it. You don't want to pass this one up until you do because for the right kind of audience this may be a tremendous success. Certainly for first-run material it offers one of the most unusual of the many big important pictures of the season. A special musical score has been prepared which should help immensely. Get it if you run the picture. The many twists and trick photography with the witchcraft background should prove interesting in these days of costume pictures and big sets.

Exploitation... If you do pick this one get back of it. Don't hesitate to spend money because it should bring them back without fail. There is an unusualness in the old Salem witchcraft atmosphere that is conspicuous in itself and the transformation of the scarecrow into a London gallant of the period is one of the most interesting things ever recorded by the camera. Dwell on the unusual features. Of course you can't forget the appearance of Hunter and beautiful Mary Astor. No one else is known well enough to bother about. Your audience may never have heard of Mackaye or his play but if they have they will surely want to see the film.

Direction by... Frank Tuttle. Deserves unusual commendation for the skillful manner in which he has presented this difficult production.

Author... Percy Mackaye

Scenario by... Adapted from the play "The Scarecrow" by Ashmore Creelman and Frank Tuttle.

Cameraman... Fred Waller

Photography... Splendid

Locale... Old New England with very interesting interiors.

Length... About 6,600 feet

George Melford Prod.
"Salomy Jane"

Paramount
As a Whole... ANOTHER FEUDAL DRAMA; AS GOOD AS THEY COME BUT THE PLOT IS BEING OVERWORKED; WILL PLEASE IF THEY DON'T MIND A FAMILIAR THEME.

Cast... All very appropriate and good types for mountaineer roles; Maurice Flynn and Jacqueline Logan pleasing hero and heroine; others George Fawcett, William Davidson, Charles Ogle, William Quirk, Raymond Nye, Louise Dresser, Tom Carrigan, Clarence Burton.

Type of Story... Conventional because of its frequent repetition; offers good action, but there are slow bits that prevent a well sustained interest; the plot is essentially a series of killings with a hunt for the killer following, a threatened hanging, a last minute rescue and the same thing over again. The love story woven in is interesting and Flynn and Jacqueline Logan make a pleasing hero-heroine team.

Mountaineer's daughter saves life of stranger with whom she falls in love and whose name is cleared eventually, the guilty ones exposed and the lovers free to marry.

Box Office Angle... An average attraction. A good production. A first rate cast and pretty Jacqueline Logan. These are the summary notes on "Salomy Jane." It will satisfy an even majority and if they don't mind the fairly trite plot, you can get it over all right.

Exploitation... Maybe your folks will recall the stage play so you might give the title a good deal of prominence. Also give the names of the players good display in your announcements. You have a first rate cast and Jacqueline Logan, George Fawcett and Maurice Flynn to start it off.

Arrange a tie-up with bookstores. They all carry copies of Bret Harte's novels of early California days. "Salomy Jane" is based on "Salomy Jane's Kiss." A suggested street stunt is to get an old prairie schooner or covered wagon of the '49 type, and have a young woman drive it through the streets. Place this sign on either side: "We're bound for California to see 'Salomy Jane.'"

Teaser advertising could consist of a reward for the arrest of a stranger who shot and killed a man at Red Dog, Cal. Follow it up with the announcement that the guilty party can be found at the blank theater in "Salomy Jane."

Use your mailing list and be sure to let the women know there's a pleasing romance in the Bret Harte story. For the men folks talk about the fights and gun-play.

Direction by... George Melford; has injected fine atmosphere of early days of the west and given a good production generally.

Author... Bret Harte

Scenario by... Waldemar Young

Cameraman... Bert Glennon

Photography... Very good

Locale... California in '49

Length... 6,270 feet

"If Winter Comes"

Fox Film

As a Whole... EXCELLENT PRESENTATION OF EXCEEDINGLY WELL-KNOWN NOVEL.

Players... Percy Marmont undeniably does the best work of his career; a thoroughly life-like Mark Sabre. Gladys Leslie almost steals the picture as Effie. Ann Forrest unattractive as Nona. Cast generally excellent.

Type of Story... Thousands of people have read "If Winter Comes." This attraction was promised for last season, but something held it up. It shows unmistakable signs of great care. The producer has practically photographed the book and except that there are at least twice as many titles as are necessary, it is far superior to the play and those who read the book and enjoyed it are sure to like it. The story should be well known to you. It is a remarkable delineation of a magnificent character who braved conventions and suffered cruelly as a result.

The production shows that many of the scenes were made in England and some in London, but while many are beautiful, there are a few quite unnecessary, such as the facade of the Law Courts and a hospital in London.

Box Office Angle... Doubtless there are thousands in your community who will be anxious to see "If Winter Comes." They have either read the book or have heard of it. Those who enjoyed the novel will undoubtedly appreciate the sincere effort of the producer to make this one of the outstanding productions of the year and the fact that many of the scenes were shot in England may help to aid in the general value.

Percy Marmont has appeared in a number of pictures, but never so well as in this. You need no other names to use excepting perhaps Ann Forrest, who should be well known.

You can play up Harry Millarde's name as the director of "Over the Hill"—they may remember it.

Exploitation... Get back of this with everything you have and stick to the title. Don't bother about anything else because if your crowd doesn't know the title you haven't a Chinaman's chance to get them in and make them like it. Tie-ups with your local book shops should be easy.

You might use a few lines from the poem from which the picture derives its title, using it effectively on a postal card to your mailing list.

Direction by... Harry Millarde. At times too studious in application to the book but generally excellent. Far too many titles.

Author... A. S. M. Hutchinson

Cameraman... Joseph Ruttenberg

"The Silent Command"

Fox

As a Whole.... UNDOUBTEDLY HOLDS VERY BIG APPEAL FOR VAST MAJORITY OF PICTURE PATRONS; GREAT PATRIOTIC ATMOSPHERE AND GENERAL AUDIENCE APPEAL SHOULD MAKE IT ATTRACTIVE BOX OFFICE NUMBER.

Players.... Edmund Lowe gives very satisfying performance as the hero of the story; Bela Lugosi a new screen villain and a convincing one; others in a well balanced and capable cast are Carl Harbaugh, Martin Faust, Byron Douglas, Rogers Keene, Alma Tell and Martha Mansfield.

Type of Story.... Naval melodrama that serves a double purpose: entertainment for picture patrons and a definite and valuable bit of propaganda for the U. S. Navy. There is a strong patriotic flavoring that is unmistakable and sure-fire. It never fails to register real audience appeal, and added to this there is a good melodramatic plot, in which the interest has been well sustained.

Theme deals with heroism and sacrifice of naval officer who suffers court martial and the threatened loss of his wife's love in performance of his duty but with the crowning glory of reinstatement and honor upon his successful completion of it.

Box Office Angle.... Should do a profitable business. "The Silent Command" is fine entertainment from the box office standpoint. It has all the elements of audience appeal necessary to make it a satisfying number.

Exploitation.... Ought to be a very easy matter. You can carry out your campaign on this one along strictly naval lines. Secure the co-operation of your local recruiting station and very likely you will be able to get a detachment of sailors from the nearest station if you care to have a street parade or anything on that order.

Be sure to let them know well in advance all you can about the picture. Say that it deals with allegiance of a naval officer who even went through a public court martial for the purpose of trapping a band of foreign invaders who were plotting to blow up the Panama Canal. Show them trailers of the more thrilling moments. In case you are located in a community where it is impossible to receive the cooperation of the Navy, have a number of men in sailor uniforms preceded by a band going about the streets advertising the showing.

Direction by.... J. Gordon Edwards; has handled this one very well and used cast satisfactory. Naval detail and ceremonies good. Interest very well sustained.

Author ..... Rufus King
 Scenario ..... Not credited
 Cameramen... Geo. Lane and Dennie Miggins
 Photography ..... Very good
 Locale... Panama Canal and vicinity; Washington, D. C.

"His Last Race"

Phil Goldstone—State Rights

As a Whole..... A POPULAR VARIETY OF ENTERTAINING ELEMENTS, CONVENTIONAL BUT NICELY PUT TOGETHER MAKING FOR GOOD ACTION; A FIRST RATE CAST.

Players.... "Snowy" Baker the source of most of the action and thrills; they are of a familiar order but Baker makes them exciting and appears to take some chances; Robert McKim and Noah Beery a convincing villain team; Gladys Brockwell a suitable heroine; others William Scott, Harry Depp, Pauline Starke and Tully Marshall

Type of Story... Melodrama that includes the usual situations affording intrigue, action, thrills, a touch of heart interest, a horse race, etc. The ingredients are nicely blended together, however, and the majority of folks will probably consider it fair entertainment.

Disappointed in love, hero goes West where he establishes health farm for babies, foils villain who would ruin him and is eventually reunited with the girl he loves.

Box Office Angle... A suitable attraction for the average audience. Picture is not big nor out of the ordinary either in production or story, but it will please enough of your patrons to warrant a showing.

Exploitation... You can always satisfy a certain class of patronage as long as you give them a picture that has action. "His Last Race" has a good quantity of it, and even though they have probably seen the same stunts worked out many times before and with much the same results, they won't be annoyed with the repetition. Baker offers plenty of excitement in his accomplishment of the thrills and the director hasn't failed to inject a proportionate suspense.

This is the type of picture that can best be advertised by a trailer. Show them Baker's leap off a cliff and his jump from an aeroplane into a lake, also the spectacular fight in the barn.

To exploit the picture through a street stunt, have a sleek looking horse and jockey going about town announcing: "See Mankiller, the wonder horse, win 'His Last Race' at the blank theater."

You have many popular players whose names can be mentioned prominently, such as Baker, Robert McKim, Gladys Brockwell, Noah Beery and Tully Marshall.

Direction by.... Reeves Eason and Howard Mitchell; made a pretty good picture out of conventional plot, sustained interest well and put over the suspense.

"A Chapter in Her Life"

Producer: Lois Weber

Distributor: Universal-Jewel

As a Whole..... HEART INTEREST STORY WITH A LITTLE GIRL FOR ITS HEROINE; IS A PLEASING PICTURE ALTHOUGH THE ACTIONS OF THE CHILD ARE VERY IMPROBABLE.

Players.... Jane Mercer a clever and capable little actress even though the things she has to do make a little old woman of her; it is possible but barely probable that a child of her age would have the philosophy of life that she has. Claude Gillingwater, as her grandfather, Eva Thatcher, as his housekeeper, and one or two other members of his household are all won over to the child through her remarkable faith in mankind.

Type of Story.... A typical "and a little child shall lead them" theme. The child comes into the home of her grandparent merely because he thinks it will spite the widow his son married and who herself was never welcome in his home. There is logic and a quantity of heart interest in the development and will likely appeal to many for this reason. It is another "faith" theme although slightly different inasmuch as it is restricted to soul soothing and not extended to bodily ills, except, perhaps in one instance where the child insists that she will get well without a doctor or medicine.

Box Office Angle.... There are those to whom this story will prove thoroughly appealing. They'll probably sympathize with the young heroine and be entirely convinced by her ability to convert those around her from grouches to lovable people. On the other hand there will be those who won't see it that way at all. They'll declare it absurd for a child to talk the way the titles quote her and old fashioned for her to do the things she does. You have to have the right crowd for this one in order to get it over.

Exploitation.... You can make a special appeal to the women folks. They will be the ones who will take most kindly to this story of the little girl who made herself loved even where she wasn't wanted. They'll like the heart interest touches, sympathize with the child and hate the hard-hearted housekeeper.

If you care to play the picture up as a sort of "Pollyanna" theme, you might inaugurate a "Smile Day" with placards reading: "Don't be gloomy. It doesn't pay. You can make your own life and the lives of those about you happy if you'll follow the rule of the little heroine in Lois Weber's latest picture, 'A Chapter From Her Life.'"

Direction by.... Lois Weber; has brought out the human element of the theme very well and given story good production.

 Cameraman ..... Ben Kline

"Rouged Lips"

Metro

As a Whole.... A GOOD COMEDY ROMANCE THAT WILL PLEASE A MAJORITY; STORY NOT USUALLY STRONG BUT HAS SEVERAL GOOD TWISTS AND IS WELL SUITED TO STAR.

Star.... Has a vehicle that fits very well and the sort that admirers like to see her in.

Cast.... Tom Moore makes fine positive and others are satisfactory although not important.

Type of Story.... A rather slight picture and not especially new but it has been worked into thoroughly satisfying picture through good direction and with the star and Tom Moore helping to make it interesting. There are many good touches such as the introduction showing the heroine's Scotch-Irish parents. This is a bright bit and gets the offering off to an attractive start. The humorous touches are nicely distributed and the picture is not too long.

Chorus girl wins rich young man through her simplicity where a fortune of "gold diggers" fail.

Box Office Angle.... Will satisfy a majority. Where the star is a favorite you can make a special appeal about it although there is good entertainment in it for all—sufficient for you to give it fair consideration.

Exploitation.... The title readily suggests a story of theatrical life. Picture patrons all over like a picture with this sort of atmosphere. To them this is a story a little different from the usual and play it up with catchlines such as: "Is it always a gold digger that 'lands' the rich girl? Not all the time. Watch 'Rouged Lips' and learn how Viola Dana does it with simplicity."

For a teaser stunt you might put up white placards with the impression of a girl's lips. Run a line: "What is the kiss that stays? Watch space for the answer." Follow with "It isn't 'Rouged Lips' that pays."

A drug store tie-up might consist of a display of different rouges with a reader: "What sort of rouge do you use? Viola Dana can furnish you with a tip on a successful routine in her latest picture at the blank theater, 'Rouged Lips.'"

Display plenty of stills of the star and be sure to mention that Tom Moore is her leading man in the picture.

DEFIES COMPETITION

"Strangers of the Night," an adaption of the international stage success, "Captain Applejack," is an example of the really great pictures to be produced by Louis B. Mayer for Metro.

It will stand up against the strongest kind of competition. This was proved by the remarkable runs enjoyed by Walter Hackett's play.

'Let's Build'—The Spat Family Series—Pathe

A Really Ludicrous Comedy
Type of production... 2 reel comedy
"Let's Build," is the first of Hal Spat's new comedy series, which deals with the troubles of "the Spat family." This family consists of father and sister, and sister's foppish English husband, who without doubt gives one of the funniest comedy characterizations seen on the screen this season. Don't miss this one. Its laughs are spontaneous and sure-fire. The efforts of the ill-assorted family to construct a mail-order bungalow, in a manner in which the husband always gets the worst of the different attempts, and finally the real humor of the situation which develops as the building progresses and the house slowly approaches some semblance to dwelling place and then the final crash as the entire building collapses when the automobile, which has been parked beneath it is removed is enough to shake chuckles from the most seasoned movie-goer.

"Is Conan Doyle Right?"—Pathe

Comely and Interestingly Different
Type of production 2 reel educational novelty
This two reeler, "Is Conan Doyle Right?" gives an interesting fashion number of the methods used by fake spiritulists or so-called mediums in obtaining money from credulous persons who thoroughly believe that they have been put in touch with departed spirits. Aside from the novelty of the reel, the subject matter is such that it will, in all probability, cause discussion amongst your patrons and that is always good. There is no definite plot, but rather a series of different glimpses into dances which are being held and even the tricks which have been employed to obtain the effect of spirit pictures, etc., are explained. A novelty that should go well where "something different" is desired.

"Back to Earth"—Century-Universal

Reverting, Amusing, Freaky Comedy
Type of production... 2 reel comedy
Here's a trick comedy that will send your crowd out happy. It deals with the adventures of a slick pair of real estate birds who have a house that flies through the air or can be lifted anywhere with a tractor, and of course the crooks try to sell it again and again only to pull it away and re-sell it to another victim. The reel is full of trick mechanical devices, some of which are new. While most of the comedy is more or less top worn still it is amusing and the average crowd will like it. There are several particularly good shots which will bring big laughs. A pretty good picture of its type and kind. Good for your house.

Pathe Review No. 35

A Good Magazine Reel
Type of production... 1 reel magazine
Some exceedingly cute shots of young animals open this review under the title of "Fur-coat Babies." The shots are surrounded by a picture frame with exceedingly good effect. Another novel subject is a demonstration of the art of making Japanese prints from wood block carvings. Some interesting close-up views of birds feeding their young; a section devoted to views of the wild tribesmen of Formosa and a Pathe color bit showing the beauties of Niagara complete the issue.

"False Alarm"—Max Fleischer "Inkwell" Cartoon

A Clever Number
Type of production... 1 reel cartoon
This latest Fleischer cartoon is well up to the standard set by his previous issues. "False Alarm" is a clever cartoon number that should fit well on any program. Fleischer's clown performs numerous tricks such as rolling a cigarette and playing fireman. The latter half of the cartoon has some good laughs especially in the bit where the clown goes to put out a fire in a jail, breaks the window, allows the inmates to escape and then discovers the smoke only came from a convict's pipe. The clown meets with his usual fate, that of being put back into the ink bottle to prevent further mischief.

"Jollywood"—Universal

Fairly Amusing
Type of production... 2 reel comedy
Although Chuck Reisner, the star of this Universal two-reeler, is made to act unnecessarily stupid, particularly in his trip to the cinema city and its studios, there probably will be many who will find it good, lively entertainment. Reisner is seen as the star reporter on "The Morning Mist." He is sent to "Jollywood"—why the correct name of the city was not employed is not obvious—to get some "good stories." He "butts in" at inopportune moments where scenes are being shot with final disastrous results to himself.

"Hard Luck Jack"—Universal

Good Western
Type of production... 2 reel western
Directed by Jay Marchant and starring Pete Morrison, "Hard Luck Jack" manages to get through two reels in pleasing, entertaining fashion. To be sure, there isn't very much suspense but there is plenty of light comedy, good riding and a pleasing hero and heroine. Not very novel in plot but sufficiently good entertainment for the average house. The usual rustlers, are there, this time rustling the hero's clothes while he is in swimming, but they get their just deserts at the finish, so it all ends in the regulation manner.

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

What A Week!

AN INTERESTING QUESTION

If all these big pictures could be scattered over the entire coming season it might be an easy problem to work out. But can you see the distributors setting back and making such an arrangement? Can you see exhibitors arranging their schedules so the play dates on these big ones don't conflict? Can you? I can't.

Rather what will happen will be something like this: a wild scramble for play dates. The quicker booked the quicker the return. And if some one don't get hurt in this scramble—well, someone is guessing wrong, that's all.

Would it be good business for the distributors of these big ones to get together and arrange a schedule?

Would it be good business for competing exhibitors to talk over play dates for these big ones?

It would.

Because otherwise conflicting play dates will rob everyone of what they are entitled to. These big pictures will do the industry more good in one season than anything that otherwise could be accomplished. But doing good for the industry at a cost of hundreds of thousands of dollars while ethically splendid is financially rotten. And you can't pay bank loans with ethics.

BOOKING TROUBLES

Of course these big pictures must get big money back. The exhibitor must pay. But here is an instance of prices being asked: A mid west exhibitor in a town of 10,000 running the best show. He opens his books. That's the kind of a man he is. Shows his costs and profits. Usually runs a four day and a three day show. Top price paid usually $400 to $450 for four days. Paid $750 for "Robin Hood" and barely came through playing it five days.

What do you think he is being asked for one of the big pictures just released? Imagine this—$2,000.

He has thrown up his hands. Says it isn't in the cards. And if the distributor thinks so let him—the distributor—guarantee him against a loss. Then he will play.

Is this unreasonable? It doesn't seem so. There isn't anything "under cover." The books are open. With a $50,000 investment in building and equipment his total profits, including his living, last year totaled under $18,000.

He shouldn't be asked to take all of the gamble. That's where the right kind of a percentage deal would work splendidly.

This condition only speeds up what is eventually coming—a decent form of percentage.

And this man's name is Legion. Otherwise Mister Average Exhibitor.

THE HONOR ROLL

Adolph Zukor and Jesse Lasky for "The Covered Wagon."

William R. Hearst for "Enemies of Women" and "Little Old New York."

Charles H. Duell, Jr., for "The White Sister."

Mary Pickford for "Rosita."

Carl Laemmle for "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," and "Merry-Go-Round."

William Fox for "If Winter Comes."

Louis B. Mayer for "Strangers of the Night."

Arthur S. Friend for "The Green Goddess."

Joseph Schenck for "Ashes of Vengeance."

L. J. Selznick for "Rupert of Hentzau."

There have been a number of other excellent pictures, too many to enumerate but the above stand out far and away.

And best of all there are more to come—a lot more.

PRODUCING WOES ELIMINATED

No one happier about this than Sol Lesser. Whose series of insect pictures "Secrets of Life" will be released by Educational. Says Sol: "Producing these pictures is wonderful. You have no troubles with stars. Or directors. Or technical men. Oh, boy; it's lovely."

MANY A TRUE WORD, ETC.

The funny column of The Boston Transcript carries this: "So your movie theater musicians have struck for more money."

"Yes, they say they are unable to live in the style they are accustomed to seeing on the screen."

DANNY.

Minneapolis—Following is an article which appears in the editorial section of "Greater Amusements."

"Maybe, Oh hope of hopes, the edict will go further and call a halt on personal appearances of stars. This system of bunking the public has caused a sharp reaction to box office receipts. The place for the star is in the studio. The place for the public to learn about motion picture players and motion picture making is in the motion picture theatre. When this truth is realized fully, there will be less antagonism toward the motion picture industry, more appreciation for motion pictures generally."

WELL!

By DANNY

What's one man's joy. Is for another—using "Moe" Finklestein's pet word — "p'isen." Which has something to do with "Doc" Riesenfeld's pleasure, and Moe Mark's pain. Because the "Doc" put one over on the Strand crowd. Booking Norma's "Ashes of Vengeance" for the Rivoli and Rialto. First time since First National was formed that one of Norma's played anywhere but the Strand.

And they do say that "Ashes of Vengeance" brought more for this two week run than any picture ever played at these houses.

"PURITAN PASSIONS"

Shown outside of Boston. A Film Guild picture, released by Hodkinson. Unusual to the extreme, witchcraft, old New England atmosphere, Puritans, trick photography and another with an unhappy ending. Don't know whether the crowd will like it; but if they do they'll rave. Extremely different—a sort of "Dr. Caligari" and "R. U. R." thrown together. Will stand a lot of exploitation. Needs it. Also needs cutting. Frank Tuttle has directed a fine job. Osgood Perkins as "Old Nick"—the Devil—steals the picture from Glenn Hunter and pretty Mary Astor.

Griffith Happy

At the opening of "The White Sister," David Wark Griffith, tutor, guide and mentor of Lillian Gish, was profoundly moved by her work. Twice during the premiere he expressed to me his admiration of the splendid work of Miss Gish. He seemed tremendously happy over her splendid work, and her success.

"Twenty One," Barthelme's Latest
"Twenty One," is the definite title given Richard Barthelme's latest for First National release.

Lynch Back

S. A. Lynch returned from abroad unexpectedly on Saturday and hurried to Asheville to attend the funeral services of his father.

Nearly 150 Entries

In for Fall Film Golf Tournament—Prizes Donated—Handicap Plan May be Changed

Something like 150 entries—and promises of entries—are in for the Fall Film Golf Tournament, to be held tomorrow a week. If all who have promised come, something like 250 golfers and goofers will be on hand at Belleclaire, Bayside, for the final event of the season. And if the Fall affair is as successful as the Spring event—well, it should be good.

Several donors of prizes, other than the old stand-bys appear for this event. "Jimmy" Quirk, the enterprising publisher of "Photoplay," has offered a handsome cup; "Watty" Rothacker, of the Rothacker Laboratories, has also offered a cup, and Jack Cosman, the energetic young man who deals in Agfa stock, and is otherwise interested in the industry, has also donated a cup. Then, of course, there will be the usual cups from the patrons of former events—The Motion Picture News, Warner Brothers, Reuben Samuels, Pathe, and Jules Mastbaum, and in addition THE FILM DAILY will offer a cup in addition to the special trophy which must be won three times for possession.

There is some talk of the Committee changing the basis of handicapping for the Fall play in view of the dissatisfaction which exists in a few places, over the former plan. Of this, more later.

There will be scores of special prizes; the usual burlesque prizes and a regular fine party.

If you haven't sent in your entry do it. Do it now. This minute. While you think of it.

Griffith's Next

A Big Revolutionary Film With a Big Idea Behind It Suggested by the D. A. R.

It developed on Saturday that the Daughters of the Revolution, one of the strongest patriotic organizations of this country, was tremendously concerned in the making of D. W. Griffith's next, which will show the founding of the American Government.

Correspondence passing between Mrs. Cook, president of the D. A. R., Mrs. Nash, regent of New York, and Griffith, was made public by the Hays office and indicates the import and seriousness of the film, the scenario of which will be prepared by Anthony Paul Kelly.

The Committee on Public Relations of the Hays office is actively interested in the film.

Famous Will Concentrate Important Officials in Chief Office—Have Only Bookers at Southern Points

Famous Players will concentrate all executive work of its Southern houses, formerly the Lynch chain, in the New York offices, directly under the jurisdiction of Harold B. Franklin. This means that Dan Michaelove, in charge of the Atlanta office, will come to New York, approximately Oct. 1st, and a number of switches of minor executives at Southern points will follow.

Bookers will be established at many points, but all accounting and other work in conjunction with the operation of the chain will be handled in the New York office.

What's In a Name?

Shakespeare wanted to know it. So does the Goldwyn Pictures Corp., who have brought their long expected suit against Samuel Goldwyn to restrain him from using his name in connection with the release of pictures. The corporation claims over $2,400,000 has been spent exploiting the name of the corporation, and asks for a preliminary injunction to restrain the former president of Goldwyn with regard to his new productions, "Potash and Perlmutter" and "The Eternal City."

Goldwyn could not be reached for a statement on Saturday.

'OTHER MEN'S DAUGHTERS'

OTHER Men's Daughters, a feature produced and directed by Ben Wilson, is added proof that good sense is more important than millions and sincerity of purpose, greater than artificial display.

In this picture, which will be released by the Grand-Asher Distributing Corporation early in October, may be seen the harmonious combination of an excellent story from the pen of a famous novelist, fine acting by distinguished stars, inspirational directing and extremely artistic production.

Because Evelyn Campbell, wrote "Other Men's Daughters" with a vivid, human appeal, that interest has been preserved in its screen edition. Nowhere is there the lavish and gaudy show which taxes, too greatly, the mind of the observer.

No awe-inspiring sum was spent upon production nor were all the greatest and most famous stars of screendom cast for this picture. It is neither weird nor grotesque.

Yet nothing of effort or money has been spared to make "Other Men's Daughters" a perfect creation.

With Bryant Washburn and Mabel Forrest in the leading roles, brilliant and satisfying acting is assured. And all that can be added to a picture by the assembling of an accomplished supporting cast is here in evidence.

Released by the Grand-Asher Distributing Corporation at 15 West Forty-fourth street, New York City. Foreign Rights Controlled by the Apollo Trading Corporation, 1600 Broadway, New York City.
